SMU fans express racist sentiments, which helped them little in Saturday's 71-70 loss to UH's basketball team in Moody Coliseum. The Coogs were visibly perturbed by the Ponies' lack of social grace.

Shooting spurs open forum

By Marci Pearl

Stronger campus security was urged by students at an open forum with the Policy and Procedures subcommittee of the Residence Halls Policy Board in Oberholtzer Hall Friday.

A shooting incident in UH parking lot 8A January 27 has resulted in demands for increased security measures.

The majority of the students at the meeting were residents of Settegast Hall, the closest hall to the scene of the incident.

Marsha Stone, chairman of policy and procedures, asked the students how they felt about a lobby connecting Taub Hall and Settegast, similar to the one between Bates and Law Halls.

Students told her security in the parking lots is more important than additional measures for the residence halls. "Once trespassers get through the lots, it's easy to get into the dorm areas," a student explained.

Students suggested an increase in the number of foot patrols and police cars. One student favored police cars since they can usually respond with greater efficiency and speed than foot patrols. Also, their presence can be a deterrent to traffic coming on campus looking for trouble, the students said.

Director of Housing Bruce Gurd said campus security is understaffed due to the lack of patrolmen, not funds. "We have the money to spend for improving security conditions."

Amy Sbarra, a student, proposed a newsletter to inform students of what is being done as far as security measures. Another student suggested such newsletters could be distributed by the resident advisors and discussed at floor meetings.

Gurd said, "The security has got to be an ongoing thing or the impact will be lost." He said residents must not forget about the security measures because of exams or other matters.

Bobby Brownstein, manager of residence halls, discussed plans for closing parking lot 1A's entrances on Calhoun and Wheeler after 7 p.m. on a trial basis of 30 days. If this measure proves effective, similar procedures will be taken in lot 8A, Brownstein said. "This should deter people from driving through the lot," he explained.

Bruce Gurd said the university has allocated $100,000 to increase lighting in lots 8A, 7C, and 4E, installation of light bulbs in lots 2A and 3A and on the street by Bates School of Law.

RHPB member Clark Newman said residents are responsible for locking the doors to their rooms and taking their key with them. They should also call security if they see a suspicious person in the dormitories.

Bribery probe raises question of entrapment

WASHINGTON (AP) - FBI Director William Webster and top Justice Department lawyers closely monitored the bureau's largest political corruption investigation to avert charges of entrapment because the probe implicated eight members of Congress.

Sources said the FBI was not the first to suggest bribes to the public figures and that videotape evidence will show there was no entrapment.

Code-named "Operation Abscam," the investigation used undercover FBI men posing as representatives of an Arab sheik offering bribes to win a casino gambling license and other favors.

At least 20 public officials and 10 lawyers and businessmen were implicated over 14 months, a source familiar with the investigation said.

The source, who asked not to be named, said that FBI agents paid out almost $500,000 to less than 10 officials.

"Some arranged meetings or did other favors," the source said.

In addition to state and local officials in New Jersey and Pennsylvania, the source said those who became subjects of the probe were: U.S. Sen. Harrison A. Williams, Jr., D-N.J., and U.S. Reps. John M. Murphy, D-N.Y.; Frank Thompson, Jr., D-N.Y.; Michael O. Myers, D-Pa.; Raymond F. Lederer, D-Pa.; John W. Jenrette, D-S.C.; John P. Murtha, D-Pa., and Richard Kelly, R-Fla.

Those contacted denied any wrongdoing.

Sources said that Webster and Assistant Attorney General Philip Heymann watched closely to avoid entrapment, a frequent risk in undercover investigations that constitutes a defense against conviction.

To wage a successful entrapment defense, attorneys must prove the law enforcement officer instigated the crime and that the defendant was not otherwise predisposed to join in it.

But one source said, "The FBI undercover men did not suggest bribes to the subjects. Originally, they were not investigating political corruption, but running a phony fencing operation for stolen art, stocks and bonds. Informants and lawyers who came to them brought in officials seeking bribes."

As another protection against entrapment, the FBI videotaped some of the ostensible bribery transactions, including some in an expensive house in the fashionable Georgetown section of Washington. "When the videotapes are shown, it'll prove there wasn't entrapment," said one source.

