

WESTIN HOTELS

Thank you

Update

September 17, 1981

JUDGING TO BEGIN ON NAME-THE-LUNCHROOM CONTEST

Corporate Communications has received about 50 entries in the name-the-lunchroom contest.

An employee judging panel of a dozen people will meet on Friday, September 18, to pare those 50 down to 10.

Then, on Monday, September 21, a celebrity panel consisting of Ivar Haglund, Wayne Cody and a Seattle Business Journal restaurant reviewer will pick the winning name from those top 10 employee choices.

You're all invited to have lunch with the celebrities, and then stay for the announcement of the winning name.

The $100, $25 and $10 checks will be presented to the first, second and third place "namers" during the ceremonies.

The whole affair should get underway between 11:30 and noon, with the judges' selection announced around 1:30 p.m.

WHAT A DEAL

The Space Needle Restaurant is closing the end of September. And as a special "good-bye" treat to all Westin employees, the restaurant is making us an offer that's hard to refuse.

Through September 28 we may eat lunch and dinner at the Needle for half price. And we may bring friends and family, too.

All we need to do is call for reservations, and then be prepared to pay with either cash or check.

FREIGHT ELEVATORS

You may already have noticed that the south-east elevator in the elevator lobby of each floor is slightly larger than the other three.

And you may have also noticed that when you "call" an elevator by pressing the up or down button on one of two control panels located in the center of the elevator lobbies, that you don't ever get this elevator.

That's because this particular car is designated as a freight elevator, and it has a separate control panel. That panel is located on the end wall, next to the freight elevator.

Not only is this car larger, but it also stops on floor 2 where the loading dock is located.

Anyone may use this elevator whether you are delivering freight or not. And if you need to get to the second floor, you'll have to ride this car, since it's the only one that stops there.

SOME LUNCHROOM NOTES...

As you reach for your daily donut, you've probably noticed the little sign that asks us to please consume our treat in a lunchroom--only liquid refreshments are allowed at desks.

It's signed, "Your favorite donut."

It's true; according to our employee guidelines, we should not be eating at our desks.

Also, Nick Layne, our lunchroom attendant, would like to remind us all to keep the china, cups and silverware in the lunchroom. Once it "gets away" it's hard to locate again...

September 17, 1981

JUDGING TO BEGIN ON NAME-THE-LUNCHROOM CONTEST

Corporate Communications has received about 50 entries in the name-the-lunchroom contest.

An employee judging panel of a dozen people will meet on Friday, September 18, to pare those 50 down to 10.

Then, on Monday, September 21, a celebrity panel consisting of Ivar Haglund, Wayne Cody and a Seattle Business Journal restaurant reviewer will pick the winning name from those top 10 employee choices.

You're all invited to have lunch with the celebrities, and then stay for the announcement of the winning name.

The $100, $25 and $10 checks will be presented to the first, second and third place "namers" during the ceremonies.

The whole affair should get underway between 11:30 and noon, with the judges' selection announced around 1:30 p.m.

WHAT A DEAL

The Space Needle Restaurant is closing the end of September. And as a special "good-bye" treat to all Westin employees, the restaurant is making us an offer that's hard to refuse.

Through September 28 we may eat lunch and dinner at the Needle for half price. And we may bring friends and family, too.

All we need to do is call for reservations, and then be prepared to pay with either cash or check.

FREIGHT ELEVATORS

You may already have noticed that the southeast elevator in the elevator lobby of each floor is slightly larger than the other three.

And you may have also noticed that when you "call" an elevator by pressing the up or down button on one of two control panels located in the center of the elevator lobbies, that you don't ever get this elevator.

That's because this particular car is designated as a freight elevator, and it has a separate control panel. That panel is located on the end wall, next to the freight elevator.

Not only is this car larger, but it also stops on floor 2 where the loading dock is located.

Anyone may use this elevator whether you are delivering freight or not. And if you need to get to the second floor, you'll have to ride this car, since it's the only one that stops there.

SOME LUNCHROOM NOTES...

As you reach for your daily donut, you've probably noticed the little sign that asks us to please consume our treat in a lunchroom--only liquid refreshments are allowed at desks.

It's signed, "Your favorite donut."

It's true; according to our employee guidelines, we should not be eating at our desks.

Also, Nick Layne, our lunchroom attendant, would like to remind us all to keep the china, cups and silverware in the lunchroom. Once it "gets away" it's hard to locate again...