Campus food service agrees to reverse recent price hikes

By NORA SHERIDAN
Special to The Daily Cougar

Professional Food Management will rescind the price increases that it initiated Sept. 1. The campus food service had made the increases without the approval of the university.

Prices will be rolled back to 1981 levels effective Oct. 18.

"The six items on which price increases occurred will be reduced five to 10 cents. They will be the same prices they were last year," Myles Carroll, director of PFM at the University of Houston, said.

In a University Center Policy Board meeting Thursday, board member Neal Roper said, "Carroll initiated the increases under the instruction of PFM's regional manager, Susan Bamesberger. PFM made its decision because it thought the increases would be approved."

Roper said the increases raised PFM's income approximately $50 per day.

Roper presented a report from the policy board food committee, of which he is chairman. The committee recommended that "no action be taken as a result of the Food Service's actions regarding price increases."

The committee also recommended that "the Food Service in the future come to the Food Committee and then in turn to the University Center Policy Board with full documentation regarding their requests."

Roper said, "PFM originally presented their increase proposal to the board in May of this year. The board decided there was insufficient information, and asked PFM to provide another proposal with more information."

PFM complied, but the board denied the increase request. "Myles Carroll went directly to the vice chancellor of finance, the new one — (Paul) Brace. He didn't feel he'd been here long enough to make the decision, so he went to Osborne. Osborne went to Bill Scott; then he sent it back to the policy board," Roper said.

Gerald Osborne is interim vice chancellor, dean of students. Bill Scott is manager of the UC.

The board decided to stand on its original decision to deny the increase.

Credit for blood

By MARK BAKER
Special to The Daily Cougar

The idea of receiving extra credit on final exams is not a new one, but a University of Houston physics professor has given it an interesting twist.

Students in Dr. Lawrence S. Pinsky's astronomy class will receive an extra 2 percent added onto their final grade if they donated blood at this week's drive. Students who attempted to give blood, but were refused, will also receive credit.

"The credit is not aimed to hurt those who don't give blood. I'm going to calculate the class curve before the end of the class, and then the extra credit will kick in on the final exam. I would anticipate that maybe 10 people will ultimately get a different grade than they would have normally. The grade changes would not be that radical, either. Someone's grade might change from a low 'C' to a 'C,'" Pinsky said.

"I just felt that it was a worthy cause. Blood will always be needed. You can't just throw money at the problem. You can't just say 'Here, I'll donate $100. Go buy some blood.' There are no stores to buy blood. It's floating around inside you people. You never know when you may need it someday," he said.

The College Libertarians want students to exchange ideas on different issues of the day in bi-monthly group discussions they are sponsoring.

The first discussion-study group will be held on Tuesday, Oct. 26 at 4 p.m. in the University Center. A room will be announced at a later date. Interested persons and campus organizations are invited to discuss English anti-militarist tradition.

"The main purpose of these discussion-study sessions is to promote the interchange of ideas on different issues between students," James Williams, vice president of the University of Houston group said.

Fund review group still working on report

Revision of the student service fee allocation process continued Thursday at a meeting of the committee that is reviewing the mechanism for funding campus groups.

Although changes in the committee's report are still being made, the report will be submitted to Interim Chancellor Hugh Walker by the end of this month, said Carl Chain, chairman of the committee.

Chain, who is Students' Association president, said the philosophy and committee composition sections of the report are complete, but added that the document is still in the draft stage and nothing has been finalized.

Chain said the Student Service Fee Planning and Allocation Review Committee is still drafting the "funding mechanism" of the allocation process. The committee is still examining the two-tiered allocation process under which some groups obtain money from the Student Service Fee Planning and Allocation Committee and some request funds from the Organizational Funding Board.

The process review committee was established in June by then-chancellor Barry Munitz following the controversy surrounding student service fee allocations made last February. Munitz charged the committee with proposing a revised allocation process.

