Selected by Henry T. Hopkins
Director, Fort Worth Art Center-Museum and by Van Deren Coke
Chairman, Department of Art,
The University of New Mexico

Jurying any exhibition of contemporary art is both rewarding and difficult — especially at a time when new materials and concepts have opened the doors wide to a whole range of visual expression not previously available.

I have looked for those works that are fresh and alive, which appear to evolve from a serious creative input and which reflect an awareness of the artist's position in contemporary society. Finally, technical facility was taken into account.

The San Antonio Art League exhibition is a good one in that a number of works met these specifications and I think that you should feel pleased at the increasing signs of creative growth in the San Antonio area.

Henry T. Hopkins

The overall quality of the entries submitted for the 39th San Antonio Artist's Exhibition was high for a regional show of this kind. The works finally selected for exhibition would compare favorably with the paintings and sculpture being done in large metropolitan centers. The artists of San Antonio are well aware of the major directions being taken by contemporary art. There were first-rate examples of work in most of the styles being explored by venturesome artists today. I was disappointed that there were not more drawings and prints submitted. The work submitted in the various areas of the crafts was not as interesting or as numerous as were the submissions in painting. This led to an exhibition which gives great emphasis to painting, for it was in this field that I found the most stimulating work.

Statement of the Juror

It was gratifying to find the quality of work of San Antonio artists to be very high. Most of the current styles and techniques were represented in the hundreds of art works submitted for the exhibition. This diversification is reflected in the winning selections and in those chosen for exhibit.

It must be understood that these selections represent only the choice of one individual — one who is by profession a painter rather than a judge. I did try to select works which I felt expressed the artist's ideas strongly and convincingly in a form denoting both creativity and excellence.

Many additional paintings which were submitted might have been qualified had there been more space for the exhibit. A rejection, therefore, in no way invalidates the quality of the artist's work.

In the final analysis, I honestly feel that an artist should be seen and not heard. Therefore, let the works chosen speak for themselves.

ANNUAL

FOREWORD

The Fifth April Art Annual Exhibition is proud to present to its viewers the works representing forty-eight artists. We feel it depicts an apparent growth in quality, which is what it is all about. From 207 entries, sixty-eight pieces were selected to make up the exhibition that includes seven award winners and five honorable mentions.

We feel extremely grateful to have had Ralph White and John Cates as Jurors for this exhibition.

The Hill Country Art Foundation should like to take this opportunity to express appreciation to its many benefactors, beginning with its participating artists, and the numerous friends and patrons whose donations made this exhibition possible and stimulated the creativity of the exhibitors. This is an important factor in this production, and we thank them. Also, our special thanks go to the volunteer helpers in receiving, moving and technically managing the exhibition.

STATEMENT OF THE JURORS

In the paintings and works of art we viewed for this exhibition, we found a great variety of different visual concepts within each category. Particularly the watercolor entries were noticeably high in their concepts. Originality and technical skills were fundamental considerations and we found high quality in these

JURORS' STATEMENT

The purpose of such an exhibition as the 9th Annual Art Exhibit of the Hill Country Arts Foundation are two-fold. On the one hand it identifies outstanding quality, and then, equally important, it encourages participation in the arts. Thus the juror must be flexible, realizing that it would be defeating to apply absolutely rigid standards. We want people to participate in the arts, to create it and appreciate it, and this exhibition should stimulate the artist in each of us.

A special thank you to the Hill Country Arts Foundation Ladies Auxiliary for all the work they did in helping to make the exhibit a success.

SAAI

52nd ANNUAL ARTISTS EXHIBITION 1982

Jurying an art exhibition is at best a fragile undertaking. For every painting that is accepted, there are usually many more rejected; and the juror cannot help but feel the excitement of approval, and the disappointment of rejection. However, I must say that as a painter who has allowed his work to be judged, I have learned to temper that enthusiasm or disappointment with the knowledg that no jury every made me a better painter or dampened my art spirit.

When I view a great body of art work I am primarily concerned with letting individual art works speak to me. It may be a delicate combination of originality, personality, or a unique presentation of painterly skills which reaches my intellect and my intuition at the same time. Painting styles and idioms do not inhibit my judgment, since my personal love for art transcends all aspects of expression.