About 100 FBI agents began interviewing the 30 subjects of the probe on Saturday to advise them of the investigation, read them their rights and question them. "Most of them told the FBI to go to hell," said one source.

No charges have been filed, nor arrests made, but several sources said federal officials were planning to present their evidence to one or more grand juries, perhaps as early as this week.

Masked gunman raid party at residence of Chancellor

Masked gunmen burst into the home of UH Chancellor Barry Munitz Saturday, robbing him and his dinner guests of cash, jewelry and other items.

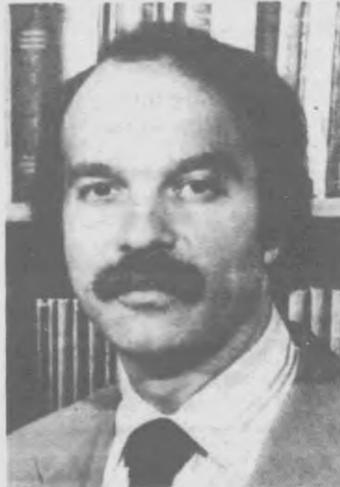

Munitz said three or four males with ski masks and gloves came in through the back door of his house in northwestern Houston at about 10 p.m. Sat.

"We were all eating dessert when they broke in," Munitz said. The gunmen tied Munitz, his wife, and his eight guests with ropes and placed them in the living room, he said.

Munitz said the assailants stayed about 45 minutes before leaving.

"We have no idea who they were," Munitz said. Although he and his guests were jostled about by the gunmen, no one was seriously injured, Munitz emphasized. "We are very depressed but physically intact," he said.

Munitz said he does not know the value of the items

taken. "We're still trying to piece everything together."

Munitz added that he and his guests do not know if the gunmen used a car in the robbery. After the assailants left, Munitz and his guests managed to free themselves from the ropes and called the police at 11:00 p.m.

New Mexico prison revolt subdued; rebellious inmates free all hostages

SANTE FE, N.M. (AP)—National Guardsmen and state police regained control of the besieged New Mexico State Prison on Sunday and officials said all the remaining hostages were safe after being held nearly 36 hours by rebellious inmates.

Without firing a shot, scores of Guardsmen and a police SWAT team entered the grounds of the smoldering prison at 2:45 p.m. CST to end a siege that had left at least eight inmates dead and 50 persons hospitalized, officials said. Fire damage to the prison was estimated at $10 million.

"We're in control right now," said Corrections Commissioner Bud Richards. "Not a shot has been fired."

According to official counts, the convicts were still holding three of the 15 prison guards originally taken hostage when authorities moved in. But an inmate leader, Vincent Candelaria, said all hostages had been released.

Corrections Division Director Felix Rodriguez, who had been negotiating with leaders of the revolt, also indicated all the guards had been set free.

Jill Marron, Gov. Bruce King's press secretary, said three guards were still in the compound when the SWAT team of about 75 officers moved in.

"The guards who remain inside the penitentiary appear to be safe at this time," she said.

Marron said the prisoners knew the police officers were going in and said there did not appear to be any resistance.

"We are peacefully taking the penitentiary by negotiation and it appears to be going smoothly," she said.

The governor, who had said earlier the decision on the retaking of the prison was up to "the professionals" was advised of the plan, Richards said.

Editorial: Review of U.S. military needed

Americans have been caught up by the Carter Doctrine. In an election year where candidates are accusing the President of "not getting tough," the people have responded that the President has gotten tough.

More than 64 percent of those polled agree with the Carter Doctrine that calls for military intervention if any "attempt is made by any outside force" to gain control of the Persian Gulf. This has to be the most frightening poll since the Gallup Poll of 1963 that cited 74 percent of Americans as favoring armed intervention in Southeast Asia.

We don't believe that the mighty draft machinery that has lain so idle for so long will function as smoothly as legislators anticipate. Defense department estimates released over the weekend indicate it takes at the minimum three-and-one-half months to mold the Madison Avenue man into a fighting machine. Will the Russians wait that long?

The recent get-tough posture adopted by the President may cause as radical a change in social philosophy as the invention of the atomic bomb. For the first time, Americans are waking up to the fact that our country long ago abandoned the idea of a balanced military response to aggression. Instead we committed to a tactical nuclear response, the use of "the total, ultimate destructive force" known to man.