The committee's members are Chain; Connie Wallace, assistant vice chancellor, associate dean of students; Paul Brace, associate vice chancellor for financial affairs; Alex Ignatiev, professor of physics; and Steve Meisgeier, Interfraternity Council president. Suzanne Demchak, staff assistant in the chancellor's office, serves as staff support.

The committee will convene again Oct. 19.

Chain will appoint Adams att'y general

By MICHAEL MONSON
of The Daily Cougar staff

Students' Association President Carl Chain has announced his intention to appoint Nat Adams as SA attorney general.

The announcement was made Thursday night at a meeting of the SA judicial branch.

Nat Adams is a former president of the Texas Students' Association and ran unsuccessfully last spring for the position of student representative to the University of Houston System Board of Regents.

Chain said he would make the appointment at the next SA

Senate meeting on Monday night. The appointment is contingent on the approval of two-thirds of the Senate.

The regular process would mean an appointment to the office of student defenders by the SA president, an interview with SA campus governance committee and, after a favorable or unfavorable recommendation by the committee, the confirmation by two thirds of the Senate.

Amendments to the SA bylaws require a two-thirds vote of the Senate and must take the form of either a Senate or a University Bill.

Libertarians will sponsor forums on current events, their ideologies like to get different campus organizations involved in these sessions in order to present different viewpoints on current events and liberal issues, Williams said. "The College Libertarians are only sponsoring this event. We won't have libertarians pre-empting discussions."

The sessions will be in forum and debate form with the exclusion of speakers, he said. "We want the students to interact with each other."

Sessions will alternate between the discussion of current events and discussion of libertarian ideas, Williams said that in the latter discussion sessions, there is no need for prior knowledge of the discussion subject. An introduction on the subject will be given. The College Libertarians will also provide a reading list on the topic to be discussed.

Current issues the College Libertarians would like to discuss, Williams said, include nuclear disarmament; the Middle East; the economy; abortion; U.S. foreign policy; race relations; feminism vs. the traditional role of women; the insanity plea; and the draft. An additional issue under consideration is the controversy concerning Cibco Co. and its Tecate and Carta Blanca beer ads published in The Daily Cougar.

Libertarian ideas to be discussed include the issue of natural rights, the history of liberal anti-war thought, and the foundations of the Austrian school of economics.

On Campus

Lawndale exhibit to start Sat.

The University of Houston central campus Lawndale Alternative is hosting a traveling exchange exhibit of 30 works done by graduate students from UH; the Maryland Institute, College of Art; and the Art Institute of Chicago, from Oct. 16 through Nov. 6. The exhibit opening is Saturday from 7-10 p.m.

Gallery hours are from 10 a.m.-3 p.m., Tuesday through Saturday. The Lawndale Alternative is located at 5600 Hillman, at the corner of Lawndale and Dismuke.

For more information, call 749-4953.

New machine will aid blind

Blind and visually-impaired students at the University of Houston will have an easier time with their studies thanks to a gift from the Xerox Corporation.

UH is among 100 universities and colleges nationwide that have received a Kurzweil Reading Machine from Xerox.

This machine, valued at $30,000, greatly expands the accessibility of library resources to these students by reading aloud in a synthetic voice any English document, printed or typewritten. The machine may also be used as a talking calculator and full-word spoken output computer terminal.

Gerald Osborne, interim vice chancellor, dean of students, said UH was selected because of its active program of service and support for blind and visually-impaired students.

Brownbag workshops offered

The College of Technology will sponsor two brownbag workshops next week which will be open to interested students, faculty and staff.

On Oct. 18, the topic will be "How to Develop Skills to Use the Software for the Word Processing Center." Jay Wood of the Lanier Company will conduct the workshop.

On Oct. 20, the topic will be transparency preparation. Justin Mullenix of the 3M company will conduct the session.

Both workshops will be held from 12-1 p.m. in Room 323, Technology 2.

