

Group reveals criteria for new chancellor

By SONJA SPAHN

Special to The Daily Cougar

The first draft of qualifications for the new chancellor have been released by a university search committee.

"We are using this draft as a means of obtaining input from various groups on campus," Committee Chairman George Huxel said.

Five major criteria are on the draft:

- Significant academic experience and substantial scholarly achievement.

- Management and organization skills necessary for the accelerated achievement of the University of Houston's mission and goals.

- Personal traits necessary for the responsibilities of a chancellor in a major urban university.

- Ability to serve as the leader and official spokesperson for the campus and to represent the university and its programs convincingly to its diverse constituencies.

- Ability to implement management strategies that emphasize excellence and that reward individual and programmatic achievement throughout the university.

Each qualification is followed by four "indicators" that will be used to judge whether a candidate meets these basic criteria. Huxel declined to release these items for publication.

At the Students' Association meeting Sept. 20, Connie

Wallace, assistant vice chancellor, told the SA senators that evaluations on the first two criteria could be made prior to the conducting of interviews. About 180 individuals have applied for the chancellor's position.

A list of broad issues and problems facing the central campus was also distributed. These included UH moving toward leadership in research and scholarship, a comprehensive program of support services, and attracting and keeping high-ability students.

A list of the top candidates will be presented to UH System President Charles E. Bishop by Dec. 1, Huxel said. "The president would hope to make a recommendation by early March," he said. The Board of Regents will make the final decision for the new chancellor.

The issues and criteria list has been presented to six campus groups, and will be revised by recommendations from those groups. The Students' Association is the last group to make recommendations, which it will do at next Monday's meeting.

"We will make an intelligent response at Monday's meeting," SA President Carl Chain said. He said an open meeting with all students will not be held because of low student attendance at the last hearing about proposed revisions to the student service fee process.

4 Nobel winners to speak

By LESLIE POOLE

Special to The Daily Cougar

For the first time ever, the University of Houston has attracted four Nobel Prize laureates to campus for an academic year.

The speakers for the Nobel Prize winner series are Czeslaw Milosz, 1980 prize winner for literature; Isaac Bashevis Singer, 1978 prize winner for literature; David Hubel, 1981 prize winner for medicine; and Lawrence Klein, 1980 prize winner for economics.

Dr. Carla M. Cooper of the UH System office of academic affairs said the university "was real lucky, and we are very happy in getting these four."

Cooper said the series marks is the first organized UH System attempt to bring four Nobel Prize winners to the campus. "When we put this package together, we tried to get recent winners and winners who speak regularly. It took us about six weeks to schedule the four and we had to work through two different literary agents," she said.

Each of the four will spend a day in Houston during the course of the academic year. On their first day, each prizewinner will attend an invitation-only cocktail reception and give an evening lecture at the Continuing Education Center. Before leaving about noon the next day, each will tape a portion of a program at the studios of KUHT, the public television station at UH.

Students will be able to attend the cocktail receptions only if nominated by faculty members. The evening lectures are free and open to the public.

Cynthia MacDonald, co-director of the UH creative writing program, expressed enthusiasm for the choice of Milosz and Singer. "When a Nobel prize for literature is awarded, we are not always sure the best person won, but not in the case of both these men," she said.

"Milosz uses a vision of society and social issues with personal emotion and the capacity to think

Reorganization leaves funding panel in lurch

By MICHAEL MONSON

of The Daily Cougar staff

The preliminary recommendations of the review committee include several changes in the allocation committee's composition. The changes may require new elections and appointments.

Students' Association President Carl Chain, chairman of the review committee, said the absence of any student service fee committee will pressure his committee into releasing its findings to Interim Chancellor Robert Walker "as soon as possible."

Walker said Thursday that he wants to receive the review committee report "before the end of October." He also said the formation of an allocation committee would not be needed to distribute extra student service fees if they become available due to the increase in fall enrollment.

Walker said he would review the recommendations made by last year's committee on the allocation of extra funds and make any new allocations through the vice chancellor, dean of students office.

Confusion over the reorganization process of the committee that allocates student service fees has left no one responsible for funding campus groups.

The lapse in operation of the Student Service Planning and Allocation Committee is temporary, the chairwoman of last year's committee said Thursday.

Most budget allocations to campus auxiliary units are made in the spring.

Connie Wallace, assistant dean of students, explained that "no new members were appointed purposefully" when the terms of the committee members expired in August.