The best that could come out of this crisis is a re-evaluation of basic American military posture, i.e. a return to the type of balanced response philosophy advocated by John McNamara, Secretary of Defense in the Kennedy administration. If and when military force is needed around the world, the U.S. would have a real choice of effective responses rather than total tactical annihilation of a part of the world.

But for the immediate future, Americans must live with the real threat of a nuclear strike before the year is out, as a result of outdated defense policies. And that indeed, is frightening.

Use caution to buy mobile home

So you've picked out a brand new mobile home and are eagerly awaiting its delivery. If your home was specially ordered, you should know that the dealer cannot legally require a down payment of more than three percent of the selling price.

If you are financing your home through a bank or finance company, that institution will determine the amount of down payment. You should not make that down payment until credit has been approved, although you may pay a small amount to the dealer to "hold" a home parked on the lot.

Before the home is delivered, you should carefully choose the site. A mobile home placed on a concrete foundation is more likely to remain in good condition and will provide a better environment. You should select a site not subject to flooding or subsidence and decide exactly where you want the home on that site. Every time you move the home, you risk damaging it.

While you are waiting for your home, it's a good idea to make out a check list. Include on the list everything you consider important, all items specially ordered, and the following:

- 1) Check for plumbing defects.
- 2) Look at the frame of the home; compare its appearance on the lot with its appearance on your site to make sure it hasn't been damaged during the moving process.
- 3) Check all the joints to see whether light filters from one room into another. (This is a sign of poor construction. You can make this survey with a flashlight).

4) Make sure all screws in siding and storm windows are tight.

All of these items should be checked BEFORE you accept the home. If any important item is unsatisfactory, you should insist that it be repaired (or in some cases that the home be replaced) before you accept the home.

If you have a problem with a mobile home, you may write to our Labor Division at P.O. Box 12548, Austin, Texas 78711.

A fable, sadly, with no morale

THE DILETTANTE
a fable

Once upon a time there lived a woman named Barbara. Barbara noticed one day, after the last of her four children had left for his first day in school, that she had nothing to do.

"I know what I'll do," Barbara said. "I'll go back to college!"

All Barbara's friends thought going back to college was a grand idea. They envied her. "At last she can fulfill herself," they all said.

Barbara enrolled at Gigantic State U. She was so overjoyed that she forgot to decide what she was going to do when she got to the sprawling campus. She thought about art, but artists, she decided, were all too weird for her taste. She discounted philosophy, because it was too boring and she couldn't discuss it with her tennis partners back home.

She finally decided to take a double major in social work and radio-television, so that when she got her degrees she could be the next Geraldo Rivera. She knew Geraldo had a law degree, but law seemed so icky, what with the way they all dressed.

Barbara went to all her classes and loved all her professors. She couldn't understand all those nattering students who complained about every picky little thing wrong with their school. "For shame," Barbara would say to them. "You should feel lucky you're here. When you get older you'll realize that. I know I do."

Barbara suddenly noticed the students were beginning to resent her. She cried to her husband, a successful accountant, that the other students were ungrateful. "Now, now, dear," he said, "they don't know what is good for them. Would you get us another pina colada before we meet the Jones for bridge?"

Barbara turned to other women students her age to back her up when she defended the school from the spoiled students, but they would have nothing to do with her either. Most of them were divorced and had children of their own to feed. They saw little in common with Barbara.

"We must criticize the school, too," they said, "for if we don't have a good education, we will not get jobs. And if we don't get jobs, our families will go hungry. We want no husbands to support us when we leave the great university."

Barbara was flabbergasted. "No!" she cried. "Look at me. I make good grades and when I get out I'm going to be the next Geraldo Rivera."

Barbara couldn't understand why the divorced women and the younger students laughed at her.

She went to one of the few young student friends she had, and wept, "Why do they laugh at me? I have paid my N.O.W. dues and I go to the same classes as them."

Her friend, who was wise for her years, replied, "Maybe it is because they think you do not realize what it is like to have only one chance at an education, and to have no one to pick you up if you fail."

Barbara still did not understand. She continued to feel lucky to be in school, and she continued to feel outrage when the institution was criticized. She thought the students shouted out only because they wanted to destroy Gigantic State U.

One day an oafish freshman who was an anthropology student said to her, "Why would we want to destroy the only meal ticket we have?" Barbara said nothing, she assumed it was their immaturity, and went on about the business of feeling lucky.

