These are just a few of the gay and lesbian writers who have enriched our culture, past and present. And LOBO has added expansively to our gay and lesbian selection with the addition of the Book Loft.

Besides new and current titles, LOBO offers a wide selection of used, out-of-print and rare titles.

Out-of-Print Books, mainly hardback copies, which are no longer available in that format.

Used Second-hand copies, usually paperback editions, primarily reading copies.

Rare-Titles which, because of their scarcity, are more valuable. An example would be Captoe's "Other Voices, Other Rooms," his first novel, a first edition and signed by the author.

While some gay bookstores offer a small selection of used books, LOBO is offering an extensive selection - the largest such collection of gay and lesbian literature in the United States.

While LOBO continues to be a broadly based gay specialty store, we take particular pride in establishing our Houston store as the leader in the nation in preserving and offering such a large selection of our gay and lesbian past and present in literature.

The open portrayal of homosexuality is relatively recent, post-World War II, but even the last century was rich with homoerotic novels - it has taken the last twenty years to bring some of these earlier writers out of their literary closets. American literature, as with life in general, is dominated by heterosexual publishers, critics, and readers with a vested interest in denying the actual dominance in some literary circles of gay and lesbian writers.

We hope you will come and browse our Book Loft - we don't have any porn stars on hand but those we have on video, seven days a week.

Also, the LOBO Video Club is eliminating the Beta format. All Beta rental titles are on sale for $9.95 each.

Devastating Impact For AIDS Service Groups

AIDS service organizations would be devastated if California's Proposition 102 passes this November, a recently-issued analysis shows. According to the analysis, passage of the controversial Dannemeyer AIDS initiative would financially drain community-based AIDS service organizations by raising legal, employee training, liability and health insurance expenses and by increasing the burden on hot lines, food banks, counseling and benefit services. At the same time, the analysis warns, private donations and public funding are likely to decrease sharply, as government resources are diverted from service programs to funding reporting and contact tracing provisions mandated by the initiative.

According to attorney Benjamin Schatz, Director of the AIDS Civil Rights Project of National Gay Rights Advocates and chief author of the analysis, "If Proposition 102 passes, community based organizations may be forced to choose between obeying the law and serving their clients. The initiative will present many groups with a cruel dilemma: destroy important client records or turn them over to government authorities." Schatz also warned that "if Proposition 102 becomes law, the spread of AIDS will accelerate as people leery of government lists avoid counseling, testing, and visits to their doctors. This will, in the long run, increase the number of people in need of AIDS-related services."

William Glenn, President of the Board of the San Francisco AIDS Foundation, was instrumental in convening a meeting of San Francisco AIDS organizations working to fight the initiative. "The battle against Proposition 102 is literally an issue of life and death," he stated. "If this disastrous initiative becomes law, many AIDS service organizations will be forced to close their doors. No one who is concerned about fighting AIDS can afford to sit on the sidelines while we wage an uphill battle to fight Proposition 102."

Some of the effects of Proposition 102, if passed are: (1) State and local government funding for CBO's will dry up; (2) The spread of AIDS will accelerate; (3) CBO's may be forced to choose between obeying the law and serving their clients; (4) CBO's could be forced to destroy existing records or turn them to local authorities; (5) Doctors or nurses employed by or working with CBO's will be forced to turn in all clients testing HIV positive; (6) The cost of financing health care for CBO employees will rise; (7) Phones and hot lines will be overwhelmed; (8) CBO's will be forced to hire more crisis intervention/emotional support workers; (9) CBO's will be forced to provide more basic education and counseling because anonymous test site will no longer be allowed; (10) CBO's may have a more difficult time attracting employees; (11) Volunteers and board members may be penalized and, as a result, frightened away from CBO's; (12) Donors contributions could decrease; (13) CBO's will face an increased client demand for direct and indirect financial assistance; (14) Legal expenses for CBO's may increase; (15) The cost of liability insurance for AIDS Service Organizations could rise; (16) CBO's will have to divert their resources away from those at greatest risk; and (17) CBO's may face irreconcilable conflicts with government-funded employees.

Schatz and Glenn urge individuals and organizations interested in working to defeat Proposition 102 to call California Against Proposition 102 at (415) 621-4450 in San Francisco, or (213) 654-3757 in Los Angeles.

Billiard Boom Shows No Sign Of Decline

By Russell Kishi
FOR THE MONTROSE VOICE

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—In the two years since the Paul Newman-Tom Cruise film "The Color of Money" rekindled the American love for pool, a boom has been in progress that could put the warnings of Professor Harold Hill to rest once and for all.

Meredith Willson's fictional "Music Man" attempted to admonish the townspeople of River City, Iowa about the intrinsic evils of the game, even though he acknowledged that it cultivates "horse sense, and a cool head and a keen eye."

Loyalists are convinced that a far greater number of people are finding other virtues in pool as well.

And while both "The Color of Money" and Newman's original performance as "The Hustler" 27 years ago explored some unsavory aspects of staking one's life on a pool cue, recent surveys into American gaming habits would support the loyalists' point of view.

Individual studies by the Gallup poll and the National Sporting Goods Association placed billiards in the top 10 among participation sports. Last February, Gallup estimated that 33 million Americans are pool players, ranked billiards fourth among games played by men and claimed that the percentage of all players has grown by 430 percent since 1959.

Equipment sales have increased better than 100 percent since "The Color of Money" was released in 1986, according to surveys taken by the Billiards Congress of America, an organization representing manufacturers, retailers and players of every stripe.

A staggering $500 million is now spent annually on the game, said Paul Roberts, a BCA spokesman.

"Billiards has always gone through cycles," Roberts said. "You are dealing with a game that goes back centuries. Washington and Jefferson were players, and Mark Twain made it a part of 'Every Man's Education.'"

"At the turn of the century, it was a gentleman's game. In the '30s, it was a Depression pastime, and there was a love-hate, romantic rogue appeal attached to it. It always seemed that over the course of decades, it could be huge and the next minute it's out."

But with or without an assist from Newman and Cruise, Roberts said pool became a logical entertainment alternative after home video games reached their peak in the late '70s and early '80s.

Getting Involved

From Tiffany A.

I am a Lesbian, and do not ever remember feeling any different towards women than I do now. I came out of the closet about four years ago and was basically accepted by all (or should I say most) of my friends.

When I decided to tell my father, who by the way is also gay, he told me that he already knew. I asked him how and that is when I was introduced to "GAYDAR". My father accepted me completely and our relationship did not change, although he wanted his "baby" to grow up, get married, have children and all that jazz. He did have one thing to say about it though, he said being gay on the outside is a lot of fun and you can flit about and have a blast, but inside it sometimes gets very depressing and also very scary.

My mother on the other hand threw a raging fit about it until she finally got completely fed up with it and kicked me out of the house. She does not accept my lifestyle in the slightest and detests me for "choosing" to be this way. I have tried to explain to her several times that I did not choose to be this way, and besides I am proud to be a Lesbian. But she REFUSED to accept this, so I left peacefully.

Most of my friends are Gay or Lesbians and I found shelter in my girl friends apartment. That was relatively short lived. So I was staying with a Gay couple who are very good friends of mine, and shortly after, my best and truest friend, who by the way is straight, and I got an apartment together. My friends and I go out to the clubs and have a really good time, but I felt that it was just a facade, I wanted more, I wanted to get involved in my community and fight for my rights and my beliefs, and also my life, because that's what being gay is, my life.

I just recently discovered "After Hours" on KPFT 90.1 FM and after listening to Buddy and all of the people there I was so excited and also relieved that there is somewhere I can turn to get involved in my life.

To me, the Gay and Lesbian community is so much more than a group of people fighting for our rights, but a family striving for acceptance, and to contest our beliefs.

Being Gay, or being a Lesbian does indeed have its trials and tribulations, but I am proud of myself and what I am, and I'll be damned if I'm going to let society cut me to my knees for leading a life that I am pleased with.

I am eighteen years old and I am hoping that this letter will inspire some of the younger, (or even older for that matter), and let them know that there is a place to turn, there are ways to get involved, and most importantly, There Are People Who Care!

The Boy Is Back

No, Boy George didn't fall off the face of the earth. In fact, he has a new album coming out soon under the title "Tense, Nervous, Headache."

But the album won't include the gender-bender singer's new single, "No Clause 28," a protest of a British law to stop the teaching of homosexual-related subjects in schools.

"I did the record because it became clear that the law against teaching homosexuality in school ... could also be used to enforce censorship against art and literature," George told The New York Times.

"Certain plays, Oscar Wilde, William Burroughs and cult movies might vanish. The song's about protecting that sort of intellectual freedom." Boy George says the song isn't on the album because he had to cave in to his record company, Virgin, to revive his career.

"There's a lull at this stage in my career so I don't have much power and my work is compromised," he said.

"Music, I've come to realize in my old age, is all I can do so I work harder at it and take more pride in it."

As One Storm Approaches, Another Is Remembered

By Billie Duncan
The Montrose Voice

Although the path of Gilbert was not certain as the Voice went to press on Wednesday night (a day early to avoid the approaching storm), the memory of the last storm to hit the area was strong enough for everyone who remembered to hope that Gilbert decides to go elsewhere.

