Minn. Woman Brings Her Custody Campaign Here

By Linda Wyche
Montrose Voice

Sharon Kowalski and Karen Thompson had been lovers for four years when a drunk driver struck Kowalski's car in November 1983. Sharon suffered a serious brain injury leaving her in a coma for some time.

Although declared by doctors to be a severely-brain damaged quadriplegic, with the help of Thompson's background in physical therapy, Kowalski regained her ability to use her hands to eat and wash. She also learned to communicate and answer questions using a typewriter.

It seemed as though Kowalski was on the way to at least partial recovery. At least until her parents found out that she and Karen were lovers.

In July of 1985, Donald Kowalski, Sharon's father, was named legal guardian. Since that time, not only has Thompson been prohibited from visiting, but many of Sharon's friends are also barred from seeing her. The visitation prohibition also extends to her court appointed attorney and the Minnesota Civil Liberties Union. According to Thompson, no one can visit Sharon at the nursing where Sharon was placed without the father's permission.

Thompson was in Houston recently where she spoke at the University of Houston. In an interview prior to that appearance she said that although she still teaches full-time in Minnesota, she travels almost every weekend in her efforts to "free Sharon Kowalski."

Karen Thompson

She explained, "I'm here as an educator as well as trying to get Sharon help."

Thompson said that she attempts to help others protect themselves from the fate that has befallen she and Sharon Kowalski. She added that gay relationships can be protected by such legal means as naming a durable power of attorney and making wills and living wills. Because Karen and Sharon did not have these protections, the two have not seen each other in over two years and the legal battle has cost over $100,000.

Thompson cited several areas in which she feels Kowalski's rights have been violated. Among these are the right to be tested periodically to determine any change in her condition, freedom of association, and the right to be in the courtroom.

Thompson said that her struggle is not just a gay rights issue but one of feminism and the rights of the handicapped. She added that Sharon can't come home because of the "isms" in our system, referring to homophobia, handicapism, and sexism.

Thompson admitted, "Before the accident I did not understand how they (the 'isms') connected and who they benefited."

Thompson has gained the support of the National Organization for Women and was a keynote speaker at the National March on Washington for Gay and Lesbian Rights. She has found, however, that gaining support from disability rights groups has been slow in coming. Even in Houston, the Handicapped Student Advisory Board of the University of Houston was hesitant in agreeing to co-sponsor her appearance.

"This case could set too horrible a precedent. This is a human rights issue. Everybody's issue," she said in defense of those who are "scared to get involved with a gay rights case."

Thompson is awaiting the outcome of a district court hearing held November 18 in Hibbing, Minnesota. Regardless of the result she said she is "not going to give up on Sharon."

Besides direct support for her fight, Thompson asks that gays demand federal legislation for sanctioning of same-sex relationships.

She insists, "We must be visible and vocal, pushing our people to represent us."

Persons interested in assisting Karen Thompson can write to her in care of Julie Andrzejewski, 32495 County Road, No. 1, St. Cloud, Minnesota 56301.

McConnell Pleads Innocent

Former Montrose developer J.R. McConnell pleaded innocent Monday to federal charges of leading a conspiracy to defraud Houston-area financial institutions of $4.2 million by using false titles to property backing some loans.

Defense attorney Tom Berg asked U.S. Magistrate Karen Brown to reconsider her order that McConnell remain jailed until trial. Brown denied the motion and Berg said he will appeal to U.S. District Judge David Hittner.

McConnell, 40, has been jailed without bond since he returned to Houston from Mexico. He surrendered to authorities on Nov. 17.

Federal grand jurors last month indicted McConnell and five others for defrauding financial institutions. Four other defendants pleaded innocent earlier this month.

Co-defendant H. Wayne Gray, McConnell's former loan officer at Home Savings Association, also pleaded innocent Monday.

AIDS And Ethics Major Concerns At TMA Meeting

AUSTIN (UPI)—The Texas Medical Association's House of Delegates has approved health care guidelines for treatment of AIDS patients, and ethical guidelines for physicians who themselves test positive to the virus that causes the acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

Delegates last Saturday adopted a recommendation paralleling one from the American Medical Association which says doctors with AIDS should not be required to reveal the state of their health to patients because the chance is so slight that the malady would be transmitted through the doctor-patient relationship.