Misinterpretation

After reading the article on campus committees and their vacancies which appeared in the Thursday, Oct. 14, edition of The Daily Cougar, there appeared in it several misinterpreted statements. These statements occurred in the opening three paragraphs, in regards to the status of two committees, in particular Art Acquisition and Handicapped Advisory Council. These two committees are not in danger of being discontinued as a committee at all. My position does not give me the power to dissolve or discontinue any committee due to student apathy. Verbal communications can be mistranslated when put in written form. Thus, I hope there will not be any ill-will because of the misinterpretation. If there were, my apologies.

McDonald is referring to the article "13 campus committees still lacking members" on the front page of Thursday's Daily Cougar. The Daily Cougar regrets the error.

History lesson

Ghada Foty says that "Palestine belongs to the Palestinians as much as... America belongs to the Americans."

I am a native-born American, and I have studied American history since grade school, as the government requires. I understand that the vast majority of the American population is composed of immigrants from foreign countries, and America's land holdings have been amassed through purchase, war, expansionism, occupation, and outright theft.

By Ghada's standards, America belongs not to us, but to the French, the English, the Spanish, the Mexicans, and the native Amerindians.

Show of century's best art opens today

More than one hundred major works by 78 renowned 20th century artists are featured in an exhibit opening today at Congregation Beth Israel in Houston.

The exhibit, "Art of the 20th Century — A Revelation," is free and will be open through Oct. 24 at the Congregation, 5600 North Braeswood.

The exhibit of works by such artists as Chagall, Modigliani, Rothko, Frankenthaler and Soutine is divided into thematic areas — Biblical-Judaic, social commentary, and personal statements.

Each individual gallery is constructed of wooden frames and sheet rock, 14 feet high, with ceilings of fabric stretched over frames. Walls will be a neutral color with natural canvas roofing.

The gallery, built especially for the exhibit, has been designed by David Puckett, designer for the Falick-Klein Partnership, Inc.

Hours for the exhibit are Monday through Friday, 10 a.m.-5 p.m.; Saturdays and Sundays, 1-5 p.m. Private tours also are available.

Scores not all

The University of Houston may have new, tighter admissions standards if the Board of Regents approves the proposal that should come before them later this month.

An attempt to improve the overall quality of the student body at UH is fine, but care must be taken concerning which students will now be excluded. Unfortunately, large numbers of students at UH seem to have little motivation to learn. These individuals are a hindrance to both teachers and other students who are trying to obtain an education.

An adequate tightening of admissions should work toward ridding the university of those unmotivated students who are on the borderline academically. The policy should not be aimed at excluding those individuals who are earnest in their quest for an education, yet may not be particularly good test-takers.

The new policy would raise the requirements for Scholastic Aptitude Test scores, which are not always adequate indications of intellectual ability.

Although administration officials say the proposed changes will not greatly alter the ethnic makeup of the campus, Dr. Donald Norris, director of institutional studies, said that it may "be particularly rough on Asians" due to their difficulties with the English language.

With this in mind, admissions officials must place proper stress on qualitative factors in judging applicants with low test scores.

KELLEY GRIFFIN

War and daisies

When I see men on campus dressed like soldiers, I want to shake them to their senses. I want to make them feel terrible and silly for donning the trappings of war.

They look so confident of their manhood. After all, the starched uniform and spiffy black boots practically scream, "I'm a man." Even when women wear them.

If I see one of them coming, I start to wonder what one phrase I could utter that would make them say, "Golly, you're right. I ain't gonna study war no more."

But they go strutting by, thumbing their nose at me and my Peace Now button. They don't even notice the button that says Question Authority.

I know some of those people get involved in campus combat games because they are promised professional training, leadership positions and money. And it's not just a college curriculum. It's an adventure.

Fodder

All this to get people to become part of the war force. It bothers me that they don't see the big picture: Ultimately, they are fodder for whatever war machine gets cranked up in Washington.

I wonder if their coursework includes lessons on how to make sure Washington gets the nation into a "just" war.

Maybe the promise of being given officer status when the bombs start dropping makes them think they aren't vulnerable to war.

It's not so much a statement about them as it is about our military-minded society. But still, their involvement with the military establishment is justifying its existence, which leads to hurting everyone.

