

McCary, porn foe discuss obscenity

By ALICIA R. GARCIA
Staff Writer

Geneva Kirk Brooks, president of Citizens Against Pornography (CAP), and Dr. James McCary, UH psychology professor, had their first confrontation at a panel discussion of obscenity Thursday at UH.

Brooks has been a frequent critic of the attitudes and course material of several UH professors, particularly McCary. She has also rapped the university administration for not exercising more control over what professors teach.

A crowd of about 300 persons was on hand in the World Affairs Lounge, UC Underground for the panel, which also included the Rev. Dr. Allen Walling, an associate of Brooks; Joe Spiegel, owner of Academy Theaters; and Rusty Hardin, Harris County assistant district attorney.

Certain religions will project sexual guiltiness, according to McCary. "If there is evil lurking in someone's mind, that person tends to see bad and evil where it does not exist," McCary said. "Those are also the people who tend to have guilty feelings about sex."

According to McCary, people who lead their lives according to the Ten Commandments will not enjoy sex as much as others. "On the other hand," McCary said, "people who go by the Golden Rule (do unto others as you will have them do unto you) tend to enjoy sex more."

People who need strict guidelines to form their morals tend to develop feelings of guilt, according to McCary.

Rebutting McCary's statement, Walling said, "I have a Christian bias which he does not. But I am a happily married man and I have no guilty feelings about my sex life. I do feel guilt about certain uses of sex, though."

Research shows that people who are not sure about their morals will try to prevent others from doing what they consider obscene, McCary said.

McCary also pointed out that contrary to what Brooks says, he does not show the movie "Deep Throat" in his undergraduate courses.

Defending McCary, Spiegel said many things Brooks says about McCary's course are untrue. "I wish she would take McCary's course before she yells so much about it," he said.

Spiegel criticized Walling for wanting to force his personal views upon the community. "The way to censor something is by not attending or not buying it," Spiegel said. "If you let them (CAP) have their way, there is no telling where censorship will stop," he added.

At an interview following the panel discussion, Brooks said she got involved in fighting por-

'Beethoven' faces porn trial

Phi Alpha Delta Legal Fraternity will sponsor a mock obscenity trial at 10 a.m. Saturday in Krost Hall Auditorium, Bates College of Law. The trial is open to the public.

In the trial Rusty Harden and Ted Wilson, both Harris County assistant district attorneys, will prosecute Joe Spiegel, owner of Academy Theaters, on a hypothetical charge of commercial obscenity.

As evidence the prosecution will use the opening of the film "Misty Beethoven," a 1976 Erotica award winner.

Spiegel will be represented by Clyde Woody, a Houston attorney who has represented the defense in many obscenity trials.

Committee opts for stronger drinks

By JAN RICH
Staff Writer

The UC Coffeehouse may be allowed to serve stronger drinks if a recommendation abolishing their limited alcoholic content is approved next week.

The recommendation, approved by the Food Committee of the UC Policy Board would abolish the 15 per cent alcohol by volume limitation on drinks served in the UC. The recommendation will be considered by the full Policy Board in its next meeting and, if approved, will be presented to UH administration.

Mixed drinks are now sold on campus, but the alcohol content in these drinks cannot exceed a 15 per cent limit. However, this policy does not apply to catered events on campus not sponsored by the university. These events have no alcohol content limitations when serving hard liquor.

"We have been serving mixed drinks with less than 15 per cent alcohol by volume for almost two years without any problems. So we might as well remove the restrictions to make it possible to serve specialty drinks such as martinis, Black Russians and Harvey Wallbangers," said Rick Brass, Food Committee chair.

In other action, Brass requested Mannings, Inc., the UC food service, change its policy restricting UH students employed by Mannings from purchasing alcoholic beverages at the UC. The policy now states that Mannings' employees may not purchase alcoholic beverages at campus facilities even during the employees' non-working hours.

Food Committee members agreed that Mannings' employees should not drink during scheduled work hours, but that UH students should be able to enjoy all student privileges when not working.

The committee gave Mannings until its next meeting in two weeks to come up with an alternate policy for UH students.