The guidelines suggest that a physician who tests positive for the human immunodeficiency virus, or HIV, that causes AIDS avoid procedures that could spread it, much as they would take precautions to prevent the spread of the hepatitis B virus.

Some 287 delegates assembled for the last of the group's biennial meetings for 1987 agreed physicians have a moral responsibility not to abandon a patient with AIDS and to make sure the patient receives proper care through referral or other means if the physician does not personally wish to continue treatment.

The TMA action was taken after a Mesquite pediatrician, Dr. Robert J. Huse, lost most of his patients and was forced to sell his practice when it became public knowledge that he carried the AIDS virus.

There is no known evidence that Huse's condition ever affected any of his patients.

Dr. Frank Bryant Jr. of San Antonio, chairman of the State Board of Health, said the TMA has "a dual responsibility to protect both patient and physician when a doctor tests positive for the HIV virus."

Bryant, who chairs the TMA's Reference Committee on Public Health and Scientific Affairs, said the committee had set up three councils to evaluate each physician's case on an individual basis.

"We are sympathetic to the pediatrician in Mesquite whose practice was severely harmed due to the publicity surrounding the fact that he was HIV positive," Bryant said.

Richmond family physician Dr. Nancy Dickey said the TMA and American Medical Association alike are more concerned with eliminating patient risks within an infected doctor's practice than with preventing the doctor from practicing.

The TMA delegates recommended that a committee be appointed to study the ethical, medical and economic impact of the AIDS epidemic, which has killed more than 4,000 victims in Texas alone.

The virus is transmitted by infected blood transfusions, contaminated drug needles and by sexual contact with someone carrying the disease.

On other topics, the TMA recommended that public health officials inform religious groups and others objecting to immunizations both of the benefits of vaccines, and of the adverse effects on their own health and that of the general public if they refuse vaccinations.

The delegates also urged the revival of the Texas State Rural Education Board and National Health Service Corps, both groups that offered financial incentives to young doctors to practice in rural or other medically underserved areas.

Rep. J.J. "Jake" Pickle, D-Texas, briefed the group last Saturday about pending increases in Medicare premiums for physicians' services, possible budget adjustments and other federal health and medical issues.

AIDS Patient Says Attitude Keeping Him Healthy

By Ray Means
FOR THE MONTROSE VOICE

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—For Dan Turner, one of the nation's longest surviving AIDS victims, life is a day-to-day proposition.

Turner, 39, was diagnosed as having acquired immune deficiency syndrome in 1982 and, according to the average AIDS life span, should have been dead by now. He says he is alive because of his positive attitude.

"You go for a day at a time and shoot for a quality day," Turner said in an interview last week. "Maybe you get another one."

The first AIDS case was only diagnosed in 1981 and when Turner was told early the next year he had cancerous lesions on his leg, doctors didn't know why.

Months passed before the cause was traced to AIDS, making him among the first diagnosed cases in the nation.

Turner underwent eight weeks of chemotherapy and took the drug Interferon, and his cancer stabilized. It did not recur.

Knowing he was stricken by a disease with no known cure, Turner was faced with a life-threatening crisis.

But he was no stranger to serious illness, having fought off hepatitis a few years earlier after a doctor told him, "There's nothing I can do for you."

His experience overcoming hepatitis, which took a year, convinced him positive thinking was his best weapon against AIDS.

"Many people diagnosed with AIDS haven't had a challenge and they freak out," Turner said. "I realized one shouldn't imagine the illness to be worse than it is."

The number of AIDS victims is mounting, and Surgeon General Everett Koop said this month the disease has infected 43,000 people in the United States since 1981 and claimed 25,000 lives.

AIDS is considered 100 percent fatal, but Turner isn't convinced.

"In the media, everybody dies," he said. He said he thinks many victims just give up.

"My message is that one can actively involve one's self in his own healing. We can turn our own immune systems around for our own behalf. We get these challenges in life and we can win them," he said.

Turner suggests his attitude has strengthened the fighter cells that help suppress the AIDS virus in his blood.

"My suppressor cells have been holding the virus at bay," he said.

His doctor, Jay Levy, professor of medicine at the University of California, San Francisco, is trying to clone Turner's fighter cells, hoping that if the cells in his body give up the battle against AIDS, their genetic copies can be injected and resume the battle.