I've been laying awake at night trying to come up with that one ultimate plan that would open their eyes to the dangerous game they're playing.

Beads and bell-bottoms

Plan A: Wear lots of beads, flowers in my hair and bell-bottomed jeans; carry a handful of daisies and place one in the muzzle of one of their guns. Hum John Lennon's song "Give Peace a Chance."

I discarded plan A. I don't have any bell-bottomed jeans anymore and daisies are hard to find this time of year. Besides, the soldier boys don't carry guns yet. But other Vietnam-era tactics come to mind.

Plan B: Wrap myself in an American flag and chain myself to the ROTC office door. Hum John Lennon's song "Give Peace a Chance."

No, too radical. These people wouldn't respond to it.

Maybe they feel comfortable as soldiers around this campus, especially since people like me refrain from spitting on them or kicking their shins. They are likely going to get more than kicked shins if they ever have to fulfill the duty of their uniforms, so why do they swagger so assuredly?

Because Uncle Sam has them convinced war is not just a job. It's an adventure.

No student voices

Public radio and television stations choose professionals over students

By S. Timacheff

I would like to commend The Daily Cougar for its continuing success at being a "true voice" of the University of Houston student body; this is something the other "voices" of the university, namely KUHT television and KUHF-FM radio, have miserably failed to do.

Two years ago, I was a mass communications major at the university. During that time, I took a no-pay part-time job at KLOL-FM in Houston as a reporter. Later I applied as a disc FM laid off all non-paid employees! I was offered another shift (weekend graveyards) or nothing at all. I chose the latter. Several friends of mine had the same thing happen to them... laid off or offered an unreasonable shift. The reason? The program director told me they were trying to make a more professional "image" by hiring all of their on-air staff. Paid or not, by that time I had developed a relatively professional on-air sound... I was working for three stations! An additional burn was that at the time the layoff came, we had just finished another KUHF fund drive, which took hard work and long hours.

A semester or so passed, and I was in a communications class that covered radio. We were given a tour of the KUHF facilities (not of Channel 8, though) and were shown around. A suggestion was made to apply at the station for work if we were interested in being part of the program. At that time, the vast majority of the staff at KUHF was non-student. When I inquired about this, I was told that KUHF was still trying to maintain their "professional" image and had responsibilities to National Public Radio, and ratings, etc.

I think KUHF and KUHT (Channel 8) both have totally mixed up ideas of programming and staffing a university-affiliated broadcast station. I attended Southern Methodist University in Dallas, where the radio station was all student-operated and programmed. I have talked with several other students from other universities who say their stations are used and run by students. The Longhorn Radio Network at the University of Texas is one of the most developed and respected in the U.S.A. and is student-run. Commercial stations use their programming for public affairs programming. Alvin Community College's KACC-FM is student staffed. Why is UH different? Why are there no students working with the KUHT-TV programming when it is the first public TV station in the United States and claims to be part of the University of Houston? Why do seniors in mass communications have to participate in "Campus Workshop" at a local UHF station (commercial) instead of being able to use the facilities right here on campus? If you ask me, I think someone upstairs is out of their mind! Millions of dollars... university dollars... are poured into these "campus" facilities... but students derive no benefits from them!

I went on to work with another radio station, where I was the news director. All total, I spent more than four years working for radio, newspapers and magazines in various capacities. I am now the marketing coordinator of a computer firm in Houston, and I still attend the University of Houston, but I am a marketing major.

I do not wish to point my finger at any one person at the university for this gross negligence to its most valuable commodity (its students), but I do hope you will make this problem known. While I worked at KUHF-FM, I even had a former dean of the University of Houston, (who enjoyed listening to KUHF-FM), approach me about the problem. He wanted to pursue it all the way to the top of the school... but he is now at Rice. I know that Dr. David Brady is with this letter in spirit, however. Spirit is something totally lacking from either the radio or the TV station. I can appreciate the desire to be professional or to keep good ratings, but I can also appreciate the desire to create professionals who can cause good ratings because of their quality educations.