Discussion at the meeting also focused on a student survey to assess the quality of Mannings' food service. Results from the survey will help determine if Mannings' services will be retained after March 15, when Mannings' current UH contract expires.

UH's enrollment hits record high this term

Student enrollment has climbed to 39,399 on all four campuses of the UH System for the 1977 fall term.

This figure, which is the highest student count in UH's 50-year history, represents the central campus, the downtown college, UH at Clear Lake City (UHCLC) and the UH Victoria Center (UHVC).

Dr. Joseph Champagne, assistant vice-president of the UH system, said he believes the outer campuses will continue to grow as the central campus reaches its enrollment ceiling of 30,000 students.

Some 29,297 students are now enrolled at the central campus while the downtown college counts 4,576. UHCLC reports a total of 4,832 students and UHVC has 694 students.

"Between now and 1990, the demand on the UH system will expand enrollment from its present 39,399 to about 66,000 students," Champagne said.

He attributed the campuses' increased enrollment to the diversity of curriculum such as additional degree programs and the rapid growth of Houston's suburban population.

"Colleges nationwide are preparing for the declining numbers of the college-aged group, but UH is in the position for phenomenal growth as the city of Houston continues to experience a population increase," Champagne said.

This bike appears to be a rip-off victim, but a closer look reveals that its owner avoided just such a disaster.

C.A.R.P. goals clarified

By PATRICK HICKEY

America was originally settled by people escaping religious and political persecution in Europe and elsewhere. Nevertheless, religious intolerance has been a consistently visible phenomenon here, even with such a history. The early Quakers were imprisoned for refusing to swear oaths. Fear and mistrust of Catholics when they first migrated led them to settle their own colony in Maryland, known for its tolerance. However, Jews and Unitarians were banned. Jews have often been stereotyped as "agents of Zionism" whose loyalty to the American system was in doubt. Even the early Baptists were no exception. Mistrust and fear isolated them as an untouchable sect until they passed the test of time. Realizing the imperfection of man, our founding fathers made religious freedom a cornerstone of American democracy, protecting it in the First Amendment to the Constitution.

Historically, the problem seems to arise when new ideas or groups with different values begin to live together within society, but before any real understanding of the differences can take place. After a period of exposure, the worst and most irrational fears these groups have about each other prove unfounded, and real acceptance and respect begins.

In this light, as president of the Collegiate Association for the Research of Principles, C.A.R.P., I would like to respond to one student's commentary in Wednesday's Cougar that C.A.R.P. is a "deceptive front for the Unification Church" and therefore unworthy of campus recognition.

It is a well known fact that numerous campus organizations have their roots in larger already existing organizations. Whether it be the Young Democrats, the university law club or any one of the campus Christian or Jewish fellowships. The connection is obvious.

C.A.R.P. was originally founded by students who were inspired by the Unification Principles taught by Rev. Sun Myung Moon. From the very beginning we have made the goals of C.A.R.P. crystal clear:

- 1) The revival of the Judeo-Christian foundation of democracy.
- 2) The unification of the sciences and religion.
- 3) The revitalization of education.
- 4) The unification of eastern and western

- 5) The promotion of welfare within the community.
 - 6) The new critique and counterproposal of communism.
 - 7) The reformation of university life.
- Numerous students and professors who have attended our programs I'm sure will testify to their validity and content.

Fear and mistrust of our values and jealousy of our rapid growth and success have led to these irrational charges. I want to assure the whole university community that they will not have to depend on Steve Watts as the student spokesman to explain the real intentions of C.A.R.P. We have and will continue to reveal ourselves in the programs C.A.R.P. sponsors and the spirit of service and inspiration we bring to university life.

Jesus' wise words to skeptics of his age were that if someone is not right and not of God, they were not to be worried about, for they wouldn't go far anyway. But if something does deserve an unselfish good and is of God, it will never be buried by the passing waves of ignorance and opposition. Let's wait and look and see what C.A.R.P. really is. C.A.R.P. doesn't spell Moon. It spells a challenge and a hope for the cynical '70s. Thank you.