In 1983, Alicia smashed into the Texas Coast at Galveston, then shoved inland to Houston, blinking her eye right over Montrose. For weeks, the city was practically immobilized with power outages, water shortages and tons of debris littering the streets. Inches of broken glass covered the downtown area from huge glass towers that had popped out their windows in winds up to 100 MPH.

Alicia was a dangerous storm. A category three. A very destructive force.

Gilbert is a category five. A monster.

If Gilbert takes the same path that Alicia took, the devastation to the city and to Montrose will be unbelievable. There is not an example in recorded history to help calculate the kind of destruction that might occur.

If you have not prepared to be in a safe place to ride out the storm if it should come this way and to survive the hardship after the storm hits (if it should), then you should make plans immediately.

Movie Box Office Takes Autumn Fall

By Vernon Scott
UPI Hollywood Reporter
FOR THE MONTROSE VOICE

HOLLYWOOD—Back-to-school blues depressed North American theater owners and Hollywood's film makers alike with the customary autumn fallback at the box office for the week ending last Sunday.

Holdovers in distribution tumbled between 45 and 58 percent from the runaway Labor Day weekend turnstile.

With the top 10 money-makers dropping almost 45 percent below the previous week's grosses, "Moon Over Parador" managed to take up the front of the parade with a scant $3.3 million take in its first week.

"Moon Over Parador" stars Richard Dreyfuss as a ham actor impersonating a dead dictator in a fictitious banana republic. The Paul Mazursky comedy, also starring Raul Julia and Sonia Braga, opened in 1,145 theaters.

Dropping down to second place was "Nightmare on Elm Street 4" after four weeks in the top spot. The third sequel of the horror flick series earned $3.2 million for a five-week total of $38.3 million in 1,675 theaters.

Holding fast to its No. 3 spot was John Cleese's "A Fish Called Wanda," a bawdy comedy co-starring Jamie Lee Curtis and Kevin Kline in a London bank robbery caper.

"A Fish Called Wanda" brought in $2.8 million on 1,214 screens for a nine-week gross of $41.5 million.

Holding firm in fourth place for the second consecutive week was the Bruce Willis action thriller "Die Hard" with a gross of $2.6 million. In nine weeks it has amassed $61.9 million.

One of the biggest crashes of the week was suffered by "Betrayed," a film of American racial intolerance starring Tom Berenger and Debra Winger. It dropped from No. 2 to No. 5 and plunged 54 percent. "Betrayed" grossed $2.5 million for a three-week total of $16.6 million.

Tom Cruise's "Cocktail" was No. 6 with a gross of $2.2 million and a $60.3 million seven-week total.

Despite the back-to-school, football season start-up, the week's total North American box-office gross was still $86.7 million, compared with $79.6 million for the comparable week last year and $75 million in 1986.

The year 1988 was still on a record-breaking course with a to-date total of $3.1 billion. Last year at this time the total was $2.8 billion.

The top 10, the week's gross, total gross, weeks in release:

1. "Moon Over Parador," $3.3 million, 1 week.
2. "Nightmare on Elm Street 4," $3.2 million, $38.3 million, 5 weeks.
3. "A Fish Called Wanda," $2.8 million, $41.5 million, 9 weeks.
4. "Die Hard," $2.6 million, $61.9 million, 9 weeks.
5. "Betrayed," $2.5 million, $16.6 million, 3 weeks.
6. "Cocktail," $2.2 million, $60.3 million, 7 weeks.
7. "Young Guns," $2.1 million, $31.9 million, 5 weeks.
8. "Who Framed Roger Rabbit," $1.8 million, $133.1 million, 11 weeks.
9. "Married to the Mob," $1.6 million, $14.2 million, 3 weeks.
10. "Big," $1.3 million, $99.5 million, 14 weeks.

Battle For Oregon Gov.'s Executive Order

In November Oregon voters face a ballot measure which, if it passes, not only revokes a gubernatorial executive order prohibiting discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation, but has national repercussions in that it would permit and encourage such discrimination.

"What is most frightening about this initiative is that it not only revokes Governor Goldschmidt's executive order, but it also enacts new law inviting discrimination against lesbians and gay men," says Liz Kaufman, campaign manager for Oregonians for Fairness, the group formed to fight the initiative now known as Oregon Ballot Measure 8.

Many believe that passage of Ballot Measure 8 will have national repercussions. Congressional Representative Barney Frank, D. Mass., commenting on the issue recently said, "We've been making progress here in Washington on federal gay rights legislation because we have been able to convince members of congress that prejudice against gays has diminished among the electorate. Passage of Measure 8 in a state like Oregon would be disastrous because of the message it would send to Congress."

The order, issued by Democratic Gov. Neil Goldschmidt in October 1987, bans discrimination in employment and in the provision of state services in the executive branch of state government. It specifically excludes any affirmative action based on sexual orientation. It is one of 10 such executive orders across the nation.

Goldschmidt's order incensed the extreme right wing of Oregon politics which banded together in an organization called the Oregon Citizens Alliance and formed the "No Special Rights Committee." This committee collected 116,000 signatures, almost double the required number to replace their initiative on the November ballot.

One section of the initiative proposes a new law that states, "no state official shall forbid the taking of any personnel action against any state employee based on the sexual orientation of such employee."

OCA packed the Oregon Republican Party convention held last spring and has virtual control of the party structure. The state party chair, T.J. Bailey, also serves as the political director of OCA.

Both sides of the initiative battle vow to raise hundreds of thousands of dollars for what promises to be the most visible and hard-fought ballot measure campaign in Oregon.

"We plan to raise at least $450,000 in our efforts to defeat this measure," said Kaufman. "Our fund-raising is already well underway." The OCA states it plans to raise at least $600,000 in it battle because as one of its fundamentalist ministers says, "discrimination against homosexuals in society and in the church is justified. The sins is of such a nature that it pollutes all society."

A poll taken by The Oregonian, the state's leading newspaper, shortly after Goldschmidt issued the executive order, shows that nearly two-thirds of Oregonians favor the order, however, Kaufman says that although that poll is heartening it is not an indication of the political battle ahead.

"The Oregonian poll shows that the voters of this state truly do not believe in discrimination, but during the heat of what promises to be a campaign of lies and anti-gay hysteria by OCA we realize that even well-meaning non-discriminatory individuals may be swayed," Kaufman said. "This is going to be a tough battle and the help and support of all Oregonians who believe in justice and fairness is needed."

Miss America Outspoken, Cool

By Philip Newman
FOR THE MONTROSE VOICE

NEW YORK (UPI)—The new Miss America boldly spoke out about the plight of the environment and "narcissistic" American youth, but the blond Republican who lost 20 pounds this year calmly deflected questions about her virginity.

Gretchen Elizabeth Carlson, 22, the Miss Minnesota chosen the 62nd Miss America, demonstrated persistent poise at a news conference Monday, even when a reporter asked if she had ever had sexual intercourse.

"No comment," said Carlson, her green eyes flashing.

But a Miss America Pageant official jumped up, dashed over and angrily admonished the reporter for imposing on the woman crowned Miss America last Saturday night.

Miss America said most American youth are too wrapped up in themselves.

"Young people today are narcissistic. They are in love with themselves," said Carlson, who recommended youths start volunteering to help people.

The Stanford University graduate, who aspires to Harvard law school, said she does not use drugs, alcohol or tobacco and blamed the prevalence of such behavior on bad family life.

"We have a society that has lost its way," she said. "Drugs, divorce, sex, all are manifestations of a breakdown in the family."

But she said the fact that both parents work need not perpetuate this breakdown, noting, "Quality time between parent and child is more important than quantity time."

Carlson said the important thing is making sure children learn how to volunteer to help others.

"What I believe we need is for these children to be taught in schools and homes the concept of volunteerism, the idea of helping others along the way," she said.

AFH Hosts Forum On Current Medical Treatment Of HIV Disease

A medical forum about current medical treatment of HIV disease will be held from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. on Thursday, Sept. 29 at the fellowship hall of Bering Memorial United Methodist Church, 1440 Harold.

AIDS Foundation Houston (AFH) is hosting the forum, which will feature panel members Robert Awe, M.D.; Adan Rios, M.D.; Mike Banyai, R.Ph.; and Edna Houston, R.Ph.

The forum will feature a panel discussion with audience questions on the medical management of HIV disease. Discussion will include the pros and cons of retrovir therapy, investigational drugs, monitoring patients and other topics.

Refreshments will be served from 6:30 to 7 p.m., followed by opening remarks from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. The event is free and open to the public.

Montrose Counseling Center To Sponsor Stress Management Workshop

The Montrose Counseling Center is sponsoring a three-part workshop on stress management beginning Monday, Sept. 26. Participants will evaluate their own stress levels and learn many techniques for lowering stress. Lowered stress has been associated with a stronger immune system, decreased depression, and more enjoyment of life. The series will run on consecutive Mondays from 7:00—8:30 pm and cost $45.00. The sessions will be facilitated by Dr. Beverly Nichols, a clinical psychologist. Participation will be limited, so pre-registration is necessary. Call the Montrose Counseling Center (529-0037) to register, or if you have any questions about this series. Wear comfortable clothes, and come prepared to relax.