The mysteries of the cells are to be discussed in a television special—"The Fighting Edge"—to be aired between Nov. 30 and Jan. 3 on 158 stations. Turner is featured on the program.

Meanwhile, Turner, who worked on educational film production before he was disabled with AIDS, gets on with his life. He lifts weights, runs and, because he does not own a car, walks a lot.

He tried acupuncture for a while and found it relaxing.

"Needles don't hurt, anyhow," he said. "You get a sense of balancing the body's energy and a sense of well-being. I can carry it with me through the day, like a memory."

He stopped acupuncture in 1985 and came down with shingles, a nerve disorder characterized by a painful red skin rash.

"If I had been relaxing, I don't think I would have come down with shingles," he said.

For those who don't favor acupuncture, Turner recommends meditation. He suggests "making an appointment" with one's self to relax.

"We think we don't have time, and we stop doing it," he said.

Though he looks on the bright side, the news is not always good.

After a recent examination, Turner was told his count of T-4 suppressor cells—the cells that orchestrate the immune system's response to infection—was down, so he is considering taking AZT, a drug that has had some success controlling the disease but can cause dangerous side effects.

"Nothing is free," he shrugged, "and there is no clear-cut guarantee. I'm kind of a sitting duck for another infection."

Then there's emotional stress.

Many of his friends with AIDS have died, including everyone in the small group who joined him in making their plight public in 1982.

"I've lost a lot of friends who 'came out' when I did to show it was not only sleazes who got the disease, but regular Joes," Turner said.

Turner is working toward his master's degree in social work at San Francisco State University. He already has a master's in fine arts.

He hopes to get off disability and go to work in community social services, counselling other AIDS victims.

Progress Made Over Blocking 976 Calls

AUSTIN (UPI)—The Public Utility Commission staff and Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. completed negotiations Tuesday that will allow consumers to block 976 calls at no charge.

The Dial 976 service, which includes dial-a-joke, dial-a-prayer and sports and news lines, has generated some controversy among consumers because of the availability of adult entertainment calls and costs from unsupervised calls.

Bell currently offers the 976 service in Houston, Dallas, San Antonio and Fort Worth.

The settlement, if approved by the full commission, would give customers in the four cities 60 days to request 976 blockage at no charge. After 60 days, there would be a one-time charge of $7 to block the calls.

Currently, Bell imposes a one-time charge of $21.65 plus 50 cents per line per month to block 976 calls.

Teacher With AIDS, Students Hold Warm Reunion

IRVINE, Calif. (UPI)—Vincent Chalk, a teacher suffering from AIDS, held an emotional reunion with his students highlighted by hugs and flowers after winning a four-month court battle to return to the classroom.

Chalk, 42, was on the verge of tears as he was warmly greeted Monday by current and former students at University High School, where he teaches deaf children.

"I'm happy to be back here to see the students I've worked with over the years through to graduation," said Chalk, who appeared fit and healthy.

The 13-year veteran teacher was ordered reinstated to his classroom duties by a federal appeals court Nov. 19, four months after the Orange County Department of Education transferred him to a desk job when it learned he was infected with the virus that causes acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

"I gave him a hug. It made me feel good," said Ginger Dietz, a senior from Fullerton. "After I graduate I'll never forget him. All the kids love him."

In ordering the county to restore Chalk to the classroom, the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals panel in San Francisco ruled unanimously that the teacher "presents no significant risk of harm to others."

The court has ruled that workers infected with AIDS are protected by federal laws prohibiting discrimination against the handicapped.

Chalk's return to the classroom went smoothly, with no protests to mar the event, said Carolyn Rowland, the school's principal.

But several of the 10 hearing-impaired students who spoke to reporters through an interpreter indicated some classmates were upset by the return of the teacher with the disease.

"One person told me they didn't want Mr. Chalk to come back because they were afraid of getting AIDS from him," said sophomore Gabriell Curtis, 15. "He told me if I got near Mr. Chalk, he would never come near me again. I think that's real baloney."

Chalk, who runs a program that provides vocational and career training to about 130 students, said his students and their parents have been supportive throughout his ordeal. Chalk, who is gay and lives in Long Beach, said he was anxious to return to work.

"I haven't had any negative attitudes from the students or the staff," Chalk said.