Spies bearing gifts

Recent disclosures that colleges and universities across the country unwittingly pursued research funded by the CIA fifteen years ago may seem irrelevant today, but the story behind it provides food for serious thought.

Last month CIA Director Stansfield Turner told a Senate investigating committee that 44 schools had participated in secret research in behavior control, and three Texas universities, including UH, were subsequently notified they were among the 44.

Noting that most of the universities and researchers involved were unaware of the source of funds—and even the overall object of the collective research—Turner called the MK-ULTRA experiments "abhorrent." Some of the research involved the use of mind-altering and psychedelic drugs on human subjects. Such research conducted in the military resulted in one suicide and reduced several persons being tested to vegetables.

President Hoffman asserts that the research conducted at UH was in "basic science" and did not involve drugs or human subjects.

We do not challenge that statement. But knowing the purpose of the overall collection of research sponsored by the CIA, we cannot accept that the package could ever be considered "in line with UH goals"—which is the ultimate criterion used by research administrators in seeking and accepting grant funds.

There seems to be no doubt that UH, the University of Texas and Baylor were unwittingly used in the MK-ULTRA project. It is difficult and probably unfair to put the blame on officials at any of these universities.

But the incident should be a clear signal to administrators. Research (or research findings) makes the university look good and builds its reputation—and UH has given research more emphasis in recent years, seeking more and more money for more and more projects.

But engaging in such a project today would not enhance the quality or reputation of UH, and in fact would be totally unworthy of a great institution of human development.

If that's what we're trying to be.

Another view on the canal

By GASTON SOLLS REGIS

It really surprises me the lack of common sense some people show. I am referring to the letter by W.B. Lott published in the Sept. 21 Cougar.

Lott sustains that, "the United States of America (should) keep the Panama Canal, that the nation of Panama (should) become a state of the United States and that a railroad (should) be built from North America into South America."

First of all Mr. (or Mrs.) Lott, how do you dare suggest that Panama should become part of the United States when in fact Panamanians are fighting for their complete independence from the United States? How democratic would it be to coerce or force the union of a country, such as Panama, with the United States if the population of that country is completely opposed to that idea? Don't you think that if this were possible and convenient for both countries, it would have been done long ago?

Second, I hope you realize there are several countries between the United States and Panama. I assume you know there is already a road, the Panamerican Highway, which connects North and South America. I also assume that with your proposed railroad, each country would be sovereign over the portion of the railroad passing through its territory. If it is otherwise, and if you want the United States to control all of it, I want you to analyze something. Remember that Panama (just one small nation) is fighting for complete sovereignty on its own territory. I wonder how you think a United States controlled railroad from North to South America would succeed, when in fact that railroad would be violating the territorial integrity of several nations, not just of one, as is the case with the canal in Panama.

Last, but not least, is the point of the United States keeping the Panama Canal. This is a very complicated matter to discuss, but I think maybe you, by just reading the new best-seller "The Path Between The Seas" by David McCulloch, or any history book, would discover some very surprising facts about the matter that would change your present opinion or, at least, make you more careful when voicing your stand in this delicate issue.

Any person wanting to express his opinion regarding the Panama Canal or the new treaties should inform himself very well. Many of the articles, not only in the Cougar, but also in other newspapers, show an astonishing lack of information and understanding of the basic problems.

Radiation 'risky'; new policy asked

By JAN RICH
Staff Writer

The UH Faculty Senate is recommending changes in safety procedures used in handling radioactive material as a response to allegations made last May that routine safety measures are not being followed.

Recommendations to change the reporting duties of the radiation safety committee and specialist are being given to the UH administration by the senate after a three-month investigation of radiation monitoring procedures. The investigation involves a list of charges of possible unsafe radiation monitoring procedures submitted to Dr. Donald Lutz, faculty affairs committee chair, by an unnamed faculty member.

Among the charges is an allegation that some containers of radioactive material arriving on campus are not checked by instruments for radiation leaks. Failure to check for radiation leaks violates federal safety laws.