Something wonderful is in the planning stage and we need your help!

November 27, 1988 will mark the 10th anniversary of the assassination of Harvey Milk. Plans are being made for a CELEBRATION OF LIFE RALLY to be held at the reflection pool in front of city hall in downtown Houston. The "pep rally" for life will be held early evening and will be broadcast live over KPFT, 90.1 FM. Musicians, poets and speakers will come together to help celebrate our very existence. The highlight of the rally will be a candlelight vigil to honor the memory of Harvey Milk.

KPFT radio and the River Oaks Theater are making plans to have hopefully free public showing of the award winning film "The Life And Times Of Harvey Milk" during the weekend of Nov. 18/19 to help educate the community as to who Harvey Milk was and what his life and death meant to the Gay/Lesbian movement.

We have received interest from HEARTSONG, M.C.C.R. choir and the Montrose Singers asking to perform, as time goes by we hope this list will continue to grow.

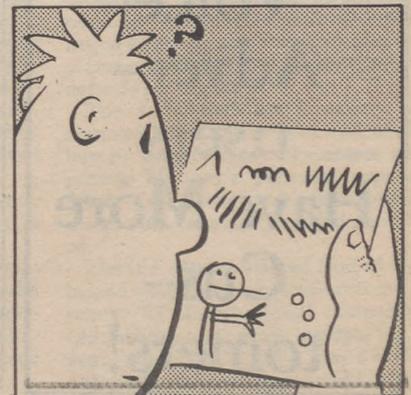

We need your help. Next year will mark the 20th anniversary of the Stonewall Riot, what many consider to be the birth of the modern Gay/Lesbian movement. Search your heart, look deep into your soul. Find out just what this movement means to you. Join us and get involved. How you ask? We don't know—your involvement is up to you. Don't miss this opportunity to join the community as we come together to CELEBRATE LIFE, GAY AND LESBIAN LIFE!!

If you'd like to get involved call us at 713-529-4636.

Together we can change the world, it's already happening, please join us and be a part of the movement.

YOUR QUESTIONS WILL BE ANSWERED HERE

James H. Murphy

This is to introduce a series of answers-to-questions we've been getting lately. We'll be discussing various aspects of death-and-bereavement...coping with loss of loved ones...how you explain death to a child...behavior towards the bereaved and what might you say...the setting up of one's life anew...the importance of pre-planning one's funeral arrangements.

Our goal always is to handle these precious personal matters in your best interests. To serve you better, we've studied the latest in pertinent philosophical and psychological materials. We have discussed these problems with the clergy, the lawyers and doctors to prepare ourselves for the best and most fitting answers for you.

If your reading these columns will ever help you through a trying time, this will have all been worth it. We invite your questions. We'll answer them in private or publicly through this column.

What does your ex-lover mean to you?

Are you best friends? Enemies? Do you provide emotional support for one another ... or have you lost contact? Through dozens of personal interviews with lesbians and their ex-lovers, Carol Becker has charted the emotional trauma of a couple's break-up, the stages of recovery, and the differing ways that former lovers stay in touch with each other. She shows how the end of a relationship can provide a time for important personal growth, and how former lovers can also serve as the foundation for new forms of family and community.

◆◆ National Conference To Address Unique Legal Needs

AIDS is not only a national health care crisis, but it has enormous legal ramifications as well, according to a leading AIDS legal service organization. There is a critical lack of legal assistance crucial to Persons with AIDS and ARC. In response to this shortage, the AIDS Legal Referral Panel is hosting a national AIDS Conference on Friday, Nov. 11 in San Francisco. The conference will train attorneys and advocates to organize an AIDS legal service in their local communities.

"Nationally the critical and special legal needs of Persons with AIDS, ARC and HIV infection are simply not being met," said Clint Hockenberry, Administrator of San Francisco's AIDS Legal Referral Panel. "The 1.5 million Americans who are facing AIDS are unable to find free and low-cost legal assistance at the very time they are most vulnerable—when they've lost their job or insurance, they're denied government benefits, or they need a will."

Only ten legal aid programs throughout the U.S. provide legal services to the 1.5 million Persons with AIDS and AIDS-Related Complex.

Preceding the lesbian and gay Lavender Law conference, the comprehensive day-long training on AIDS will cover such current topics as employment discrimination, insurance, social security representation, and patient confidentiality/mandatory testing issues. A $50 fee ($75 after Nov. 1) will cover conference registration and a 500-page AIDS Law manual.

The AIDS Law conference is sponsored by Bay Area Lawyers for Individual Freedom (BALIF), Employment Law Center of the Legal Aid Society (ELC/LAS), National Educational Foundation for Individual Rights (NEFIR), and Volunteer Legal Services Program/Bar Association of San Francisco (VLSP/BASF).

For more information on AIDS Law conference will fill the gap in existing legal service by preparing participants to provide much needed legal assistance to Persons with AIDS and ARC in their local communities.

◆◆ Memorial Quilt To Be Displayed Again In Washington

The National AIDS Memorial, a huge quilt made of individual 3 foot by 6 foot panels, each bearing the name of a single person lost to AIDS will be displayed on the Ellipse across from the White House on Oct. 8th and 9th, 1988.

The Quilt display begins Saturday at dawn with a brief unfolding ceremony and the reading of each of the names included in the Quilt. At dusk, when the last of the names has been recited, a candlelight procession led by parents whose children have died of AIDS will move toward the Lincoln Memorial.

Michael Smith, general manager of The NAMES Project said, "This display marks the first anniversary of the Quilt's inaugural display on the Capitol Mall last year. Since that time the Quilt has been brought to more than 20 cities across the country, helping to raise nearly $500,000 for local AIDS agencies." As the Quilt travelled throughout the nation it continued to grow. This year, 8,288 individual panels will be included, making this display almost five times as large as last October's. As enormous as it is however, the Quilt represents only 22 percent of the AIDS related deaths in the United States. For each panel in the Quilt, 3 other Americans have died.

"Panels from all fifty states in the U.S. are included in the Quilt as well as panels from 12 other countries: Australia, Canada, Germany, Great Britain, Israel, Italy, Mexico, the Netherlands, New Zealand, Senegal, Spain, and Sweden," said Scott Lago, NAMES Project production manager. "Materials used in panel construction include everything from clear vinyl, leather, plastic, and Naugahyde to Barbie dolls, ashes, stuffed animals, merit badges, and rhinestones. Volunteers have been working around the clock, hemming panels, sewing edges together, and making walkways for this enormous display.

The entire Quilt weighs 16 tons, includes 11.18 miles of canvas edging, 37,660 brass grommets, and 5 miles of walkways. Celebrities memorialized in the Quilt include the choreographer Michael Bennett, French philosopher Michel Foucault, actor Rock Hudson, designer Willi Smith, and pianist Liberace.

◆◆ Summer Singles Tournament

The Hou-Tex Tennis Club is preparing for its Eight Annual Summer Singles tournament. Players from the Club's membership will be competing for their ladder rankings. All entrants will play three of four matches with the winners being recognized as Club Champions at the annual Christmas and Awards party in December.

Play will begin at 9:00 a.m. on the 18th and continue on the 25th at MacGregor Park. Entry fees are $15.00 which includes court rentals, balls, and trophies.

A Pre-Tournament Party will be held on Saturday, Sept. 17th at the Barn beginning at 9:00 p.m. The draw will be made and times assigned.

For more information, contact Donny Kelley at 789-2110.

◆◆ 8th Annual National Championship

The Hou-Tex Tennis Club kicks off its fundraising campaign for the Eight Annual Hou-Tex National Championship for singles and doubles competition.

The fundraising begins this Saturday, Sept. 17, at the Galleon's parking lot with a car wash beginning at 9:00 a.m. Many of the club's members will be washing and vacuuming your car for only $3.00.

During the month of October, your sweet tooth will be satisfied with a dessert at the weekly Steak Night at the Galleon.

During Sunday October 16, the club will perform its First Annual Tennis Variety Show. Waiters from the club will be on hand to serve your favorite drink.

All proceeds will go to finance the Hou-Tex Tennis Tournament to be held Friday, November 11 through the weekend.

Players from all over the United States will head to the Bayou City for another exciting visit. The tournament anticipates to draw a record attendance of 144 singles players as well as many doubles teams.

For more information regarding the Hou-Tex National Championships, contact Eddie Chavez at 622-0215.

Death By Decapitation In Saudi Arabia

Gay Happenings Worldwide by John Hubert

FOR THE MONTROSE VOICE

Gays in Saudi Arabia, the birthplace of Islam, live in constant fear of their lives. Homosexual acts between men as well as women are strictly illegal. For Saudis caught engaging in homosexual acts, a public flogging and imprisonment are the rewards for the first offense and death by decapitation for the second offense. Foreigners caught, even soliciting sex, can expect lashes of the whip, two months in jail and deportation.