Barbara graduated from Gigantic State U. with honors. As she walked away from the commencement ceremony she said to herself, "Why should I want to be the next Geraldo Rivera? I have fulfilled myself with my degree, and besides, my husband said it would look shabby to the neighbors if his wife took a job."

So Barbara went home to her tennis lessons and lived happily ever after. For the rest of her days she wondered why the rest of those ungrateful students did not feel as happy as she to have a college degree.

On her death bed she whispered these words: "They were too immature to appreciate it."

Letters

Reader roasts Brill, toasts Bell

To the Editor:

This letter is in response to Betsy Brill's tongue-lashing of T. Edward Bell in the Jan. 30 Daily Cougar.

Betsy Brill?

Who is Betsy Brill?

Whoever she is, she represents a prime example of the typically, more often than not, one-sided, shallow minded and uneventful human beings that have plagued this publication at least since I was first exposed to it in the fall of 1975. It's people like you that make this paper almost as exciting as a fence post.

Betsy Brill....?

Who the hell is Betsy Brill?

Believe it or not, Bell has created something in the past year and a half that no one else on The Cougar staff has in the past four and one half years—a desire to read The Daily Cougar. Never before have I experienced a pinch of anger when I awoke to find the Cougar Cushman had failed to deliver a stack of fresh Cougars to the doorsteps of Oberholtzer Hall. Never before have I witnessed people in anticipation of the next issue that would tell of Nick Lush's latest antics or the next confrontation between Chairman and a street curb. I must add that it was heartening to find people who actually appreciated Nick for what he really was—humor! And even more bizarre than the previously mentioned is the fact that I actually began to read the editorial page of this publication!

As for Bell's blasting of the journalism department, it is obvious that he understands what it takes to even begin to get something done in this institution—bitching! I've been here long enough to learn that when dealing with the administration on this campus, the aforementioned format constitutes the only beginning and eventual end.

So, Betsy, the way I see it, it would be to your advantage if Bell did not migrate to the mighty Orange and White. You may learn something. Take that and stick it in your Underwood.

Christians do not condone violence

To the Editor:

Christians stand guilty as charged, "Judge" Isbin, but not on all counts as you indicated. True, Christian ideology does not condone homosexuality, and even considers it a sin (or an immoral act, if you will). Where you went wrong in your argument, my friend, is to blame the violence against homosexuals on this type of thinking. The Christian ideal is one of love for all men, regardless of their chosen lifestyle. Jesus was always among the (considered) dregs of society, loving them as much as He did the most loyal of His followers. He did not, however, ever accept the ways of those same people if they went against the laws that are set down by God for all men.

It is not fair, then, to blame the violence against homosexuals on Christian society, because a truly Christian society would not react to this lifestyle in terms of violence. Those who do resort to violence are doing so on their own, and not under the aegis of God's laws. Those who hate in the name of God are hiding behind a banner, not following one. And while people who react in terms of violence may be doing so in the name of God, they are just as wrong as those who participate in homosexuality.

I don't have all the answers, Mr. Isbin, on why men must react to their fears in violent ways. To paraphrase Will Rogers, "All I know about morality is what I read in the Bible." And while as a Christian I know that homosexuality is wrong, I also know that not loving all people is also wrong.

Black history month begins with student march

By JULIE MAUDLIN

Students of Texas Southern University and UH marched from TSU to UH's Lynn Eusan Park Friday to commemorate the start of Black History Month in Houston.

Carrying a banner that read, "Rise up Black Americans and march for the '80's," approximately 100 to 150 students marched down Wheeler, taking up one lane of traffic and chanting "can't take no more we're fired up" and "for the eighties let's fire it up."

The theme of the march was strength and unity. "Having the schools together for the march is a sign of strength and unity," Aris Hickman of the UH Black Student Union said.

Hickman said the march served as a tribute to black history, a tribute to the black church and also to unite all black students.

The ceremony started with the singing of "The Black National Anthem" by the Hodge Family Singers. This was followed by the reading of poetry and several short stories.

After the ceremony at Lynn Eusan Park, the students went to the UC to conduct a membership drive for the BSU. The students then returned to TSU for a press conference with Congressman Mickey Leland and City Councilman Anthony Hall.