Other unsafe procedures cited in the list involve a lack of calibrating procedures (procedures to check the strength of radiation) on substances emitting radiation. Radiation is emitted from a variety of materials used on campus, ranging from microwaves to laser beams.

Approximately 25 departments on campus use radioactive material. "The university has grown so quickly into an institution we have not had time to respond to what that means. We have to react to the fact it's (radiation) a much bigger problem than 10 years ago," Lutz said.

If the UH administration does not respond to the senate's proposed changes for radiation safety, the senate will initiate another more extensive investigation into radiation handling procedures on campus.

Candidate will talk to HPD; emergency boxes 'feasible'

A candidate for director of University Security (UHS) told students Wednesday he would talk with the Houston Police Department (HPD) about enabling UHS to respond to calls from nearby student apartments not on UH property.

Robert Sutley, who has been director of campus safety at Rollins College in Winter Park, Florida since 1973, also said that "he can't make any promises other than to talk to HPD deputy chief Thomas Mitchell.

"At Rollins College, we have been able to work this out with the Winter Park police department," Sutley said. However, UH is a much larger school than Rollins, which enrolls only about 2,000 resident and daytime commuter students.

Sutley also said he believed a system of emergency call boxes would be "feasible" and added he would try to overcome budgetary problems that might keep UHS from expanding such a program.

There is presently an emergency box located in parking lot 1-A, near Moody Towers. The box was installed as a pilot program by which the effectiveness of the system could be tested.

Editor's note: this is the second installment in a series on the five candidates for director of University Security.

Brenner

One of the hottest comedians around, David Brenner, will appear at 8 tonight in the Music Hall.

Brenner, at one time a successful writer-producer-director for documentaries and studio shows, decided to become a comedian after listening to depressing news on the radio during a depressing three-day summer storm.

Now a rising star in the business, Brenner sums up his career goals: "Make people laugh as heartily as they can for as long as I'm able."

Last year Brenner was voted Male Comedy Star of the Year by the American Guild of Variety Artists.

Anderson Fair has reopened with air conditioning; a menu of beer, wine, nachos and cheeses; and a widely varied schedule of talent. Today and Saturday their bill includes three soloists performing their own original material.

Eric Taylor is an acoustic guitarist who specializes in writing and singing sensitive "storytelling" songs. Nancy Griffith, from Austin, varies her style from soft ballads to fast-stomping saloon-style songs. Also writing most of her own material, Linda Lowe is a lyricist who puts musical emphasis on the words of her gentle ballads.

The programs start around 9 p.m.

At 8 tonight and Saturday the Coffeehouse in the UC will feature Bruce McElheny, who opened John Klemmer's recent Houston show. McElheny plays 12 string-slide guitar and writes his own music with touches of progressive country, blue grass and folk.

Program Council will present two short films at 10 p.m. today, on the hill behind the UC.

"Celebration at Big Sur" is the biggest attraction of the two. It's a rock documentary with performers Joan Baez; Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young; Joni Mitchell; John Sebastian and Mimi Farina, among others.

The other film, "Allures," is a fantasy voyage through the reaches of outer space achieved through a series of mathematically precise abstracts.

Rusty Wier and Steve Fromholtz will headline an eight-hour concert from 2 to 10 p.m. Saturday. B.W. Stevenson is another Austin based musician scheduled to appear at Rod Kennedy's outdoor theater on Quiet Valley Ranch, nine miles south of Kerrville.

Dee Moeller, Milton Carroll, Allen Damron, Butch Hancock, John Vandiver and Marcia Ball are also scheduled.

The progressive country-rock festival will have booths available for craftsman and flea market sellers. The ranch gates will open at noon. Overnight camping permits will be available at the gate.

Ticket information for the concert may be obtained by calling (512) 896-3800 after 10 a.m.

Pineapple

All the houseplants in your collection don't have to come from a nursery or plant shop. You would be surprised at the number of growable throwaways that pass through your kitchen.

Even though avocado seeds and sweet potatoes are among the most popular, with a bit of effort and patience a pineapple can bear a lovely bromeliad.