Saudi Arabia, a country of twelve million inhabitants, is 98 percent Moslem. According to the Gay Community News of Boston, a recent symposium on viral disease held in Riyadh, the Saudi capital, produced recommendations from two doctors from the King Saud University hospital that stiff punishment of homosexuals would provide the best protection against AIDS in Saudi Arabia.

The two doctors said that Saudi society must use a "moral vaccine" against AIDS. Dr. Abdul Wahab Elidrissy said, "We must take strict measures against homosexuality as an abnormal and illegal behavior. It is condemned by Islam, Judaism and Christianity." As in all Islamic countries gay sex is considered to be "against the order of nature" by most of the population, even though everybody knows homosexual behavior is widespread. Secrecy is the word.

THE GRUPO GAY DE BAHIA (GGB), the seven year old gay liberation group of Salvador, Brazil, recently held a conference on "AIDS and Homosexuality" at the Salvador Cultural Institute. They followed that with an exposition titled "Violence Against Gays", with photos and drawings, to try and raise public consciousness to end the on-going anti-gay macho violence in Brazil. GGB also presented a small musical show and dance on the same theme.

Members of GGB are participating in a campaign to observe police conduct in the gay areas of Salvador which has resulted in the illegal detentions of several members.

THE AUSTRALIAN GAY migrant policy is causing a bit of an uproar Downunder. The Australian government allows gays to bring their gay lovers into the country as migrants under the family reunion plan. According to East-West Magazine of London, 149 foreign gays have been granted resident status during the past three years, having satisfied immigration officials of their stable long term relationships with Australian gay men or lesbians. Another 110 applications are currently being processed. Opponents of the plan want gay people rejected because there is no health screening for AIDS. Immigration Minister Clyde Holding defended in Parliament the admission of gay immigrants, saying: "The evidence is that the gay migrants are living in permanent relationships and are contributing to Australian society as the best of citizens."

PRIME MINISTER PREM TINSULANOND of Thailand, who dissolved the Parliament in May to avoid a no-confidence debate on his alleged homosexuality, won easily the elections in July.

Unfortunately, Prem declined the invitation from King Bhumibol Adulyadej to form another moderate, pro-U.S. government, and the King has now appointed Chatichai Choonhavan to succeed Gen. Prem Tinsulanond.

Prem, who had been head of Thailand's government since 1980, and Thailand's most popular leader in many years, is affectionately known as "Auntie Prem" by Thai gays. The opposition demanded that he be "man enough" to step down in the "English way", referring to a British cabinet minister who had resigned when his homosexuality was revealed. Sadly, Prem has complied.

SOME OF THE EARLY anti-gay development in England due to Margaret Thatcher's new law, the infamous Clause 28, include the London Grant Commission's cancellation of their long term monthly subsidies to the Lesbian Archives of London; the cancellation of monthly grant money to LESPOP, a quasi government bureau for lesbians; the Church of England's announced intention to terminate relations with their Lesbian and Gay Christian Group; and a coffee shop on Route M25 which carries forward Margaret Thatcher's hate campaign with a big sign announcing "No Gays."

Alleged Porn Kingpin, 3 Others Indicted

DETROIT (UPI)—A federal grand jury indicted the reputed kingpin of a massive pornography distribution network and three others for conspiring to defraud the government by hiding funds generated by their far-flung businesses, prosecutors announced last Friday.

The U.S. Attorney's Office said Harry Mohny, 45, controls the second largest pornography distribution network in the United States and owns more than 100 corporations that supply and operate adult bookstores and theaters in at least 12 Michigan cities and in 14 other states.

Indicted along with Mohny were Lee Klein, 37, of Perry, Mich., an attorney; Thomas Tompkins, 40, of Durand, Mich., an accountant; and Elizabeth Scribner, 39, of Morrice, Mich., an officer manager.

Klein said he and the other defendants had no immediate comment.

"It's my guess that Mr. Mohny and myself and the other named defendants will be issuing our own press release," Klein said.

"Mr. Mohny is out of the country and I'm about to leave myself," Klein said. "We won't have a response for this either individually or through counsel for probably another week."

According to the indictment, the defendants concealed the ownership and control of pornographic businesses to cover up the sources of funds used to acquire and expand them, the identities of their customers and the sources of the defendants' incomes.

The indictment said money was skimmed from businesses and used to buy or expand other businesses while paying Mohny's personal expenses. Much of the money was not reported on income tax returns, the indictment stated.

The indictment alleged that Mohny helped prepare a corporate income tax return for International Amusement Ltd., whose total gross receipts for the year ended May 31, 1983, were $788,779, well under the true figure of $2,079,988.

Longtime Suspects Charged In Murders

By Michael D. Harris
FOR THE MONTROSE VOICE

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—A convicted drug dealer and his bodyguard, suspected since 1981 of four slayings for which the late porn star John Holmes was acquitted, were charged with murder in what have been called among the most brutal slayings in Los Angeles history.

Adel Nasrallah, known as Eddie Nash, 59, a one-time nightclub owner once described by Holmes as "the most evil man I've ever known," and his former bodyguard, Gregory D. Diles, 40, appeared in Municipal Court Sept. 8, but arraignment was postponed.

Prosecutors said the long time suspects were finally being charged because new evidence has been discovered. They declined, however, to discuss the new evidence, or say if it had come from new witnesses.

"These are some of the most brutal murders the county of Los Angeles has ever seen," Deputy District Attorney Dale Davidson said.

The Lebanese-born Nash was arrested at his Tarzana residence, police said. Diles was taken into custody at the Club Hollywood, where he was employed.

They were each charged with four counts of murder plus special circumstance allegations that under California law would qualify them for a possible death penalty on conviction.

The two men were also charged with one count of attempted murder in the attack on a woman who survived the July 1, 1981, killings in a Laurel Canyon home.

They appeared in Municipal Court Sept. 8 for arraignment, but the proceedings were postponed at the request of the defense until Sept. 19. Judge David Milton ordered them held without bail.

Nash's attorney, Paul Caruso, told reporters "it goes without saying" that his client is innocent. Caruso said authorities were under pressure to file the charges because the case has a high profile.

Authorities believe Nash ordered Diles and others to kill the victims in retaliation for a drug-related robbery they allegedly committed at Nash's Studio City home two days before.

Holmes, a superstar in the pornographic film industry before his death from AIDS last March at age 43, was charged with the murders in December 1981, but was acquitted in June 1982.

The following month he was jailed for contempt of court after refusing to discuss the murders with the county grand jury. Holmes said he feared he would be killed, and stayed in jail for 110 days. He was freed after he finally decided to discuss the case with the jury. Transcripts of that hearing remain sealed.

Killed in the brutal beating attack were William DeVerell, 42, Joy Miller, 46, Barbara Richardson, 22, and Ronald Launius. Launius's wife, Susan, 25, survived but was unable to identify the attackers.

Nash was sentenced in November 1982 to eight years in state prison for possessing $1 million worth of cocaine for sale. He was paroled after two years because of poor health. Diles was also convicted in that case.

At Holmes's trial, Deputy District Attorney Ronald S. Coen, now a Superior Court Judge, charged that Holmes acted as a go-between for Nash and the group of people living at the Laurel Canyon home.

Coen alleged that the group committed burglaries and gave the stolen property to Holmes, who handed it over to Nash in return for drugs. Coen said Holmes set up the robbery at Nash's home and then, when Nash discovered his involvement, led the killers to the Wonderland Avenue address at Nash's behest.

Holmes's wife of 16 years, Sharon, told the Los Angeles Times following her husband's death that he confessed his role in the slayings less than three weeks after the murders.

She said Holmes told her he had led three thugs to the tightly secured home, escorted them in, and stood by as they bludgeoned the five people inside, splattering Holmes with blood.

"He said, 'I had to stand there and watch what they did,'" Sharon Holmes told the newspaper.

She said Holmes never told her the identities of the assailants.

◆◆AIDS Bibliography Now Available Free At Montrose Branch Library

"Dealing with AIDS," a free reading list of recent books that deal with AIDS, is now available at Montrose Branch Library, 4100 Montrose Blvd. Selected by Ed Osowski, Branch Manager, the list includes both fiction and non-fiction works. Several books in Spanish are also included. Suggestions for further reading in magazines subscribed to by Montrose Branch Library complete the bibliography.

Ned Rorem, the composer and writer, has called AIDS, "A mystery which affects everyone on earth." Although AIDS is troubling and frightening, through reading it is possible to learn about it, to become more sympathetic toward PWA's (Persons with AIDS), and to dispel some of the mystery that surrounds the disease. Osowski says, "The books on this list will allow readers to begin to understand how AIDS affects all of us to develop ways to deal with it."

"Dealing with AIDS" was prepared to complement a three-week lecture series, with the same name, that begins Thursday, Sept. 8, at 7 PM, at Montrose Branch Library. The series of free talks is co-sponsored by AIDS Foundation of Houston.

◆◆Women's Network Schedule October 1988

The Women's Network is a support and educational group established by the Women's Program of the Montrose Counseling Center to serve particularly (but not exclusively) the lesbian and bisexual community of Houston women. All women are welcome. The group has voted to ask a sliding scale fee (ranging from $3.00 to $5.00), based on an individual's own assessment of her financial situation. However, no one will be turned away for lack of the fee.