"I suppose theoretically, we do not have an SSF committee right now," she said.

The two student representatives elected last spring, Kevin Pehlman and Regina Lloyd, will become members of the committee when it is formed. Their terms begin in September.

New appointments may depend on the findings of a committee studying the allocation process since last spring.

The Student Service Fee Allocation Process and Review Committee, assigned last June by former Chancellor Barry Munitz to review the philosophy and composition of the allocation group, has not submitted its recommendations.

Night moves

Night students are responding to the Student Life Division's new service at the Mission Control Center in the University Center Satellite.

Connie Wallace, assistant dean of students, said students are "glad to see the new service." She also said that it has generated good public relations.

The office is designed as a referral service for night students — staff members have access to all forms and information concerning Student Life services. An office is located in the UC Satellite and can be reached by calling 749-HELP. The office is open Mondays and Tuesdays 5-7 p.m.

Some initial comments from students include the need for access to a copy machine, the need for a notary public service, and questions about school problems such as how to drop a course.

Houstonian may have editor

Thursday, Sept. 23, was the deadline for applications for editor-in-chief of the 1983 edition of The Houstonian yearbook.

Three applications had been received by noon Thursday, according to Wayne Scott, manager of Student Publications. Two of the applicants are juniors — one a journalism major and the other a radio-television major. The third candidate is a sophomore, major undecided.

"Each person appears to satisfy minimum requirements at this time," Scott said.

The editor-in-chief will be elected at a meeting of the Student Publications Committee on Thursday, Sept. 30, 1982. The meeting will be held at 2 p.m. in the Mercury Room of the U.C. Satellite.

College offers new doctorate

Beginning this fall, the College of Pharmacy is offering a doctoral degree program. Dr. Joseph Buckley, dean of the college, said the program will emphasize cardiovascular pharmacology.

Students seeking admittance to the program must have a bachelor of science degree in pharmacy, biology, biochemistry, psychology or chemistry. Twelve to sixteen students are expected to enroll in the program this year.

Enrollment up in UH system

In an story which appeared in the Cougar on Tuesday, Sept. 21 ("Enrollment increases 1,995"), it was reported that University of Houston-Victoria campus enrollment has increased 1.1 percent since 1981. It also stated that the Downtown College population has risen by 27.1 percent. These figures actually reflect enrollment increases since 1980.

Enrollment has increased 14.2 percent for the Victoria campus and 11.4 percent for the Downtown College since Fall 1981. The Daily Cougar staff regrets the error.

UH drama season opens in October

The University of Houston drama department's 1982-83 season begins in October with the production of "Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead."

The play, directed by Dr. Sidney Berger, gives a different perspective of Shakespeare's "Hamlet" and is described by Berger as a choice of "what are we supposed to do to make our life more meaningful, sit back and ride the tide or create an action that may mean trouble for us?"

"Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead" will be presented on Oct. 8, 9, 15 and 16 at 8 p.m. in the Wortham Theatre on the central campus. Other productions for the season include "Chicago" on Nov. 12, 13, 18-20; "The Indian Wants the Bronx" and "The Tooth of Crime" on Jan. 28-30 and Feb. 2-5; "George Washington Slept Here" on Feb. 25, 26 and March 4-5; and "Joseph and His Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat" on April 22-24, 27-30.

UH students can subscribe to the entire season for as little as $2.40 per ticket. Faculty, staff, alumni and general admission subscriptions are also available, as well as single production tickets. For further information call 749-1428.

Auditions will be held Friday, Oct. 1, from 7 to 11 p.m.; and Saturday, Oct. 2, from 1 to 4 p.m. in the Lab Theatre of the Wortham Theatre Building. Rehearsals will begin Nov. 19 and are scheduled from 7 to 11 p.m.

Individuals wishing to audition should have sheet music for a prepared song. An accompanist will be provided. Dancers, acrobats, and jugglers are also encouraged to tryout. All positions in the company are salaried.

Utility money

This fall's increase in enrollment will generate more student service fee money, but these additional funds probably will not solve the financial problems of campus groups dependent on the fees.

After the fee allocations were made last spring, most of the auxiliary units complained that the money wasn't enough; it never is. The protests that followed the allocation committee's decisions prompted then-chancellor Barry Munitz to ask the committee to revise its findings, which he said were inequitable. The committee then released another set of allocations, to be used only if enrollment increased.