The ground rule in salvaging such a plant is to make sure, upon selecting the pineapple, the center growth in the leafy top of the fruit is still green. The outer foliage may be brown, but if the inner leaves are fresh it not only indicates that the plant is "alive," but that the fruit within is not dry.

Twist off the growing top of the fruit (frame 1). The leaves tend to be spiny, so you may want to handle them with a towel or cloth.

Now remove several of the lower leaves in order to expose the stem and root structure (frame 2).

Next, bury the roots in a loose, porous soil mixture (frame 3) which should be comprised of loam, peat and sand.

After moistening the soil and trimming the brown tips of the lower leaves, this bromeliad can be maintained by keeping water in the foliage cup and watering the potting mixture occasionally. For the best results, keep in an east window for the present, but late in the fall switch to stronger sunlight.

Foods class serves lunch

For only a couple of bucks you can have a meal prepared by the home economics department, according to the class instructor. She said it won't be an all-you-can-eat affair, but no one will go away hungry.

A commercial foods production class, taught by Jennifer Dean, will prepare meals to be served at noon on five different Wednesdays from Sept. 28 through Nov. 16.

Each meal will be served in a different style. One will be short order with hamburgers made to order; the others will include two sit-down meals, a buffet and one cafeteria style. All will be served in Room 111, Isabel Cameron Building, at the corner of Wheeler and Cullen streets.

The menus will include homemade bread, a meat, vegetables, salad and drink, but each will be different. The buffet will be a special Thanksgiving spread.

Everyone is invited to buy a meal ticket: drop by Room 110, Isabel Cameron Building, and leave your name. Dean said there are only about 30 tickets left.

Renowned poet to expand writing program

By PATRICIA FUHRER

Many mothers bronze their babies' shoes as keepsakes. Cynthia Macdonald, UH English department's new creative writing coordinator, has her son's feet in a velvet-lined box.

In the poem "Departure," from her book "Amputations," she figuratively amputates and saves Scot's feet.

Her son Scott, a senior at St. John's School in Houston, said, "I'm very proud of my mother. I admire her incredible biting wit." He said nothing about missing his feet.

Macdonald's poetry has appeared in magazines and anthologies. Her new long poem, "Burying the Babies," is in the current issue of "North American Review" magazine.

She recently received an award of recognition from the American Academy and Institute of Arts and Letters.

Macdonald commutes to UH every other week from Baltimore, where she is professor of "The Writing Seminars" at Johns Hopkins University.

She was brought here to expand the creative writing program in the UH English department.

Dr. John McNamara, chair of the English department and the person most responsible for bringing Macdonald to UH, said, "I like her poetry, and she also has experience in planning.

"Her stature as a poet made Cynthia Macdonald a good choice to set up the program. It will also enable her to recruit a senior 'distinguished writer' to act as a permanent coordinator."

Macdonald said many good writers have left Houston because poets here write in relative isolation.

She and McNamara want an expanded creative writing program at UH to become a focal point for writing and writers.

"I'm really evangelistic about this program," Macdonald said in a recent interview. "There is an abundance of talent in Houston."

Before she began publishing poetry, Macdonald was a

Cynthia Macdonald

professional opera singer. According to Barbara Rescke, a visiting instructor in the UH Humanities and Fine Arts department, Macdonald also won several awards on the west coast in opera auditions.

"Oh, I was a lirico spinto (soprano) but that's in the past," Macdonald said.

Not too far past, apparently. She has just written the libretto for a one act opera composed by Dr. Thomas Benjamin of the UH music department.

"It's not poetry, and I told him he could cut it wherever he wanted," she said, pushing back her long hair.

Macdonald received a BA from Bennington College in Vermont, and an MA in creative writing from Sarah Lawrence College in Massachusetts.

Her first book, "Amputations," was published in 1972. It was followed by "Transplants" in 1976. Her new book entitled "(W)holes" will be coming out next year.

"Poetry is like a disease; it comes on you," Macdonald said, quoting American poet Robert Penn Warren. "I write because I must write," she said with a smile. "I could choose to give up singing, but I could never choose to give up writing. I use dramatic monologue," she said. "It is one of the ways a poet has of shaping emotional experience and making it art."