The meeting place is at Montrose Counseling Center, 900 Lovett Blvd., Suite 203—Round Room from 7:00 to 8:45 PM on 2nd and 4th Wednesdays of each month.

On Oct. 12 is "Jealousy," presented by Denise O'Doherty, MS.N., and on Oct. 26 is "Drafting Relationship Agreements," presented by local attorneys Connie Moore and Debbie Hunt. Discussion will cover practical how-to's for creating our own relationship agreements.

The Montrose Counseling Center AIDS Project offers a "Worried Well" support group for women (lesbian or heterosexual) who either have been diagnosed as infected with the AIDS virus, or fear that they may have been infected. For more information call 529-0037.

◆◆Safer Sex: An Attitude For All Season

A workshop is being presented by AIDS Foundation Houston as a part of their educational outreach to the gay community.

"Expose Yourself To The Hottest Safer Sex Styles"

"Explore The Concepts Of Total Wellness"

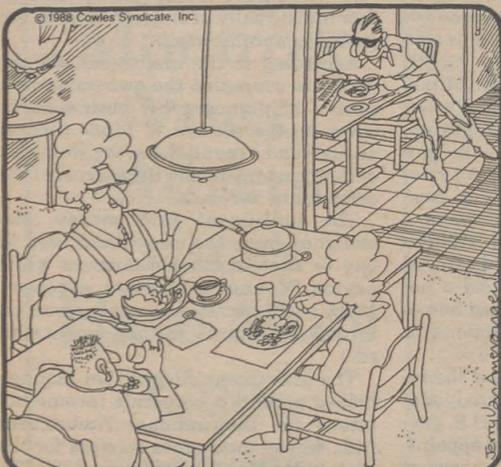

The workshop will be Wednesday, Sept. 21, 1988 at 7:00 P.M. at 3927 Essex Lane. For more information call 623-6796 ext. 48.

◆◆G.A.Y. Carnival

HEY, HEY, HEY ... come out to the parking lot of the Rock 'N' Horse bar at 1220 Taft Saturday (September 17) for the Gays Around You (GAY) Carnival. The carnival will be between 12:00 noon and 7:00 p.m. There will be games, food and fun for the whole family. The carnival is a benefit to help Stone Soup in their efforts to feed people with the AIDS virus. So, come on by and have a good time while supporting a worthy cause in the community.

Albert Goldman Has Searing Portrait Of John Lennon

By John Swenson
UPI Pop Writer
FOR THE MONTROSE VOICE

In "The Lives of John Lennon," author Albert Goldman feigns objectivity by citing scores of sources compiled over six years of research. But very little new information of importance about Lennon's life is presented here. Most of the damaging observations have already been made public in kiss-and-tell accounts by disgruntled former employees and associates.

What is new about "The Lives of John Lennon" (Morrow, 700 pp. $22.95) is the astonishingly deep contempt Goldman expresses, not just for Lennon, but Lennon's family, the other Beatles, Beatle fans, Yoko Ono, rock music in general and even many of his own sources.

The tone is clear at the outset.

On the first page Yoko appears as a drug addict. The word Goldman uses to describe her is "hideous." Lennon, who appears next, is "feeble." Their son, Sean, is "feral."

The schoolyard name-calling continues relentlessly throughout the book. Lennon's mother, Julia, is dismissed as a "frivolous little flirt," Beatles manager Brian Epstein as "a know-nothing snob." He describes the Beatles' performance by referring to them as sexual devices; George Harrison as "a lap dog burying its mess," Paul McCartney as "an ecstatic little puppy dog."

Goldman characterizes the classic soul of Motown records, which posed the most serious competition to the Beatles in the early 1960s, as "Berry Gordy's second-generation assembly-line blacks."

Of course most of Goldman's venom is reserved for Lennon, who is painted as a weak, drug-addicted, murdering pervert who steals other people's material routinely and is obsessed with homosexuality.

Goldman had to go to such lengths to tar Lennon's image because the ex-Beatle willfully presented himself as a bad guy after leaving the Fab Four. Lennon made little secret of his heroin use and often acted rudely in dramatic fashion, almost as if he wanted to shatter the public's illusions of the Beatles.

Lennon didn't provide the easy target Elvis Presley afforded Goldman in his last book, "Elvis." Presley tried to disguise his faults, allowing Goldman to shatter the public perception of the King.

To sensationalize Lennon, Goldman had to resort to the sleaziest methods, quoting the notoriously unreliable English scandal sheets and making accusations based on the thinnest evidence, contradictory testimony and innuendo.

Without the use of any significant evidence, Goldman suggests that Lennon may have committed not one, but two murders.

Goldman repeatedly ridicules Lennon's song writing and musical ability, but his preposterous stabs at music criticism make such arguments laughable. In fact, the book is riddled with factual errors about the Beatles' recording history.

By abandoning any sense of critical balance from the very beginning of the book, Goldman fails miserably as a biographer.

In the end, this bloated exercise in scorn reveals little about John Lennon but plenty about Goldman.

Goldman's fascination with Lennon's sex life is the most bizarre aspect of the book. He claims to know the number of times Lennon and Yoko had sexual intercourse during parts of their relationship.

He quotes wildly contradictory sources to "prove" the long-standing rumor that Lennon and Epstein were homosexual lovers, going as far as to imply that Epstein committed suicide because Lennon ended the relationship. Without offering any evidence, Goldman repeatedly writes that Lennon enjoyed sex with young boys.

Goldman is also vicious in his hyperbolic attacks on Yoko. He claims that she arranged to have McCartney busted for drugs in Japan by using her family influence. He cites as his sources two of her former employees who Goldman himself describes as scam artists and con men.

If Yoko had done such a thing to McCartney, why did he turn around and cooperate with her in calling for a boycott of this book?

What's In A Name

It probably wouldn't fit on a marquis but three Pittsburgh residents have filed suit saying Martin Scorsese's movie should be renamed "The Lies and Profanities of Universal Pictures as Pertaining to the Life of Our Lord Savior, Jesus Christ."

Michael Greb, Paul Metzger and Betti Logan filed suit against Universal, the distributor; Cineplex Odeon Films Inc., the producers; and King's Court Theater, where the film is being shown in Pittsburgh.

They say that even though the movie is introduced as fiction, calling it such is a lie that Universal uses to "blaspheme Christ with unlicensed freedom."

Ray The Beautiful

Ray Charles does a bang-up rendition of "America the Beautiful" and now he's campaigning to have it replace "The Star-Spangled Banner" as the national anthem.

Charles says "America the Beautiful" is more positive, much easier to sing because the vocal range required isn't as broad and it's not as martial as "The Star-Spangled Banner."

If you feel the same way, Ray wants you to write him at 8730 Sunset Blvd., 6th floor, Los Angeles, 90069.

Home Better Than Work For Pisces

By Mark Orion
Your Horoscope from The Montrose Voice
For Friday evening, September 16, through Friday afternoon, September 23, 1988:

ARIES—Having—though important—is not enough for you. The more important thing is a kind of double-edged knowledge of what it is that you have. The blade that cuts through the material world may itself be made from that world.

TAURUS—The intense desire to create something of lasting importance may begin to be fulfilled if you keep your eyes open and allow yourself to take chances. What you see may only be the seed, but take it, nurture it, and watch you grow.

GEMINI—While not usually considered the homebody of the zodiac, that's where Gemini's attention will be centered this time. All energy directed there can only bring what you're looking for. Share this happy time with a friend who's not so fortunate.

CANCER—The health or safety of someone you love may be threatened, and they're going to need all the advice and help you can give. You don't need to be an expert about anything, just a very good friend. Being there is the absolute requirement.

LEO—Figure out this one and you win a prize. The puzzle or dilemma that presents itself to you will require following your heart for the correct answer. Don't expect a reward. Don't expect anything at all. The unexpected can be a whole lot of fun.

VIRGO—Busy, busy, busy. Most of this activity is completely necessary. A lot of people require a lot of things from you, and you're able to juggle and manage it all. Take time in your few precious moments of quiet to talk to yourself about what's going on with you.

LIBRA—In the midst of trying to make something that stays, something else of a temporary nature takes your time and gives you pleasure. It's a fine distraction from all your serious effort you've been involved in, and may be just what you need.

SCORPIO—The weird and bizarre turn you off completely. The tried-and-true traditions are what give you pleasure now. Gathering with old friends for what is basic and shared is the right thing to do. Doing the right thing is very important to you now.

SAGITTARIUS—When a problem pops up that requires your attention, take care of it and get it out of the way. Once this is done, you can get back to that fascinating life of yours. A Taurus or a Scorpio or both (!) could play prominent parts now.

CAPRICORN—Your emotions may go on a roller-coaster ride now. When the ups and downs subside a bit, you'll be able to make some important decisions. Stay close to your partner, and be receptive to advice and counsel. Steady words will calm that queasy feeling.

AQUARIUS—The powerful love you've been making opens up new vistas and channels. Anything seems possible. As you approach the making of a big decision, show some caution and consideration for what its outcome will mean in the future. With this beautiful present, use foresight.