Even though the units remain in line for any extra money, their problems have not been solved. More money coming in does not necessarily mean more money going out; operations at the University of Houston, or any institution, rarely are that simple.

Interim Chancellor Hugh Walker may not be able to fulfill the promise, inherited from Munitz, of more money for these groups. It is doubtful that the additional fee revenue will trickle down to the units. The amount set aside for utilities may have been projected too low, which also was one of the problems with the 1981-82 allocations. And the only thing constant about utility costs is that they will continue to rise.

One consolation to fee-funded units: the use of this extra money to pay utility costs should prevent the need for mid-year cuts, such as those that many units experienced last spring.

Survey reveals victimized feeling of Houston teachers

From the Houston Federation of Teachers

"The picture drawn by the results of this survey of Houston Independent School District teachers is a disturbing one," said John P. O'Sullivan, president of the Houston Federation of Teachers. "We see an alarming percentage of basically altruistic professionals who have become alienated from their profession. Too many feel victimized, angry and alone in a system perceived as unresponsive to their real need as teachers."

These are some of the findings of a study of teacher stress among HISD teachers. The highly technical research was conducted by Ruth Telschow of the University of Houston sociology department. It involved a twelve-page survey sent to some 1,483 Houston Federation of Teachers members on HISD campuses last spring.

Thirty-seven percent of the questionnaires were returned. A copy of the study will be made available to the HISD school board and the executive director of the Houston Professional Administrators. The Federation hopes that the Board will use the valuable data collected to begin a still more ambitious research on stress and initiate programmatic remedies for it.

The report went on to explain other problems experienced by teachers:

Stress can be plotted along a continuum beginning with mild pressure, then moderate tension, alienation, and finally, burnout. A disturbing 37 percent of the teachers surveyed are experiencing alienation from their profession. They feel victimized and angry toward the system. Still worse, another one percent are burned out. They don't care any longer. They feel numb and cold.

These results are particularly disturbing when these teachers are not "self investors," the category most suited to the portrait of a discontented, self-seeking individual. Instead, their motivation to teach arose from altruism — a love of children and learning.

Some of the stress identified is associated with the act of instruction itself. Teaching students who have not reached grade level in achievement and using inadequate teaching materials are identified as problems for teachers. However, the findings show that the major stresses do not come from the act of instruction, the prima facie reason for the profession of teaching.

Instead, the Telschow study demonstrates that the major stresses come from factors other than instruction. These factors are associated with pressure generated by what appears to teachers as an intimidating and unresponsive climate.

High levels of stress were reported by

1. Low salary	47.7%
2. Discipline outside class	42
3. Overall work load	40.2
4. Job benefits	38.2

teachers in these out-of-the-classroom areas by the percentages shown.

A high stress condition, moreover, does not seem confined to either elementary or secondary schools. Preparation time, inadequate supplies, and parent-teacher relations do appear more stressful at the elementary than the secondary level. Conversely, secondary teachers are more often negatively affected by the need to discipline students outside their own classrooms. More than 73 percent of the teachers have suffered some stress-related illness. More than 53 percent have received medical treatment for a stress-related illness.

Two factors seem particularly related to teacher stress: lack of security and lack of administrative support. All teachers responding felt intimidated by the use of verbal or obscene gesture on the part of students. All teachers responding also felt medium to high levels of fear in our schools. The Rubel (1980) finding expresses it best when he says "because of increasing violent acts, a continuing stream of unruly behavior tends to remain relatively unnoticed by students, staff and the public. That is, as violence and vandalism take the spotlight, carelessness, thoughtlessness, minor rule infractions, impoliteness, and so forth, are allowed to become redefined as the new status quo of American public school education."

The degree to which the management of the school acts as an advocate and a purveyor of aid for and to the teachers in the schools is a significant determinant of stress among teachers. The study demonstrates that teachers who perceive little administrative support suffer high levels of stress. In fact, 21 of 33 teachers surveyed, who were actually assaulted, reported little administrative support.

John P. O'Sullivan is president of the Houston Federation of Teachers, a 1,900-member group affiliated with the American Federation of Teachers.

Telling signs

I believe in monitoring squirrels and woolly worms to make predictions about the weather. The belief probably stems from knowing some crusty old hillfolk who have some surefire means of forecasting.