'Poetry is like a disease; it comes on you. I write because I must write.'

McNamara said Macdonald expresses the sense of personal crisis that many of us feel. "But she works through the crisis," he said. "Her optimism and strength of character are accessible in the language she uses."

To the uninitiated reader, titles like "Amputations" imply more blood than optimism. It requires a certain amount of courage to approach Macdonald after reading the editor's note in "Amputations" which describes her as "a poet from the grotesque."

Nevertheless, if one is willing to plow ahead, Macdonald's poems can have tremendous impact. One student admitted to becoming so caught up in the momentum of "Amputations" that she peeked at the endings to see how the poems would turn out.

Cynthia Macdonald's reaction to this most unpoetic reading of her work was a chuckle. "That's marvelous!" she said.

The degree of autobiography in her poems is irrelevant, Macdonald said.

"I haven't had a mastectomy, nor did I try to commit suicide," she said in reference to her poems. "I don't like to separate fiction and self. In poetry, one's own experience is extended and joined to fiction."

Then she laughed, snapped her lorgnette closed and leaned forward in her chair. "You wouldn't ask a fiction writer if all his stories were 'real,' would you?" she asked.

Organ plays solo since lightning jolt.

PLANO, Tex. (AP) —No one has to be sitting at the keyboard to make music on the organ in Gloria Denny's home.

Denny claims that it has been playing pop and country tunes since lightning struck near her home one day recently.

STREET CORNER POWER

by david quine

Mysteries of Egypt

Perhaps the greatest mystery to be uncovered from Egyptian mythology is the uncanny ability of "Street Corner Power." The pyramids, the sphinx and the pharaohs mean nothing when compared to this.

Amazing experiments have been conducted on street corners by the famous nuclear physicist and child prodigy with the harmonica, Dr. Alfons Brillo. Brillo was alerted to these secret powers one evening when he was standing on a street corner and was unexpectedly picked up by a bus.

This action began to carve question marks in the doctor's brain and he soon began to conduct other experiments with street corners and strange objects.

Thanks

He bought two cans of whipped cream and then very carefully placed one on a street corner and one in the middle of the road. To his amazement, the one in the road was run over several hundred times whereas the one on the street corner wasn't even used for so much as a dessert topping.

"There are remarkable preservation qualities," the doctor wrote in his journal, "to street corners."

But just what is this amazing power of street corners? Well, that's hard to say. It is believed the ancient Egyptians were the first to discover this phenomenon while attempting to deal with the dog-curling problem.

"They keep going on the corners," a high official remarked. "There must be something significant to that."

And it is only through Dr. Brillo's tireless research that this knowledge has been unearthed. We all owe him a big "Thank you" for that. To pay us back for our gratitude, the doctor has collected all of this information into a convenient, pocket-sized pamphlet which he is providing free of charge. All you have to do to receive yours, is send $29.95 for the portable home version of "The Brillo Street Corner."

Yes, now you can have your very own street corner right in your own home. Just think, the wisdom of the ages could be sitting next to your sofa.

Cure-all

For your money you receive an authentic reproduction of the original corner where Dr. Brillo made his discovery. There are replicas of the fireplug, a street sign with stick-on letters enabling you to apply your own last name, and a little figurine with a magnetic base of Dr. Brillo in a trance.

As an extra added bonus to make sure the corner is aligned with true north (to match the original corner in Egypt,) there is a jumbo compass and bottle opener.

And for a minimal additional cost ($49.50) you can order a full-size high impact plastic street corner large enough for you or your friends to sit under. These are much more effective than the miniature models and enable you to "cure all known illnesses and develop a whole new personality." With extended exposure you may have to point to your face and ask strangers, "Who is this changed-for-the-better person?"

Blessed by the doctor

And remember, there is a whole line of street corner hats and T-shirts available. These contain the slogan, "Be the first on your block to use The Corner" and a silk screen of Dr. Brillo looking humble. Just check the box beside the items you want.