"He looked healthy, he looked great," said Tony Daverso, a senior. "We try not to think about that (Chalk's dying) too much. When he starts to die, we'll feel badly. We hope they find a cure."

"PRESIDENT?... NO, CHILD, BUT YOU CAN GROW UP TO BE FRONT-RUNNER!"

Goal Of 1 Million New Texas Voters Announced

By Bob Lowry
UPI Capitol Reporter
FOR THE MONTROSE VOICE

AUSTIN—Secretary of State Jack Rains said Monday he hopes a new voter registration campaign will add 1 million new voters and help Texas flex its political muscle in the Super Tuesday presidential primary.

Rains announced at a news conference the kickoff of "Voter '88," which he called the "most ambitious voter registration drive ever undertaken in the state."

The campaign, directed at people in the workplace and at school, hopes to add 1 million voters to Texas' current voter roll of 7.34 million prior to the March 8, 1988 primary.

Of the more than 12 million eligible voters in Texas, Rains said only 60.8 percent are registered compared with a national average of 68.3 percent.

"Texas lags behind Third World states like Oklahoma, Arkansas and Louisiana in the percentage of eligible voters who are registered," said Rains. "Texans are a proud lot. We should show our pride by registering to vote and turning out at the polls."

With 1 million new voters, he said presidential candidates on both parties will have to pay more attention to Texas and its problems, especially in the area of energy.

"I was disappointed in following the recent Democratic presidential debates and Republican presidential debates because the candidates of neither party talked about energy policy," said Rains.

"We have a chance by registering voters to focus national attention, and certainly the presidential contenders of both parties attention, on issues important to Texas."

Rains noted that Texas receives only $1 from the federal government for every $1.59 it pays in federal taxes "That's a poor trade," he said. "In these difficult times, with 750,000 Texans out of work, it's time to bring our money back to Texas."

The "Voter '88" campaign is enlisting the help of Texas businesses and corporations in signing up workers on the job. The program will also be expanded into schools and colleges.

Rains said Texas ranks below its sister states and the rest of the nation in voter registration and participation because "Texans are very mobile—we're on the move."

"It's more difficult to catch people at home, so we want to catch people at the workplace, and to do that it's going to require the cooperation of the business community of Texas," he said.

Rains said even if Texas adds 1 million new voters, its percentage of registered eligible voters will be only 70 percent.

"We're just not getting the job done. We're lagging behind our sister states. I find that terrible embarrassing," he said. "I told one of my colleagues I was the one at the secretary of state conference with the paper sack over my head."

"I don't think it's that Texans don't care, I think it's that Texans are on the move, and we're going to solve that problem."

Jim Adams, chief executive officer of Southwestern Bell Telephone in Dallas, said his company will use its publications to encourage employee registration.

"We're going to use an ABC approach," said Adams. "The A is we're going to advise people of the opportunity to get out and register, B we're going to be prepared by setting up processes where they can (register) in high-traffic locations, and C, we hope to create an environment in which people will want to register."

Although Rains stressed the registration drive would be nonpartisan, the Texas Democratic Party warned the secretary of state against aiming the campaign at a select group of prospective voters.

The State Democratic Executive Committee last Saturday adopted a tongue-in-cheek resolution, saying Rains should target state agencies, grocery stores and convenience stores "and other places which serve a true cross-section of the population."

The resolution said Rains wants to concentrate in hotels, airports and corporate workplaces, adding, "We suggest he may also want to register voters at the yacht club, the fur section of Saks Fifth Avenue, and similar locations, although he may want to avoid the Petroleum Club since his Republican friends have done nothing for our domestic industry."

Utility Workers Taped In The Nude During Questionable Investigation

By Mark Langford
FOR THE MONTROSE VOICE

AUSTIN (UPI)—A Louisiana utility trying to catch a locker room thief at one of its Texas plants hired a security firm that made secret video tapes of employees in the nude, a state lawmaker and union officials said Tuesday.

One employee, who was never accused of any wrongdoing, was dubbed "gay boy" by his supervisors for spending too much time in the bathroom. A second worker fired for alleged thefts committed suicide when the surveillance was revealed and another was forcibly taken by private investigators for interrogation, said state Rep. Lloyd Criss, D-La Marque.