For them it's a science. Years of observation have taught them about the nuances of nature.

Things like spittin' in the eye of a ladybug at high noon on the first day of fall. If the bug flies away, it's going to be a mild winter. If it spits back, things are going to be tough.

I don't have years of experience, but I've gotten a bit crusty... and I've learned from the hillfolk to foretell the seasons by watching nature.

The system adapts quite well to the city. Although there is a lack of wildlife, one can find other telling signs.

Watch the utility company closely. For example, if Houston Lighting & Power gets a large increase in rates, winter will be severely cold; a moderate rate increase means winter will be moderate, etc. However, this weather only will affect ratepayers — stockholders and HL&P executives will be very cozy all year.

No rate increase is a frightening omen; such a drastic turn of events is a sure signal of calamity. If it occurs, expect Houston to disappear from the map.

Almost unbearable

Pay attention to the cost of insulation, anti-freeze, galoshes and winter clothing. The severity of winter is directly proportional to the amount of increase in the cost of these items.

These basic elements of forecasting are quite easy for anyone to learn. However, I've developed it into an even finer art which requires great sensitivity. Without it, the signs will go by unnoticed.

I've learned to predict who will be hit hardest by the winter.

For the 10 million people unemployed nationwide, it will be almost unbearable. The working poor, who barely make enough to get by, always have rough winters.

The thousands of children and adults living in the street will find winter colder than their warmest cardboard box.

The six percent of the people who own more than half the wealth in the United States won't even notice a change in temperature.

Yup, I've learned my lesson in forecasting from the hillfolk. Watch closely. Pay attention to how things go over the years. Expect that things probably will never change.

I like the fact that squirrels, woolly worms and ladybugs can help predict the weather year after year. But I hope the rest of my system breaks down real soon.

Coogs seek first win of season as Lamar invades the Dome

By DOUG DODSON
of The Daily Cougar staff

The UH football team isn't exactly taking the attitude that most 0-2 teams usually have after two mediocre games. Actually, the Coogs are experiencing a renewed interest in what's left of the 1982 season.

The team's first opportunity to make amends will come Saturday night when it will host Lamar University at the Astrodome.

The Cougars, despite opening the season with two losses, will be the favorite to walk off the field as winners this weekend. Head Coach Bill Yeoman believes a win may be just what the Coogs need to salvage the remainder of the season.

"Winning a football game is what we really need," Yeoman said. "It will be hard, but we must get prepared for Lamar. We're doing some struggling, and we'll have to get into the right frame of mind to win."

Defensive lineman Robert Durham shares Yeoman's optimism, saying he feels more at home at his new position now that he has a couple of tough games under his belt.

"Yes we're 0-2," he said. "But I feel it's good to play two top-twenty teams right off the bat. The experience we have gained is valuable. Something good has to come of this."

Durham will have a little help this week with the return of senior defensive end Greg Harmon. The Cougar tri-captain will be playing in his first game of the season and, while he may not exhibit mid-season form, he will provide some badly-needed experience.

first two games, is expected to start again on Saturday. Wilson should see some action, though, and may provide the lethargic Coog offense with the new blood it needs.

The offense is off to one of its worst starts ever. The Cougars are

E-Systems continues the tradition of the world's great problem solvers.

Guglielmo Marconi was able to see communications revolutionized by his development of the first successful system of radio telegraphy—the wireless. His first experimental transmissions were no more than a few feet. But, within a quarter of a century, he had advanced his system to the point that a radio message sent from England could be received in Australia.

E-Systems scientists and engineers continue to expand the technology he began. Today, communications equipment designed and developed by E-Systems engineers is used extensively around the world for line-of-sight or satellite communications, digital communications and applications requiring micro-processor-based teleprinters, tactical radios and microminiature HF, VHF and UHF equipment.

In addition to communications, E-Systems engineers are solving many of the world's toughest problems in antennas, data acquisition, processing, storage and retrieval systems and other systems applications for intelligence and reconnaissance. Often, the developed systems are the first-of-a-kind.

Chancellor criteria set

Committee members agreed to make Huxel the spokesman on all matters concerning the search. Matters have been reluctant to discuss the list, even though it has been distributed to the chancellor's cabinet, the dean's council, the faculty senate, a group of administrative staff and the executive board of the alumni association, as well as to the SA senate.

Wallace, who released the qualifications after approval from Huxel, said, "We have agreed with the committee not to talk to the press." She added that all statements would come from Huxel.