So hurry and mail those checks today. This is a limited offer. In the very near future Dr. Brillo will no longer be able to personally bless every model and insure its authenticity. He is going into the aluminum siding business.

... for art's sake

There will be two programs of free music in the Hermann Park Miller Outdoor Theatre this weekend. The Composers—Performers Group of Montreal and New York will play two concerts of contemporary music at 8:30 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

Included in the programs will be three world premieres: on Saturday, Sergio Cervetti's "Bits and Pieces (and Moving Parts)" and Jon Deak's "The Fearsome Fate;" on Sunday, Martin Gottfrit's "Red Giant, White Dwarf." There will be several other pieces on both programs. No tickets are required.

Drama

The drama department at the University of St. Thomas is performing Harold Pinter's "The Caretaker." The play is a drama about an old bum and the two brothers who give him shelter. The program plays at 8 p.m. today and Saturday, and Sept. 28 to Oct. 1, in Jones Theatre, located at Yoakum and Sul Ross.

campus films

THE 39 STEPS

Director: Alfred Hitchcock; Today at 1 p.m. in the Pacific Room, UC Underground, and 7:30 p.m. in Agnes Arnold Auditorium I; British; 1935.

"The 39 Steps" is one of those rare films that never seems to age at all. It's as much fun on the 10th viewing as on the first.

It was Alfred Hitchcock's first classic, and it contains all the elements of good Hitchcock films: a hero running from the law for a crime he didn't commit, a search for the real criminals and a love story between the hero and a woman he just happens to meet.

Robert Donat is very good as Hannay, the man on the run, and Madeleine Carroll is better as the girl he gets involved with. The banter between them still seems sophisticated today.

And if that is not enough, there's a slow-moving camera, panning with Hanay through the marshes as the real criminals hunt him down; the frightening jump-cut from the apartment where a murder has just taken place; the villain with only three fingers; and a magnificent climax in an English music hall.

H.N. GRAHAM

"TRUST WHAT YOU KNOW"

"Just learning about something isn't really enough. You have to trust yourself to use the knowledge. That's having confidence. How else could I do something as complicated as this?"

And if you haven't used tampons yet, knowing more about Tampax tampons' protection can give you another kind of confidence. That's why you'll find instructions and answers to the questions young women ask most often in every package.

Cougars hopeful despite injuries

By DAVID MUNDY
Sports Writer

Item: A football team from Houston has just battled two of the nation's top collegiate teams in one week.

Item: While battling those two teams, this Houston team has lost its starting quarterback for the season, and three key defensive players are out with injuries.

Item: This same Houston team has been dropped from a ninth ranking nationally to 19th in one poll (UPI) and has disappeared completely from the other (AP).

Misfortunes have beset the Houston Cougars thus far this season, and with an upcoming schedule that features more nationally ranked teams (Texas Tech, Texas A&M, and resurging Texas and Arkansas), it would seem that the Coogs are destined for more woes. This may be true, but bright spots are beginning to appear that could tell a different story.

First of all, the Coogs travel to Salt Lake City to face the University of Utah Utes Saturday. The Utes lost last week to Oklahoma 62-24.

Next, observe the Cougar running game. Alois Blackwell moved into the 13th spot ahead of Warren McVea in all-time UH career rushing. Blackwell has 1466 career yards, 178 of them this season. Danny Davis had 151 yards through the Penn State game, and his successor, Delrick Brown, admits to being primarily a "running quarterback." All four Cougar touchdowns so far have come on the ground.

Don Bass, in two games, has already caught 50 per cent of his 1976 total of 17. He currently ranks third among Southwest Conference receivers with eight receptions for 143 yards. Flanker Rickey Maddox is running close behind with six catches totaling 79 yards.

Looking at the defense, where the injury list would seem to hurt the most, Bobby Harrison leads the team in tackles. Harrison, formerly a linebacker until starting nose guard Robert Oglesby was sidelined with an injury, has 16 tackles to date, with four assists. The linebacker corps, also supposed to be hurting, occupies the next three rankings: Sonny Privett with 12 tackles, Steve Bradham with 15 and Willis Williams with 14.