Criss and Michael Whitehurst, an official of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, said Southwestern Electric Power Co., SWEPCO, of Shreveport, La., hired Nissen Unlimited & Associates to spy on workers in their locker room at the Welsh power plant in Cason, located in northeast Texas.

SWEPCO, responding to an employee's complaint that $40 was taken from his locker, hired the Shreveport firm to monitor the locker room for one month beginning Dec. 3, 1986. The private investigators installed the video cameras while posing as air conditioning workmen, Whitehurst said.

"I find it appalling that a company would secretly videotape its employees while they are showering, changing and doing other personal business," Criss said. "The installation of cameras in the locker room is outrageous and offensive. It is degrading and dehumanizing."

The family of the employee who committed suicide after he was fired for stealing from a locker has filed a lawsuit against SWEPCO, and a union arbitration ruling is pending for a worker who was taken forcibly to Shreveport for interrogation by private investigators, then suspended for two days.

A separate arbitration ruling is pending for a group of workers who were videotaped in the nude. The practice was revealed to employees after the surveillance program was completed.

"In log books, one employee was identified as the gay boy even though no homosexual acts were observed," Criss said. "It became widely known that one specific individual had been labeled the gay boy."

Whitehurst said the worker and his family still suffer "undue hardship" because of the homosexual characterization.

Jim Harrington, an attorney for the Texas Civil Liberties Union, said all the workers could file a lawsuit against the utility after the union arbitration is completed. He said a Texas woman was awarded more than $100,000 in a similar case several years ago.

"Sooner or later there is going to be a lot of litigation in Texas on these sorts of issues," Harrington said. "Employers take the position that they can do absolutely anything they want in the workplace, no matter how degrading, no matter how privacy-invasive, and I cannot believe people in Texas will tolerate that."

Criss said he has asked Attorney General Jim Mattox for an opinion on several issues raised by the case—whether investigators from outside the state must comply with Texas' Private Investigators and Private Security Agencies Act, and whether installing video cameras and taping employees is an invasion of privacy that could be the basis of a lawsuit or a violation of state law.

It Was G. Gordon Liddy vs. Hunter S. Thompson

By Ken Franckling
UPI Feature Writer
FOR THE MONTROSE VOICE

PROVIDENCE, R.I.—In what was billed as an Ivy League "debate," Watergate mastermind G. Gordon Liddy and "gonzo journalist" Hunter S. Thompson agreed only that the Reagan administration is in decline. The rest was a bit fuzzy.

The sold-out event Nov. 20 at Brown University, touted as a debate on "heroes of our time," turned into an open forum focusing on Liddy's Watergate past, the scandal's parallels to the Iran-contra affair and Thompson's fuzziness about why he was so far from his home in the Colorado mountains.

Liddy, who relishes occasional debates with quirky liberals, strode to the stage in a natty grey suit, with more hair on his moustache than his mostly shaven head. He stood straight as a ramrod and saluted the crowd.

"I'm getting sick and tired of the Washington press corps," Liddy said. "Every time there is a sex scandal at a steamboat landing, they attach the suffix 'gate' to it. They're impinging upon my dear Watergate."

Thompson, a stream-of-consciousness writer who was the inspiration for the Doonesbury comic strip's drug- and alcohol-addled "Duke," wore a loud red, white and blue geometric print shirt. He flashed a pair of peace signs with his fingers.

"I'm not sure really why we're debating here, but I'll find out," Thompson said. "We have time."

Liddy, who served nearly five years in prison for refusing to name names or divulge details of the clandestine Watergate operation, was asked to compare that event with the recent Iran-contra scandal.

He found more dissimilarities than parallels.

In the Iran-contra affair, Admiral Poindexter did the mission he was supposed to. He protected the president," Liddy said. "In Watergate, the people who were supposed to protect the president all rushed to sell out to whoever they could find."

There were hisses from the crowd when Liddy said he would get involved in such a caper again—but only if the circumstances were similar and he could hand-pick all of the participants.

"I had problems with the people my supervisors picked," Liddy said. "If we were on the deck of the Titanic, Jeb Magruder would be trying to get on the life boat ahead of your mother. And John Dean would be trying to get on ahead of his own mother."

Twice found in contempt of Congress for his defiance, Liddy said he respects that government institution, but called its members "the finest collection of turkeys you'll find anywhere except at Thanksgiving."

The Reagan administration was the combatants' only point of agreement.