UH will have other events, including an art exhibit on Feb. 4-6 from 12 noon to 3 p.m. each day in the UC Arbor, a jazz group on Feb. 7 in the Coffeehouse and a gospel night Feb. 18 at 7:30 p.m. in the Houston Room to commemorate Black History Month.

In another Black History Month event, Dr. Clyde O. McDaniel, professor of Social Work Research at UH, appeared on Channel 11's "Contempo" program yesterday.

McDaniel discussed his book "Black Leadership." The book consists of a theoretical definition, a historical test and empirical studies of black leadership.

McDaniel's book also discussed a projection of black leadership in the 1980's.

Rogers helps Coogs skim by SMU, 71-70

By DON BRUBAKER
Sports Writer for The Cougar

The event was vivid in Larry Rogers mind. It was his winning basket that gave the Houston Cougars a 71-70 nail-biting victory over SMU Saturday night.

"Rob Williams moved in to get the Man (Brad Branson) to pull out on him," Rogers said afterwards. "When he gave that step towards Williams, Rob dropped it off to me. I had a step on Branson before he could get back on me."

Rogers layup gave UH the margin of victory, but there was still 0:04 left to play. It reminded some observers of the Mustang's one point victory over the Coogs when the winning basket was scored with no time left.

"I knew that for them to score this time," Kenny Williams said, "they had to come all the way down to the other end. All we had to do was play good defense and not draw a foul."

Dave Piehler's desperation shot at the buzzer touched the net, but did not go through it. "We played that last four seconds perfectly," Coach Guy Lewis said, "We made them throw it in at the right place and forced a mid-court shot."

As usual, Lewis tossed his sweat soaked towel into the air after the victory. Guy V. was not, by any means, the only person in the Moody Coliseum crowd of 7,910

Women Cagers defeat UT-A face tough Horns tonight

By Theresa Seegers
Sports Writer for The Cougar

The Lady Cougars added another win to their season total of 10 when they beat the UT-Arlington Mavericks Saturday night 86-65.

The Coogs looked a little sluggish in the first half; at one time they gave up their lead to what looked like a UTA rally but their lead never got larger than four points, 20-24. Houston recovered the never-to-be-lost again lead by scoring eight points in a row, making it 28-24. With the clock running out in the first half the Coogs had a nine point lead, but a steal by UTA resulted in a layup that added two points that perspired heavily.

"The fans got their monies worth, didn't they," Lewis said, "Our guys never quit. We just kept hanging in there. This was a big win for us. We needed to win one like that."

It was a big victory emotionally and on paper. It evened Houston's season record at 10-10 and their SWC ledger at 5-5. UH's win, plus Texas' loss to Arkansas, sets up a fourth place show down tonight at 8:00 in the Superdome.

"It feels wonderful," Rogers said about the Cougars first SWC road victory of the season. "It was something we started talking about last week in practice. What we really need is a win over Texas Monday night."

The Mustangs needed one too, and it looked for awhile they would get one. The ponies owned a 59-48 lead with 12:30 left when Victor Ewing, the Coogs leading scorer with 15 points, hit two hoops in a row.

Ali Hoops hit a free throw for SMU, then Rob Williams, Abe Davis, and Williams again scored to trim the lead to two. The Mustangs upped the lead to six, then Ewing hit two in a row from close range.

Billy Allen canned a layup, by "Juice" who bombed away for two baskets to tie the score 68 all with 2:40 left. Piehler double dribbled, then Ewing was fouled at the other end. Ewing converted at the buzzer, making it 35-28 at the half.

At the beginning of the second half UTA brought the Cougars' lead back down to four points, 37-33. But from then on Houston never let the lead get below ten points.

Cougar Coach Dot Woodfin said her team was not relaxed enough in the first half. "We just couldn't seem to get it together. We were too tense and we started pushing their shots. Once we settled down and allowed the offense to work we did much better."

The Cougars will be in Longhorn country tonight to play the number one team in the nation.

Victor Ewing goes for two

his first free throw, but missed his second.

Rogers got the rebound, but "Juice's" forced shot from the lane missed and SMU's fast break ensued. Piehler sank two free shots after he was fouled by Rob. It gave the ponies a one point lead with 1:14 left.