PISCES—Though you've been feeling a bit pushy and argumentative, you'd be a lot better off trusting your intuition instead of trying to analyze everything. You won't see eye to eye with co-workers, but at home it will all be heart-to-heart.

NEW YORK (UPI)—Japanese companies, ranging from pharmaceutical giants to noodle makers, are becoming a major force in the intensifying competition to develop vaccines to combat the deadly AIDS virus.

Japanese companies are joining the race mainly by establishing laboratories in the United States, a move reflecting their strategy to conduct clinical tests in the United States where the number of AIDS patients is extraordinarily large compared with Japan.

More than 69,000 Americans have been diagnosed with AIDS compared with only 264 in Asia, according to the latest statistics compiled by the World Health Organization.

The U.S. figure, representing about 64 percent of the world's total, could grow to 270,000 in 1991 and to 1.1 million by the end of 1995, unless an effective vaccine is developed, the health organization said.

In June, Ajinomoto Co., widely known as a maker of monosodium glutamate, established Lenti-Chemico Pharmaceutical Laboratory, a research company based in New Jersey to study the possibility of applying Lentinan to the treatment of AIDS.

Lentinan, for which Ajinomoto holds the worldwide patent, was introduced in April 1986 as an immunostimulant for treatment of malignant tumors. The drug is extracted and purified from "Shiitake," an edible mushroom.

Japan's Health and Welfare Ministry has long recognized the drug for its effectiveness as an adjunct to chemotherapy in the treatment of stomach cancer patients.

"Lentinan was a very successful product in Japan in the treatment of cancer and there is a desire to develop it in this country," said Dr. Maxwell Gordon, who heads Lenti-Chemico.

Gordon said clinical studies have shown that lentinan, in combination with oral tegafur, enhances the reduction of tumor size and prolongs life in patients with inoperable or recurrent gastric cancers.

Asked about the agent's use in AIDS, Gordon said an application has been filed with the Federal Drug Administration to test it for that purpose through San Francisco General Hospital.

In Japan, the health ministry has conducted clinical studies of the use of Lentinan as an AIDS treatment since January 1987.

Gordon said Lentinan is basically designed to boost the immunity systems of humans, making its side effects very mild.

The National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases, after examining a variety of agents developed to fight against AIDS, has given a high priority ranking to about 20 compounds, including AZT, while Lentinan has been given a medium ranking.

Azidothymidine, commonly known as AZT, is the only anti-AIDS drug approved by the FDA and is currently being administered to more than 20,000 AIDS patients, including 4,500 in more than 40 clinical trials.

"So far there has been no single agent which is totally effective for AIDS," said Hisao Shinohara, senior vice president of Ajinomoto U.S.A. Inc., based in New Jersey.

Ajinomoto may combine Lentinan with other drugs to market it as an anti-AIDS agent, he said.

The effectiveness of Lentinan in combination of AZT has been documented in research conducted by a joint team of Ajinomoto and Yamaguchi University in Yamaguchi Prefecture, Western Japan.

The study, published last year in the Japan Journal of Cancer Research, indicated that the proliferation of the AIDS virus has been suppressed by the combined use of the two drugs.

Dideoxyadenosine (DDA) and Dideoxyinosine (DDI), developed by the U.S. National Institute of Health and later processed into drugs by Ajinomoto, are also candidates in the fight against the AIDS virus.

Bristol-Myers Co. signed a contract with Ajinomoto in June to obtain exclusive rights in the United States for the products, which will be used by Bristol-Myers in development of anti-AIDS agent.

Dextran sulfate, developed by Ueno Fine Chemicals Industry Ltd. of Japan, is also attracting an increasing attention among AIDS patients in the United States.

Dextran sulfate, a long-chain polymer of glucose, has been used in Japan for more than two decades as agent to lower blood cholesterol.

The agent was later found effective in blocking human immunodeficiency virus or AIDS virus from damaging its human target cells. Research revealed that the drug can curb reproduction of AIDS virus by multiplying T-4 cells, which are normally destroyed when exposed to AIDS virus.

A recent clinical study of the drug conducted at San Francisco General Hospital showed its use over a period of more than six months caused no negative effects on patients, said Dr. Sachiko Kuno, assistant director of the Department of Medicine in Ueno Fine Chemicals' Research Institute.

Kuno has been working on the development of Dextran sulfate with Dr. Ryuji Ueno, a senior Ueno executive.

"All patients who took the drug under the phase-one test are still alive at this moment," Kuno said.

Dextran sulfate was designated as "high priority" drug last December by the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Disease.

The drug is now being tested in a second round of clinical trials, which enrolled at least 60 patients in about 10 hospitals across the nation to demonstrate the drug's safety and efficacy, Kuno said.

She said the testing will be completed by next February or March and it will be followed by a third round of testing, which is designed to further ensure the efficacy of Dextran sulfate by expanding the scale of the test.

Dextran sulfate drew nationwide attention in the United States in April when the FDA announced a new drug import policy allowing Americans to purchase unapproved drugs from abroad in small quantities for their personal use.

The announcement, made by FDA Commissioner Frank E. Young at an AIDS conference in Boston, was taken to indicate that the administration virtually permits the use of Dextran sulfate in the United States while not recognizing it as a commercial drug, in response to a rising demand for the drug from desperate patients looking for any sign of hope.

The FDA's decision prompted Americans to seek the drug in excess of the prescribed dosage, leading to a thriving underground market involving secret buyers' clubs or dealers for Dextran sulfate, which was created shortly after the FDA approved the drug's clinical test in May 1987.

Kuno said as many as 10,000 Americans now are obtaining Dextran sulfate through the underground market. Ueno Fine Chemicals does not manufacture or sell the drug.

Kowa Pharmaceuticals Ltd. of Japan produces nearly 85 percent of Japan's Dextran sulfate for use mainly as an anti-blood cholesterol agent, part of which is funneled into the U.S. market for the treatment of AIDS patients.

Ueno Fine Chemicals, Kuno said, expects the FDA to approve commercial production of Dextran sulfate next year.

The company is studying whether to produce the drug on its own or through licensed production, Kuno said, adding that company executives will probably begin talks early next year to select a possible business partner.

The race to develop anti-AIDS agents has spread to a noodle maker.

Nissin Food Products Co., the largest maker of fast noodles in Japan, set up a research institute in Boston in mid-June in its bid to enter the world market for anti-AIDS agents.

Capitalized at $2.8 million, the Nissin Molecular Biology Institute was established to study the development of an agent to neutralize AIDS virus.

Research is being undertaken on the basis of a study made by Tsuneya Ohno, professor at Jikei University of School of Medicine in Tokyo.

In June, Ohno announced the development of a monoclonal antibody believed to neutralize AIDS virus at an international AIDS conference in Stockholm.

The research institute's Scientific Advisory Board includes Susumu Tonegawa, a Nobel prize winner for his study on physiology and a professor at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Other Japanese companies joining the AIDS race include Nippon Zeon Co., a major synthetic rubber manufacturer, which has developed a polyvalent vaccine against hepatitis B in collaboration with Japan's National Institute of Health and the Chiba Serum Institute.

Masato Matsuo, a researcher at Nippon Zeon of America Inc., said the company is considering developing an anti-AIDS vaccine, combining the polyvalent vaccine with HGP-30, an antigen developed by Viral Technology, a Washington, D.C. drug maker.

To that end, he said, Nippon Zeon and Viral Technology have joined forces and the Japanese company is now licensed to produce HGP-30, which is scheduled for clinical testing in London this fall.

Toa Nenryo Kogyo, a refiner of petrochemical products, has developed a vaccine using the Chiba Serum Institute's attenuated virus. This technique may possibly be applied toward the development of an AIDS vaccine, an analyst at Daiwa Securities said.

When developing antibodies, antigens and other agents, most Japanese pharmaceutical companies screen the drugs to check their efficacy against AIDS, said Yutaka Eguchi, senior manager of Daiichi Pharmaceutical Corp., a subsidiary of Japan's Daiichi Seiyaku Co.

The discovery of an agent's potential medical value against AIDS makes it easier for the drugs to receive production approval from Health and Welfare Ministry, Eguchi explained.

He said the time required for official production approval for antibodies, which usually takes as much as two years, could be reduced to six months if the drugs are found effective against AIDS.

Glimpses

Amnesty International's "Human Rights Now" tour, featuring Bruce Springsteen, Sting, Peter Gabriel and Tracy Chapman, will play Oakland, Calif., on Sept. 23.

The show is in Europe now and only two U.S. stops, Philadelphia and Los Angeles, were scheduled until Oakland was added.

The Bay Area was chosen because it has a very strong Amnesty International chapter, spokesman Charles Henry said.

Some Catholic Orders Testing Applicants For HIV Infection

By Bill Kenkelen
Pacific News Service
FOR THE MONTROSE VOICE

Some U.S. Catholic male orders are testing applicants for evidence of the AIDS virus and rejecting them if it is found. Though some communities say they flatly oppose testing, most are clearly wrestling with the imposing moral, legal, medical and political questions the issue poses.