Chain also said that he could give no information on the qualifications. He said he had agreed with Huxel that statements should be limited to those from Huxel's office.

"To date, we have received very positive reactions from those who we have spoken with," Huxel said. He expects to have a final draft, complete with indicators, finalized by next week.

Language laboratory offers wealth of cultural resources

By JACK BROWN
Special to The Daily Cougar

The University of Houston language laboratory can help all students, not just those currently taking language courses.

Located on the third floor of the Agnes Arnold Hall in Room 311, the lab has a wealth of resources to aid any interested student or faculty member to brush up on a foreign language or to improve developing language skills. The lab has material for many languages including French, Spanish, German, Czech, Italian, Russian, Ancient Greek, Hebrew and Latin.

Gary Killingsworth, lab director, said, "The purpose of the language lab is to motivate students to expand their cultural awareness, which will lead to an increased interest in learning the language." Killingsworth, a UH graduate, said he is pleased with the usage of the lab facilities and expects it to reach over 1,000 students this year.

"Most of the students come in between classes," he said. "Our main attraction seems to be our library-like system. Students with a validated ID or current fee statement can check out cassettes to be used at their leisure — in their cars or at home."

There is a 10-cent use fee for a limit of three tapes on a one-week loan. Tapes may be used free of charge in the student-staffed lab, which seats a maximum of 40 students. Faculty and staff may check out tapes free of charge. If a student prefers, he may pay a $1.25 non-refundable semester fee "unlimited" — up to three-at-a-time — cassette borrowing and renewal.

"Fines for overdue and lost cassettes have been reduced from last year," Killingsworth said. "They are used as a small supplement to our university budget." Present late fines are 20 cents per day per tape, excluding Saturdays and Sundays. Lost cassettes may be replaced for $3.25 each. Loan renewals may be made by phone or in person.

Videotape and music materials are available in several languages for in-lab listening, but they cannot be checked out or copied due to copyright laws. Non-copyrighted material may be duplicated for a fee of $1 per monaural cassette or $3 per stereo cassette. The lab features recorders that allow students to record their own voices and monitor pronunciation.

The language lab sponsors Le Quartier Latin, the campus French club, which meets weekly. "The club had been dormant for a while, but renewed interest has revived it," Killingsworth said.

Killingsworth said his objective this year will be to produce more student involvement: "Students may feel a greater sense of participation if they realize that everything won't be done for them. The club needs students to elect officers and hold office." Meeting attendance varies between 10 and 30 students, he said.

The language laboratory will be open during the fall from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays and from 8:45 a.m. to 9 p.m. on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays. It will be closed on Saturdays and Sundays.

emotion and the capacity to think as opposed to only feel about the personal and political areas, so that his poems build quietly to incandescence and illuminate.

"Singer takes the stories that come from the small Jewish communities and makes them into fiction which engages and enchants us with parables for everyone."

Milosz will visit campus Oct. 25. The topic of his evening lecture will be "The Intellectual in the Modern World."

Milosz was born in Lithuania in 1911. A member of the Warsaw underground movement in the late '30s, he spent the war fighting the Nazis. He broke ties with Poland in 1951 and sought political asylum in Paris.

A resident of the United States since 1961, Milos is a professor of Slavic language at the University of California at Berkeley. He has written many books, including "The Captive Minds," a study of communism and intellectuals, and "Native Realm," an autobiography.

Singer, who will be on campus Nov. 8, calls himself a "Jewish writer, a Yiddish writer, an American writer."

He has written novels and short stories in Yiddish on eastern European Jewish culture.

His works appeared only in Yiddish until 1953, when an American novelist translated "Gimpel the Fool."

Singer became a U.S. citizen in 1943 and now lives in New York.

David Hubel, professor of neurobiology at Harvard Medical School, will speak at UH on March 3, 1983. He received the Nobel Prize for discoveries he made that have led to greater understanding of the visual pathway and the brain. The topic of his speech has not been announced.

Klein, known as the "father of econometrics," will come to UH on Thursday, April 28. Klein, the author of more than 40 books, has developed computerized, macroeconomic models used to forecast national and global economic trends.

Klein is the Benjamin Franklin professor of economics at the University of Pennsylvania's Wharton School of Business.

The Nobel Prize Winners Series is the first in what is planned to be a continuing tradition.