"It's a tough loss," Branson, the game's leading scorer with 17 points said, "especially since we were ahead the whole way." But the Cougars, who almost doubled SMU's rebound total in the second half, rebounded to win.

Senate to discuss salary guidelines

The Faculty Senate will have an emergency meeting Tuesday to discuss faculty salary guidelines for merit increments. The meeting was called for Thursday by Dr. Martha Piper, senate chair.

"Chancellor Barry Munitz and Provost George Magner will be there to present us a draft of the guidelines," Piper said. These guidelines will affect faculty salaries for the fiscal year 1980.

Munitz and Magner are currently working on the final draft of the guidelines and will bring the final criteria to the Board of Regents later this month.

"Most faculty members would support placing individual faculty members into one of three categories: a substantial increase for faculty demonstrating excellence in performance, an average increase of four to six percent for those with substantial contributions, and no increase for faculty who do not meet performance expectations," Piper said.

Faculty members have expressed their concern to Magner and Munitz about the current increment guidelines several times over the past semester.

Piper said faculty will also be concerned at the senate meeting with the projected rates of increments for 1980.

The senate will meet in the Atlantic Room, UC Underground, from 12:30 p.m. to 2 p.m.

ISO to sponsor festival with dances, crafts, food

BY KELLEY GRIFFIN

"It's a Small World After All" is the theme for this year's International festival sponsored by the International Student's Organization.

Fariba Safinia and Alok Maheshwari, coordinators of the festival, explained their goal is to bring the international and the American students closer together. Maheshwari said the theme was chosen to emphasize that "we are living in a small world, and we want it to be a peaceful, united one."

The three-week festival begins Feb. 12 with a drive to collect money and items for the Vietnamese and Cambodian refugees. Donations, including such items as books and clothing, can be made in front of the UC from 11 a.m. until 3 p.m. on Feb. 12 and 13.

ISO is co-sponsoring the sixth Annual Greek Festival with the Hellenic Students Association on Feb. 16. The carnival will feature Greek food, drink and dancing. It will take place in the Houston Room in the UC from 7 p.m. to 1 a.m.

An International Women's Conference, co-sponsored with the Students Association, will take place Feb. 19 and 20. The conference will offer student discussion panels, films and guest speakers. One student discussion panel will be made up of men and women from a variety of countries discussing and comparing the role of women in their countries, Safinia said.

On Feb. 22, the International Variety show will offer a unique look at the songs and dances of many cultures. It will be in the Houston Room from 7 p.m. to 9:30 p.m.

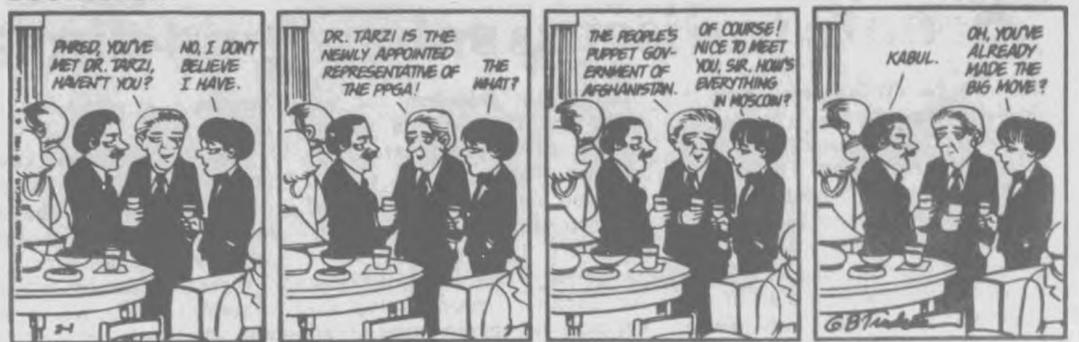

On Monday Feb. 25, the opening reception of the International Fair will offer an international cuisine and fashion show, featuring outfits representing cultures and countries from all over the world. The reception will be in the Houston Room from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Different international organizations will display items representative of their culture during the fair from Feb. 25-28 in the Houston Room.

Throughout the week of the fair there will be arts, crafts and culture demonstrations, including Kung Fu, Middle Eastern painting, pottery and hair braiding, Safinia said.

The Food Fair will mark the close of the International Festival on March 5, at the UC Arbor from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Students will cook the gourmet food for the event.