"It's happened to just about every order," said Marianist Provincial Father Patrick Tonry, referring to AIDS cases among the more than 200 male religious communities in the U.S.

The trauma and expense of AIDS patients for the religious communities to which they belong is nudging the question of testing for the AIDS virus from a quiet discussion to a growing controversy.

"No, we cannot accept anyone who tests positive for the AIDS virus," said Father Placid Barius, head of one Maine-based Franciscan order that requires applicants to take the test.

"It's a very difficult decision to make," he said. "I know that I could be hurting this man. He could have a very good vocation and many years of ministry, but who knows what will happen five to ten years down the road? So I think it is important to do this for the life of the community."

Father Joseph Blaney, provincial of the Washington, D.C.-based Oblates of Mary Immaculate, said "we're demanding it (the AIDS test) because it wouldn't be fair to the community not to. It's an economic issue." The order, he said, can't afford to take care of people with long, debilitating diseases.

The head of a large Jesuit regional province said a dispute over the issue is now raging in his order and that a decision on whether or not to begin testing will be made soon. The provincial refused to allow the use of his name, although he said he believes it will be increasingly difficult to avoid facing the issue publicly.

"We have an aging community," he said. "The number of people we take care of is already large. This disease could wipe us out."

He said the province's one AIDS case cost the order more than $100,000. He said the province's insurance company doesn't cover afflictions that can be traced to sex because the men are vowed to celibacy.

"We're sure we have other cases (AIDS) coming up," he added. "We're committed to these men. We are going to take care of them no matter what. The big question is what about the people coming in now."

Testing for the AIDS virus is an explosive political issue. Conservative legislators are pushing mandatory testing legislation in many states. Gays and many other groups are fighting the efforts because they say it will lay the groundwork for discrimination against people with the AIDS virus.

To date, only the military tests for and then excludes people who are HIV-positive in order to protect the blood supply in time of war.

The American Medical Association and the President's Commission on AIDS, as well as almost all public health agencies and organizations, are calling for legislation to ban discrimination against people who test positive for the AIDS virus.

The Catholic Church has also joined the chorus of groups opposing mandatory testing and discrimination against AIDS patients and people who test positive for the AIDS virus. The bishops of California and the Administrative Board of the United States Catholic Conference both warn against such discrimination in AIDS statements they have issued.

Don Kraft, vice president of the Catholic Health Association, said he understands the economic factors prompting some religious orders to test or consider testing for AIDS. But he opposes testing. "What if it leaks out that the person is positive; he may never get insurance. What if that person commits suicide?"

"I think they need to take a common stance. I think they need to come together to deal with AIDS financially because it's true it could wipe out a smaller community."

William Glenn, a former Jesuit who now heads the Board of Directors of the San Francisco AIDS Foundation, said testing by religious orders "makes our fight against the disease more difficult because it gives credibility to the idea that people with HIV are dispensable. It's an invitation to discriminating. This is the real world these people are making these decisions in."

Marianist Tonry said those who support testing "are good men who do not reject people with AIDS. They say there is an obligation by the order not to accept anyone who will be a burden to the community."

The average age of religious men in the United States is 56 and rising steadily. A "tri-conference" of men religious, women religious, and U.S. bishops is currently trying to fund adequate retirements for these aging communities.

1000 Rally To Protest Violence

NEW YORK—Over 1,000 gays, lesbians and concerned neighbors attended an August 30 rally on Manhattan's Upper West Side to protest recent anti-gay attacks in the area. On August 22 two men, Barry Finnegan, 19, and David Frank, 20, were attacked by a gang of youths yelling "homo" and "fag." Frank suffered a fractured elbow; Finnegan was hospitalized with a collapsed lung caused by a knife wound. The same night, another gay man was murdered while jogging in New York's Central Park. Late that week, another gay man was found dead on a Christopher Street Pier.

The rally was organized by the Gay and Lesbian Alliance Defamation to draw attention to the current epidemic of anti-gay/lesbian violence. Craig Davidson, Executive Director of GLAAD, notes that "these attacks were part of a wave of violence against gays and lesbians that is sweeping this country. Several studies have shown that gays and lesbians are now the most common victims of hate-motivated violence."

Missing Magnum

Tom Selleck disappointed the crowd and Hurd Hatfield shocked them at a showing last weekend of "The Picture of Dorian Gray," the 1938 film that starred Hatfield.

The screening was part of a black-tie benefit for animal rights at the American Film Institute in Washington, D.C., and Selleck had been scheduled to join Hatfield (they currently are filming "Her Alibi" in Baltimore) but he never showed. Hatfield, 70, rolled on to stage after the screening in a wheelchair to gasps from the audience.

He then leapt from the chair, saying, "People usually think I'm dead anyway so I thought I'd give you a little surprise."

Merv And Donald

A lot of people were surprised to see Merv Griffin and Donald Trump sitting together in a private box at the Miss America pageant in Atlantic City, N.J..

The two battled bitterly for control of the Resorts International casino a few months ago but were chatting amiably during the contest in the box of Leonard Horn, the pageant chairman.

"I asked Merv if he would mind if Donald Trump would sit in the box and he had no problem whatsoever," Horn said.

"And then I asked Donald and Donald felt exactly the same. As a matter of fact they were watching the show intently and discussing it like two schoolboys with Ivana (Trump's wife). They looked like very close friends."

Ivana wore a hot pink form-fitting strapless sheath dress that exactly matched the hot pink tie Donald was wearing.

Dreemkatz's Main Dreamer: Kenny Joe Spivey

By Bill O'Rourke
Montrose Voice A&E Editor

Kenny Joe Spivey and I did lunch the other day. My tape recorder was there and appeared to be working. But it didn't record anything. Which is really eerie when you realize what his hit play is about—vampires.

Kenny Joe told me he's had a few problems with the title. It seems that Bill Albright wrote a very positive review of the play but refused to have it printed when the Post wouldn't print the name with the review. The theater it was originally produced in suggested several other titles, like "Bite" or maybe even "Pigs Dance II."

But he's wisely stayed put behind a title that truly catches the insouciance of the play—"Suck."

And it didn't chase the audiences away. Manys the time they played to standing room only crowds. They couldn't add more folding chairs in front of the permanent chairs for fear of physically bowling them over during the climactic scene where the hero is attacking the vampires in their lair. So people would stand where they could see both sides—in front of the set and behind them, too.

Talking about that scene, you might notice some naked victims littering the stage. There are a few more every performance. Or at least different ones. Kenny Joe tells me the cast really enjoys doing it and has had to start taking turns.

When he was developing the play, Kenny Joe would let anyone be in the show who wanted to be. He'd put them in a crowd scene, maybe write them a few lines. If they did really well, he'd write them a few more. That's one reason the head vampire isn't seen till fairly late in the play. Kenny Joe hadn't found just that right person to originate the role. So he wasn't there to get his part padded.

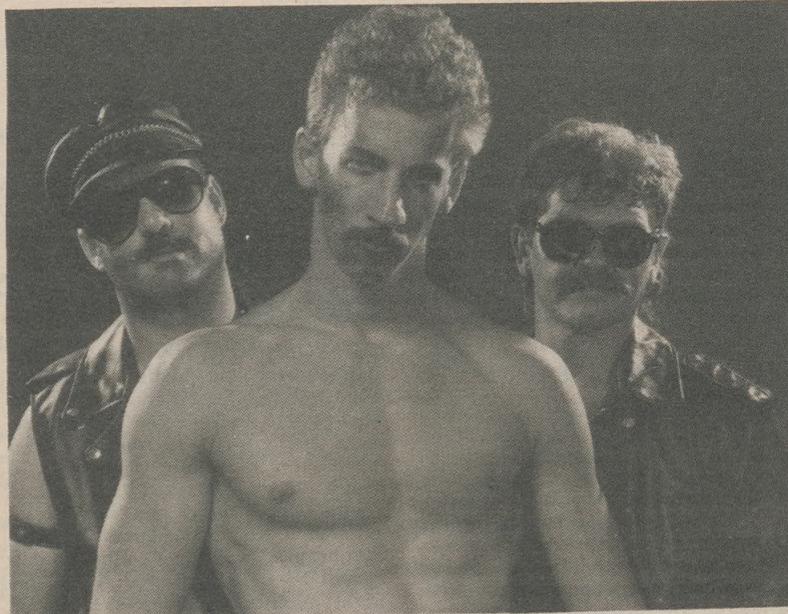

Not having planned on more than the shows at Main Street, some of the original cast had to drop out of this extension which starts this week at Chocolate Bayou. One's doing another Main Street show, one's going to school in Washington, D.C., etc. The head vampire is now being played by the man who modeled for the Parkway Athletic Club billboard.

Of course, the play is actually about AIDS. At times, when discussing the origins of the play, you can hear tears clutching at the back of Kenny Joe's throat. Like when he recalls a fellow artist who had an open coffin funeral—with a glass top in a coffin he was arranged in in a small town 10 or so miles away from the small town he was buried in. Such is fear—unreasonable. Kenny Joe wants to help teach us all that this is something that we can fight and really do something about. It's not a hopeless situation.