KUHF and KUHT both have mixed-up ideas of staffing.

The Daily Cougar continues to be the true "voice" of the university, in spite of any criticism. Keep up the good work!

Serge Timacheff is a marketing student at the University of Houston.

jockey at KUHF-FM with no mention of my association with the school. Once I was made a disc jockey, I realized and was surprised to find out that most everyone at KUHF-FM was not a student, but a paid employee!

That summer, I went to work as a reporter full-time for KTRH-AM, also in Houston. I still remained a disc jockey with KUHF-FM because I enjoyed it. A couple of months later, KUHF-

First of two roadblocks

Coogs to tangle with SMU

By DOUG DODSON
of The Daily Cougar staff

The University of Houston football team has managed to weather through the first two weeks of the Southwest Conference race without a loss, but the Coogs will have to put those games behind them and turn their attention to the road ahead.

Looming before Houston are the ominous figures of Southern Methodist University and the University of Arkansas. These next two games will genuinely test the validity of the Coogs' claim to the 1982 SWC championship.

The Cougars have managed to fumble and stumble past Baylor and Texas A&M with a respectable 1-0-1 mark. They haven't presented a picture of flawless football, but it has been enough to get by.

Unfortunately for the Coogs, they'll have to show a better side if they intend to bolt past SMU and Arkansas into the conference lead.

The fifth-ranked Mustangs, who possess the longest winning streak (nine) of any NCAA Division I team, boast the running talents of the "pony express," super-backs Eric Dickerson and Craig James. Dickerson is currently the second leading rusher in the nation.

Adding to the potency of the Mustang offense, third best in the SWC, is the explosive passing of quarterback Lance McIlhenny.

It was McIlhenny who pulled the Mustangs out of the fire in a 22-19 squeaker over Baylor last weekend, throwing three touch-down passes late in the contest to notch the Ponies second straight SWC victory.

Senior free safety Calvin Eason, who along with the rest of the Coog secondary will face Houston's biggest challenge since the Arizona State and Miami games, is confident that the Ponies can be stopped.

"They've got those great runners," he said. "If we can stop them from making the big play, then we'll be okay. The defensive line has really improved."

The Coogs will need more than emotion to beat the Mustangs. The key will lie in the ability of quarterback Lionel Wilson and the Coog offense to hang onto the football. The Houston offensive express is chugging down the tracks at full steam, leading the SWC, but fumbles and interceptions have derailed Wilson and company.

Five Wilson passes were snared by SMU defenders in last year's 38-22 Pony win over the Coogs. Two were returned more than 60 yards for Mustang touchdowns, opening an insurmountable 31-14 SMU lead late in the fourth quarter. The Coog effort was hindered further by four fumbles.

The Coog defense, ranked third in the SWC behind Arkansas and SMU, will have to stop the limber arm of McIlhenny if it hopes to leave Dallas with a win.

Durham has adjusted throughout career at UH

By JOHN SULLIVAN
of The Daily Cougar staff

Robert Durham began his football career at the University of Houston as a running back — but times have changed and so has Durham.

The Kilgore graduate switched to the other side of the trenches to help an injury-plagued defense last year at spring drills, and performed well enough to be placed second on the depth charts going into the 1982 season.

Now a defensive end, Durham has been forced to readjust to the game, but the former runner is a quick learner — he had to be after senior tri-captain Greg Harmon was sidelined with a separated shoulder.

The biggest plus of his new position, Durham says, is the ability to play without the nagging injuries he received as a running back.

"I felt good about the switch," he said. "I wanted to change over because of the problems I was having with my legs. All the running and cutting put a lot of strain on my knees and ankles. Now as a defensive end, I'm playing more and I feel like I'm in better condition than ever before."

Durham performed well in Houston's first three games after being thrown into the starting spot, but has seen less playing time since Harmon's return. Still, he is just as involved with the success of the team, and has some definite ideas on what the Coogs will have to do if they are to defeat SMU.