Also to be considered in any analysis of the Cougars' performance so far are the special teams. Punter Jay Wyatt has outkicked his opposition with an average of 38.2 yards per boot to 37.5. The Cougars have allowed only 3.8 yards per punt return, while Rickey Maddox has returned five punts for a 9.6 average, including one for 40 yards against UCLA.

Perhaps the most difficult problem the Cougars must overcome is the pass defense, which has allowed 245 yards in each game so far. Enemy passers have completed 60.8 per cent of their passes and have had none intercepted. Although cornerback Anthony Francis is still termed "doubtful" for the Utah game, speculation is that he may see action again soon. Gerald Cook, who was shaken up in the Penn State game, will be healthy for Saturday's contest.

Even with the assorted problems plaguing the Cougars, these bright spots are beginning to appear. The Cotton Bowl champs still have not begun SWC play, and after last week's loss to Penn State, they voice new determination.

Utah preview

UH should drum Utes again

By RANDY GOLDSOBEL
Sports Writer

This Saturday, the Houston Cougars travel to historic Salt Lake City, Utah to do battle with the University of Utah Utes. The Cougars will try to rebound from last week's debacle against Penn State, and they will be showcasing new quarterback Delrick Brown.

Some people may be wondering what Utes are. Well, they are a tribe of American Indians whose sacred burial grounds have always been in the Western Plains. Unfortunately, Utah football teams have rarely played like the savage, ferocious Indians depicted in the movies but rather with the hapless docility of those on the reservation. There are no Geronimos, Sitting Bulls or Jim Thorpes to lead the Utes to victory.

Utah, a member of the Western Athletic Conference (WAC), has been a very poor football team the last few seasons. In both 1974 and 1975 they recorded atrocious 1-10 records and were regulars on Steve Harvey's exclusive Bottom 10 list.

Last year they registered a 3-8 record including an embarrassing 43-22 shellacking at the hands of the woeful Rice Owls. They were 3-3 in the WAC and finished in fourth place. The team has been so downtrodden that the players would probably sink in the Great Salt Lake.

This season Utah has a new coach, Wayne Howard, who will be trying to lead the Utes out of the darkness of purgatory. He had a successful three year stint at Long Beach State, with his teams going 23-10.

JV vs. LSU

The JV Kittens will play the LSU Bengals at 3 p.m., Monday, Sept. 26 in Jeppesen Stadium.

The game will start the first of a three-week homestand for the Kittens.

The contest will be broadcast on KUHF, 88.7

Amity LSAT SEMINARS

OCTOBER-TEST PROGRAMS BEGIN SEPTEMBER 23, 24, AND 30.

Taking the Law Boards this October or December? Thorough preparation requires Amity's unique personal approach. Why face the exam alone when you can have Amity's team of test specialists on your side? Consider the resources of the nation's most student-oriented preparation for the LSAT:

- CONVENIENT WEEKEND SCHEDULING CLOSE TO EACH LSAT TEST DATE
- NATION'S MOST SPECIALIZED TEAM-TEACHING APPROACH
- 12-STUDENT AVERAGE CLASS SIZE
- CONTINUALLY-UPDATED CURRICULUM

Intensive courses arranged to avoid conflict with academic schedules. Systematic, strategy-minded instruction with integrated practice testing. Separate classes in each subtest area focus attention on the special requirements of each test section.

The most expert test instruction available, because each instructor is a specialist in the LSAT area he teaches. Each student works with five different instructors, specializing in writing, logic, business judgment, math, and legal reasoning.

More individual attention and involvement than in any other course. The nation's best student-faculty ratio. Small seminar classes have a guaranteed maximum of 18 students (and an average class size of 12). Instructors give constant careful attention to individual questions, problems, and analysis of errors.

A teaching curriculum wholly revised for the 1977-78 testing year, reflecting the substantial changes in LSAT content. Challenging practice material, concentrating on the upper half of the LSAT's range of question difficulty, best prepares students for the rigors of the exam.
