H. E. WALKER PARTY (Cont'd.)

Some of the "priceless" items given Walker included: a crystal ball for his new assignment; a "call-up" file that looked more like a barber's pole; a Beatle wig along with a "music appreciation" record; and a welding umbrella. On the more serious side, Refinery Manager L. T. Wilson handled the presentation of gifts of another sort including a water color painting, a clock-radio, a suitcase, and a scroll containing the names of some 450 Refinery friends.

In his farewell remarks, Walker thanked fellow Refinery employees for the friendship and warm associations of the past 2½ years, and for "memories I'll never forget".