"It will be a good game," he said. "But we can beat them. We have great pursuit. We're not that big, but we're pretty fast. If we tackle well and cut off the outside, that could be the key."

"They run the ball more than they throw it, and we'll be looking for the sprint draw. (Lance) McIlhenny is a good passer, he can scramble and he can throw."

Playing defense isn't new to Durham, the 6-2, 215-pound junior garnered All-American honors in high school by playing both the offense and the defense. Durham feels the defense is better suited to his style of play.

"On defense you have to be aggressive and make the hits," he explained. "For me it's only a slight change in attitude, because I've always tried to play aggressive regardless of the position."

Durham now spends his playing time with the special teams, but he is patiently waiting in the wings for his opportunity to regain a starting position.

"I'm playing some," he said.

"The more action I see the more I learn. I've learned a whole lot from Greg, something new every day. I have another year left, so I know my time will come."

Professor hopes new ad program will prepare students for job world

By MARINA MIRKIN & TAMARA L. WOHADLO
Special to The Daily Cougar

The School of Communication has taken a step toward developing a new advertising curriculum with the development of an undergraduate program.

Associate Professor John A. Ledingham joined the faculty this semester to head the new program. "At the present time we are contemplating a seven-course curriculum within the School of Communication," he said. Included in this curriculum will be courses such as introduction to advertising, copywriting and production, secondary research sources for advertising, media planning, direct response advertising, advertising research methods, advertising and social issues and advertising campaigns.

"I hope to develop an attractive group of support courses that will serve as a basis for allowing students to prepare to enter the professional world," Ledingham said. "In addition, I hope to offer courses that attract and serve the professional community at the graduate and post-baccalaureate level."

The school's commitment to the program is strong, Ledingham said. "The problem facing us now is the one that is facing all universities, and that is funds or the lack of them," he said. "We have received strong indication from the professional community that they would help us through advice and financial support, but it is incumbent on us to demonstrate our commitment."

Ledingham said students can demonstrate their commitment by becoming involved in the campus chapter of the American Advertising Federation, which he is trying to reactivate.

Ledingham explained that one of the reasons he was hired was to develop relations between the School of Communication and the Houston professional advertising community.

"On Oct. 16 members of the professional advertising community will be visiting the campus to talk with students and to help them prepare for a professional career," he said. The career opportunities workshop will be held tomorrow at 10 a.m. in the University Center Parliament Room. The workshop, offered by Ad 2, a division of the Houston Advertising Federation, will be open to the first 35 people who show up.

"I think Houston is uniquely situated for the development of a strong group of support courses," Ledingham said. "Advertising is a very aggressive professional industry. Members of the advertising community are vitally interested in what we are doing."

Advertising and the field of communication are undergoing rapid changes brought about by the emergence of new communication technologies, increasing sophistication of advertising techniques and by an industry forced to justify the expenditure of every advertising dollar, Ledingham said. "Our students must be prepared not only for the world as it exists today, but the way it will be in the future," he said.

Ledingham received his doctoral degree from Ohio State University in 1980. He headed the advertising emphasis faculty at San Diego State University.

Sci-fi author at autograph session today

Science fiction author James Gunn will appear at an autograph session today in the University Center Bookstore Annex in the UC Underground. Copies of his recent books, "Asimov: The Foundations of Science Fiction" and "The Road to Science Fiction: From Here to Forever," will be available at the session.

Gunn is the guest of honor at this weekend's Planetcon '82 at the Marriott By the Galleria Hotel. University of Houston faculty members Richard Nelson, assistant professor of communication; Justin Leiber, associate professor of philosophy; and Guillermo Trotti, of the College of Architecture are also scheduled as guest speakers.

Planetcon '82 will feature other speakers from related fields, including science fiction, comics, romance and mystery, as well as workshops, films, contests, and art exhibits. Tickets are available at Access-in-the-UG Underground.

French jobs offered soon

By CYNTHIA MCLAIN
Special to The Daily Cougar

The French-American Chamber of Commerce is looking for students to spend three to four weeks next summer doing market research in France.