One dollar from each ticket in the September part of this Chocolate Bayou run will go to the Arts Against AIDS effort. The money is collected by United Way and then redistributed to groups who do direct services for PWAs.

There is a good chance that this run will be extended for several weeks next month. Kenny Joe is very happy to have made it to prime time after a year of late nights or Monday and Tuesday nights here in Houston.

He plans to take this show as far as it can naturally go. He specifically wants to take this message to San Antonio. His earlier play, "Every Morning at Dawn the Pigs Dance in Ancient Ritual. I Know. I Dance With Them," was very popular there. Unfortunately, the theater it was performed in has since burned.

And now, perhaps, his second opening here in Houston might well be postponed by a hurricane.

Eerie.
Kenny Joe and the rest of his Dreemkatz company suggest you wear or bring a crucifix to their show. And leave the children at home.

Wolfe On The Working Class

Writer Tom Wolfe loves to expound and he was doing plenty of it in Paris earlier this month, where he was promoting the French-language edition of his best-selling novel, "Bonfire of the Vanities."

He said the 20th century will be remembered as a time "in which mankind had the colossal confidence to sweep aside standards ... and start from zero."

One of the side-effects was confusion in fields ranging from architecture to politics but it allowed Americans to attain "the ultimate freedom—freedom from the constraints of religion." Wolfe says working-class Americans have become so well-to-do they have taken on the ways of aristocrats, "which means you don't have to obey the ethical bounds of monogamy or the rules against pornography." Appropriately enough, he'll address that topic in his next novel, which will deal with the new class of wealthy blue-collar Americans, including repairmen who vacation in Barbados and drink "designer water."

Monkee Business Is Bad

Davey Jones, Peter Tork, Michael Nesmith and Mickey Dolenz were no barrel of monkeys when they performed together in the 1960s and, for that matter, the Monkees revival that started a few years ago was equally turbulent, according to their agent.

David Fishof, who masterminded the comeback tour, has been battling the singers over his fees and has taken the matter to the State Supreme Court in New York City.

"The Monkees never got along," Fishof said. "They didn't get along in the 1960s and they didn't keep in touch. From the beginning of the reunion in 1985 they bickered and fought and sabotaged each other."

Fishof also claims that Jones was drunk when he went to tape a stint as a VJ on MTV and the network officials were so upset that they banned the Monkee video "Heart and Soul."

Why The Souffle Fell

By Bill O'Rourke
Montrose Voice A&E Editor

Richard Dreyfuss is one of my favorite movie actors. I usually like his films even more than Jack Nicholson's. But "Moon Overt Parador" is a near miss. It doesn't quite work.

Dreyfuss is miscast in this lead. He makes this actor cornered into becoming a dictator's stand-in truly believable, yes. But is that what we really want from a comedy?

Maybe it's the result of the baby boom generation coming to power. The Vietnamese war wasn't the only thing we protested, you know. We were up in arms about relevancy. Everything—T. V. news, college courses, etc., etc.—had to be relevant, and it had to be obvious about it, too. If it didn't have a somewhat serious sense of its own power to change things, it was highly suspect. There was no such thing as simple escapism, because everything, willingly or not, taught somebody something and if it wasn't careful it would teach the wrong thing. And how could you learn anything from sheer frivolity? (Oh, but you can.)

At the same time, we discovered the Gad given truth about what acting was all about. Actors, to be good, had to be chameleons like Dustin Hoffman. If you could easily tell who was playing the role, like John Wayne, it was automatically bad.

So, any recent comedy that wants to be a great movie loads itself down with heavy relevancy. Few comedies that don't force relevancy show any true intention to be better than grade B. But the commercial movies that go for high quality, seemingly irrelevant humor have the best box office. "Moon Over Parador" did the best box office last weekend, but it was an awfully slow weekend with little brand new competition.

Some things tip us off that this show was destined to be grade B: Lots of female tits and ass with almost no correspondingly clad men. The same floats at carnival two years running. The same star entertainer at carnival two years running. Raul Julia's final line, totally out of context with the rest of his fine performance.

But then this schizophrenic movie also makes its many stars in guest cameos really "act." In this case it means that it robs them of the shtick we've come to love and expect from them and forces them into scenes we don't feel like seeing them do. Charo could be just any blond bimbo. She doesn't do a single one of her patented shimmys. Jonathon Winters turns realistically nasty.

And Dreyfuss, like the rest of the movie, is believable and relevant and humorous in a role that one of the old style usually himself comic stars, like Bob Hope (when he was young) or Peter Sellers or maybe even Jonathon Winters would have made a tour de force.

Not Neil's Norm

Playwright Neil Simon's new play, "Rumors," which opens in San Diego Sept. 22, is supposed to be a great departure for Simon.

Simon says he has never understood what people mean by "a typical Neil Simon play."

"All of my plays are different, or so I thought," he said in an interview with the San Diego Tribune. "So, yes, I guess sometimes I did feel unappreciated or underappreciated."

But the praise for his "Brighton Beach Memoirs" trilogy "turned that around for me," Simon said.

"Rumors" is said to be a farce about an anniversary punctuated by an errant gunshot, two mistaken affairs, a temporary hearing disorder and a missing hostess. The cast includes Andre Gregory, Ken Howard, Ron Leibman and Jessica Walter.

Portraits in the Time of AIDS; People With AIDS (Diverse Works, 17)—photographs; video installation.

Kit Hall, Suzanne E. Sellers, Jean "Helgy" White and Bonnie Wilder (UH's O'Kane Gallery, 19—October 7th)—mostly watercolors.

Don Nail (Chocolate Bayou Theater, 21—October 1st)—Local artist, better known for representational work, goes abstract. Shown in lobby during "Suck" performances. Art Against AIDS.

Empathy: Contemporary Japanese Photography (1600 Smith lobby gallery, 22—November 17th).

Taos in the '30's (Parkerson Gallery, 22—October 29th)—paintings and watercolors by Grace Spaulding John.

"Z.O.A.F." by David Schwarz is currently on view at Judy Youens Gallery in a show that will close September 30th, not very long from now.

We do our best to make this list as accurate as possible but there may be some errors. Call the bar or restaurant to confirm an event.

EMERGENCY BULLETIN

As Hurricane Gilbert approaches, please take every precaution to protect your own safety.

However, in the event that you plan to congregate amongst friends during possible adverse conditions, we have purchased emergency generators, beverages, and water to carry us through the storm. If areas of Houston experience loss of electricity
WE FEEL CONFIDENT that our emergency generators will provide ample music, lighting, and the coldest beer on the Gulf Coast.

Montrose Voice Classified Advertising

These rates apply only to advertising in this section of the newspaper. For regular display advertising rates, call our Display Advertising Sales Department, 529-8490.

THE HEADLINES: Headline words in bold type, centered, are $1 each word (minimum $3 per line). (Centered bold headlines can also appear within the text or at the end of the ad, and are also $1 per word, with a minimum of $3 per line.)

THE TEXT: Each word in regular type is 40¢. (Additional regular words in "ALL CAPS" or Bold Words not in all caps are 55¢ each. Additional BOLD WORDS in all caps are 70¢ each.)

EXAMPLES:

THIS HEADLINE $3.00
Then each additional word like this 40¢.

THESE TWO LINES
HERE TOTAL $6.00
Then each additional word like this 40¢.

THESE THREE LINES
ALL CAPITAL LETTERS
CENTERED, BOLD, $9.00
Then each additional word like this is 40¢. ADDITIONAL CAPITAL WORDS LIKE THIS IN TEXT ARE 55¢ EACH. ADDITIONAL BOLD, ALL CAPS, WORDS LIKE THIS IN THE TEXT ARE 70¢ EACH.

To advertise in the next Montrose Voice, fill out this form, OR simply phone us

529-8490

daily 10am-5:30pm

We can do it all by phone, and bill you later

LONG TERM ADVERTISING: Run the same ad 4 weeks or longer, make no copy changes during the run, pay for the full run in advance, and deduct 15%. Run the same ad 13 weeks or longer under the same conditions and deduct 25%.

BLIND AD NUMBERS: Want secrecy? Ask for a Blind Ad Number. We'll confidentially forward all responses to your ad to you by mail or you can pick them up at our office. Rate is $3 for each week the ad runs. (Responses will be forwarded indefinitely, however, for as long as they come in.)

ORDERING YOUR AD: You may mail your ad in or phone it in. You can pay by check, money order, American Express, Diner's Club or Carte Blanche. Or we'll bill you.

DEADLINE: Classified ads received by 3pm Wednesday will be placed in that week's newspaper. Ads received later will be placed in the following week's newspaper.

ANSWERING A BLIND AD: Address your envelope to the Blind Ad number, c/o Montrose Voice, 408 Avondale, Houston, TX 77006-3028. It will be forwarded, unopened, to the advertiser. Enclose no money.

ADDITIONAL NOTES: A "word" is considered anything separated by "spaces," except hyphenated words are considered 2 words when each segment is a recognized word if it stood on its own. A complete phone number, including area code, is 1 word. City, state and zip is 3 words.