My method of judging is quite simply to select out of a large body of works those that meet the above criteria on the first impression. If that number does not satisfy the need to complete an exhibition, I go back over the work and select those paintings which may speak more softly and separate them from those that do not speak at all. Usually the most important works have been culled by this time and often any prize selections have already been discovered. Before such decisions are made, however, I enjoy going over the entire group of entries one more time to reaffirm my first and second impressions and to avoid any possible mistake. I would repeat that originality of expression counts more than competent stylistic imitation.

ANNUAL

is pleased to present its 10th ANNUAL JURIED ARTS EXHIBITION. This exhibit presents works representing 105 artists from Texas and other states. In the ten years that this event has occurred, the quality of art work has ever increased. This year's exhibition continues that tradition, thanks to our excellent Juror, Arthur Turner.

HCAF wishes to take this opportunity to express appreciation to its many benefactors, beginning with its participating artists and the numerous friends and patrons whose support has helped to make this exhibition possible. Our special thanks goes to the volunteer helpers in receiving and moving, and to the Hill Country Arts Foundation Ladies Auxiliary for the lovely opening reception.

A Cecille Crow painting is a voyage of discovery, first for the artist as she slowly, thoughtfully creates it, and second for the spectator as he carefully unravels its mysteries, all the while ravished by its beauties.

The artist explains that she starts with no preconceived notions, and that the painting evolves itself. Her work is to take the accidental and give it form, meaning and style. She starts with a surface roughly scumbled in with acrylics, and then sharpened as she finds forms revealing themselves. From a wondrous box of scraps of butcher's paper, (earlier textured or painted with rich colors and torn into then meaningless shapes and now awaiting assignment), she selects the ones that may have pictorial significance. It is a private puzzle, sometimes solved and sometimes discarded. Mrs. Crow works on several collages at one time, waiting until the right "accident" happens. When the composition and mood reach a satisfactory state it may be further painted on, given accents of luminous pastel as she feels necessary. But this is no binding procedure, and steps may be omitted, or reversed, or whatever, as the picture needs and as the artist desires.

The result is, of course an abstraction, but never a formal, simply decorative one. Frequently an horizon establishes itself, and the moon appears in many guises, as do waves, clouds and great rocks. They are abstract landscapes of no known world, uninhabited, astral landscapes if you wish. Some small examples, with their surfaces of suggested jewels, bear close relationship to the gorgeous, occult passages in Persian miniatures.

The pervading impression first is of magnificent colors: saturated red, blues and magentas. "If they were to take away my orange, I could not paint," she says. Then, I think, one is cognizant of the strong, complex forms she has orchestrated, so that each painting assumes its own sonority and finality. And always one recognizes her exquisite taste, evidencing itself in scale and balance, in controlled power, and in the startling but delicious harmonies of color.

One does not need any metaphysical explanations. Her fondness for poetry, for Whitman and certain east Indian poets, is irrelevant in the face of the visual impact of her work. Cecille Crow has long been an accomplished painter, but it is in the last decade and a half that she has fully matured, creating a style and a language uniquely hers.

She is a private, reflective artist, and a profoundly original one, charting a passage through her own radiant landscapes.

Hill Country Arts Foundation

is pleased to present its 11th ANNUAL JURIED ARTS EXHIBITION. This exhibit presents works representing 56 artists from Texas and from ten other states. In the eleven years that this event has occurred, the quality of art has ever increased. This year's exhibition continues that tradition, thanks to our participating artists and to our excellent juror, Otis Lumpkin.

STATEMENT OF THE JUROR

In general, works in this competition show a great deal of technical expertise. Selecting thirteen outstanding works of art from this grouping was particularly difficult because the difference in quality became so miniscule that my personal preference had to be considered. As I left, I was particularly happy and I felt proud of the works hanging in this exhibit..

BEVERLY WEISS

A commercial artist for 16 years, Mrs. Weiss has studied at the Traphagen School of Design, New York; the Dallas Museum of Fine Arts; Austin College, Sherman, Texas; and at the San Antonio Art Institute, where she currently is studying.

Her work has been exhibited twice in the Texas Painting and Sculpture Show at the Dallas Museum of Fine Arts; Annual State Citation Show, Laguna Gloria Art Museum, Austin; Texas Fine Arts Association Invitational; and in the 17th, 20th and 21st annual Texas Watercolor Exhibition at the Witte Museum, San Antonio. She also has participated in group shows at the McNay Art Museum and at the San Antonio Art Institute.

She has won awards in exhibitions of the Texas Fine Arts Association for the past four years; in the 1970 Texas Watercolor Society Exhibition; the Rio Grande Art Fiesta, Laredo; and in the 36th Annual Local Artist's Exhibition at the Witte Museum.

SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS

BERYL BAIRD

A student of Assistant Professor Robert Tiemann in the Trinity University art department, Mrs. Baird also has studied at the San Antonio Art Institute.

Her work is included in a number of private collections in London, Los Angeles and San Antonio. She has participated recently in the San Antonio Artist's Exhibition and in the Texas Fine Arts Regional Show, Region 13.

CECILLE CROW

Formerly a fashion illustrator and free-lance artist, Mrs. Crow has studied painting with Assistant Professor Robert Tiemann of the Trinity University art department; at the San Antonio Art Institute; and with Xavier Gonzales, Hugo Pohn and John Wilson. She also has studied ceramics under Harding Black, John Swiss Porter and Bernard Leach.

Her work has been exhibited during the past five years in the Texas State Watercolor Show; San Antonio Artist's Exhibition; Texas Fine Arts Association State and Regional shows (citation award winner, 1969 Regional Exhibition, Region 13); Rio Grande Art Fiesta (honorable mention); and the Texas Lutheran College Federal Grant Visual Arts Series.

RUTH TAYLOR THEATER GALLERIES

RITA LAWRENCE

Mrs. Lawrence received the Bachelor of Science degree, 1961, Mount Mary College, Milwaukee, Wisconsin; Master of Education, 1970, Our Lady of The Lake College, San Antonio; and has studied painting, life drawing and portrait painting at the San Antonio Art Institute for the past four years.

Her work has been exhibited in the San Antonio Artist's Exhibition; Texas Fine Arts Association State and Region 13 shows; and in group shows at the McNay Art Museum. Awards include a citation and circuit award in the 1969 Texas Fine Arts Association Region 13 show.

The exhibition from across the state represents a wide variety of directions in style and content. It may be noted that many of the best works are small in scale and executed in watercolor. Some of the visual statements are almost bombastic, others are timid, while still others are honestly primitive. It appears the search for personal symbols strongly flavors the exhibition and indicates a general lack of interest in national and international art movements.

STATEMENT OF THE JURORS

This show appeals to me as being a diverse if not disparate display all of which suggests something of the nature of American art and of the Exhibition itself. Considering the complex method of selection—juried shows at the local level, bringing selected works together in a larger exhibition—the chances for the establishment of a "Regional" tendency seem unlikely. And this is a healthy climate for Texas art.

The varied look of the show reflects the confusion that characterizes art and life today. Most people who are art oriented are aware that art is in a state of change. Artists are reaching out, searching, exploring, succeeding, failing. The works present offer visual testimony of these ideas.

Joseph A. Cain, FRSA Chairman
Department of Art
Del Mar College

As jurors we have indicated our agreed upon choices of the better works in those previously selected regional exhibitions. The one criterion of excellence, in whatever medium or mode, was fundamental and constant in the judging.

Characteristic of today's state of the visual arts, many styles and attitudes are indeed in this exhibition. This is a healthy sign of today's unprovincial attitude of Texas artists.

Speaking for myself, I must first be moved by the work before me. It must invite me into its environs. Next, if it holds forth some sort of promise, I enter into the work. And then, if it fulfills this promise to a high degree, I feel the work has succeeded. Many of the works in this exhibition have succeeded for me and my recorded judgments are my way of indicating that experience. It is now up to all other viewers to have their own experiences with these works, and to make their own judgments.

Professor at Large
University of Texas

The Unorganized Painters of Trees and Other Mysteries

"If I spend my hard-earned American dollars for a painting of a tree, I don't want to have to guess what it is."

When thirty professional San Antonio artists banded together thirty years ago to form The Contemporary Artists Group, the major raison d'être was to show that there is more than one way to paint a tree without skiving on art patron. In those days, opportunities to exhibit were not plentiful. Through the CAG, local artists wanted to establish exhibition venues that would provide the viewing public with a chance to see the work of creative people in our area.

What really made the CAG unusual was the fact that the members planned from the beginning to be free statufans. They wanted little organizational structure and as few meetings as possible. They were far more interested in Robert's paintings than in Robert's rules.

During three decades, CAG members have hung together in spirit and, as a result, have hung together in many places. Now with this exhibition at the McNay Art Institute, the CAG has reached its apogee. Through this distinguished showcase, the CAG conveys to its audience, along with its appreciation, the request to keep looking in addition. The unorganized painters of trees and other mysteries promise to keep painting entities in ways that are both familiar and, more importantly, in ways you have never seen before.