Students' expenses will be paid by a Houston business, said Pat Vassilakidis, executive director of the chamber. Students must speak French and be able to conduct market studies to participate in the program.

"The students will actually be working for the company while they are doing market studies on products in France," Vassilakidis said.

The chamber has not decided how many students will be allowed to join the program, Vassilakidis said. Professors from UH, Rice University, University of St. Thomas and Houston Baptist University have expressed interest in the program. She said the French departments at each university will select students for the program, while the chamber will locate businesses to sponsor the students.

"We don't have any set numbers yet. It will depend on the number of sponsors we find. We are probably looking at one to two students per university," Vassilakidis said.

The chamber got the idea for the program from a similar program conducted this summer in which a French university sent eight students and three professors to Houston to do market studies for French firms.

Vassilakidis said the French program was a success. "They were so happy with the experience, they offered to help set up a program for American students to come to France," she said.

E-Systems continues the tradition of the world's great problem solvers.

Maxwell's electromagnetic field theory led to huge practical scientific advances. His light theory led to his own development of one of the first color photos and the kinetic theory of gasses.

Scientists and engineers at E-Systems are carrying on in the tradition of Maxwell's genius. Today, they are solving some of the world's toughest problems in electronically steered phased array antennas, electromagnetic scattering and solar ray concentration, using his findings as tools.

E-Systems is maintaining a reputation for designing and building communications, data, antenna, intelligence and reconnaissance systems that are often the first-of-a-kind in the world.

Fitness expert urges audience to start exercising for its life

By BILL MacFADYEN & CYNTHIA McLAIN
Special to The Daily Cougar

Whatever your excuse for not exercising, someone somewhere has overcome it, aerobics pioneer Dr. Kenneth Cooper said in a lecture here Wednesday.

"You might have an excuse like I can't get shoes to fit, I have fallen arches, I'm too old or too young. You might be a young lady afraid of losing your figure. I've got examples of people who overcame all these excuses, and if you have one better than any of theirs, I'll listen to you," Cooper told an audience of more than 250 at his lecture on aerobic exercise and total well-being in Farish Hall.

Cooper is the author of several books on aerobic exercise, among them the best-seller, "The Aerobics Way." He founded the Cooper Aerobics Center, a nationally-known physical fitness development and research facility in Dallas.

Cooper is internationally-known as a physical fitness advocate; his books have been translated into 24 languages. He has developed fitness programs for the U.S. Navy, U.S. Air Force and hundreds of schools, corporations and professional athletic teams. The Dallas Cowboys are working out at the clinic during the football strike.

Cooper admitted that not every one wants to be able to run marathons. "Exercise can be useful in three general ways: rest and relaxation, muscle building and conditioning of the heart, lungs and circulation. Only one of these however, has the potential for saving your life. The last one."

Americans have enjoyed an improvement in their health through the years, Cooper said. A study in the early 1970s showed the life expectancy of a 45-year-old Caucasian male to be 63 years. By 1980, it had increased to 67 years. "It took almost a decade to increase the life expectancy only four years during the golden age of medicine in our country," Cooper said, which indicates "it's not so much what medicine does for us, it's what we do for ourselves."

Cooper called exercise "nature's best remedy," but made no promises. "I can't guarantee anyone that by exercising regularly you'll live one day longer, but I can assure that your life will be healthier, happier and more productive one if you keep yourself physically fit."

Simplicity

Simplicity
of the mind,
Is limited!
For
It can not grasp the Unknown.
It is damned
to everlasting bondage.
It only believes
What it sees,
And then,
has trouble,
Dealing with what
It has seen.
Oh cursed is the simplicity
of the mind.
For it binds your mind,
Like a prisoner
Is bound to his cell.
Simplicity
Guards your mind,
From, . . . The higher plains of thought.
Like, the warden
Guards a prisoner
From knowing too much freedom.
Simplicity
of the mind,
Is a sickness,
Whose only cure,
Is
More knowledge.