"This immensely popular man is not in control. Ed Meese has been in charge of the government," Thompson said. "Reaganism is a failed experiment. But it is not a laboratory experiment. They are dealing with our lives."

"The Reagan administration certainly is failing now," Liddy said. "It is almost disintegrating."

Thompson peered around the huge auditorium, its walls lined with huge oil paintings of former Brown University presidents.

"Who are these gentlemen around these walls?" Thompson said. "They seem to be asking why I'm here."

One student asked Thompson what he thought of cartoonist Garry Trudeau using him as an inspiration for Doonesbury.

"His parents sent him to Yale and all he learned to do was steal from people's experiences in life," Thompson said.

"Hunter, you appear regularly in the comics, and I appear regularly on Miami Vice," Liddy said. "That's the similarity."

"But you get paid," Thompson said. "I'd rather be on Miami Vice."

Thompson returned to the one theme he tried to get across all night in his chain-smoking ramblings.

"I'm a journalist. Believe it or not, it is an honorable profession. I do care about what happens in our government," Thompson said. "It's my country too, and yours. If there's wrong in Washington, we're not getting our money's worth. Nobody really has the trust of the people who are being governed. We have to take control of our world and believe in it."

One student asked Thompson if drugs and alcohol, liberally used, were "legitimate tools for living?"

"I'm saddled with this image of being a dope fiend, and a monster," Thompson said. "Well s_t, here I am. I've never considered these things important enough to worry about.

"What you really must concern yourself with is what you want to do with your world," he said. "I don't want to keep lecturing like a mother hen, but every one of us is going to have to live with it."

Liberace Land Holdings For Sale

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—The piano wasn't Liberace's only passion. A lunch with Mae West three decades ago convinced the flamboyant showman that he should also get his hands on some real estate.

When he died in February from AIDS at age 67, Liberace's extensive real estate portfolio included a mansion and shopping center in Las Vegas, houses in Palm Springs and Lake Tahoe, a five-story office building with a residential penthouse in Los Angeles and two adjacent co-ops in Malibu.

Now Liberace's estate has begun selling millions of dollars worth of his real estate holdings, it was reported last Sunday.

Although an exact value of Liberace's properties was not available, they have been estimated to be in the multi-millions.

In the past few weeks, escrow was closed on one of Liberace's Malibu co-ops for $285,000 and the Los Angeles office building is being purchased for $2.5 million, The Los Angeles Times reported.

Liberace's interest in real estate was sparked by a lunch the showman had in the late 1950s with actress Mae West, who told him about a property she sold for several million dollars, said Jamie James, who handled Liberace's public relations for 20 years.

"That was when he saw gold in real estate," James said.

About 20,000 items from Liberace's personal collections are to be auctioned April 10-13 at the Los Angeles Convention Center by Christie's and Butterfield & Butterfield. A catalogue of the items is expected to be out in January.

Joel Strote, the entertainer's lawyer, said the money raised through the auction will benefit an arts foundation created by the pianist.

Liberace's personal collection includes such items as a baccarat crystal table dating from 1850, a 1960 red and silver Cadillac limo with a diamond-studded candelabrum, a piano-shaped bar, a piano-shaped couch, bath towels and ice bucket with keyboard designs, drinking glasses with sizzle sticks in the shape of musical notes.

There Was Agony On The Right

Commentary By Steve Gerstel
FOR THE MONTROSE VOICE

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Judge Douglas Ginsburg, who may well be a fellow traveler in thought if not in deed, really had the far right moralogues squirming until he not-so-graciously withdrew as the Supreme Court nominee.

The little-known jurist has returned to the relative obscurity of his seat on the appeals bench, a certain candidate for trivia games of the future, side by side with G. Harrold Carswell.

For those not familiar with the name, Carswell, a lackluster federal district judge in Florida, was picked for the Supreme Court by President Nixon after the Senate gunned down his first choice, the eminently distinguished Clement Haynsworth of South Carolina.

Similarly, Reagan nominated Ginsburg only after the Senate rejected Robert Bork, and, as was the case with Carswell, the second choice was disastrous.

Ginsburg, despite his abysmal lack of experience, was the heavy choice of the right, led by Attorney General Edwin Meese and the likes of Sen. Jesse Helms of North Carolina, the guru of the Senate arch conservatives.

Over opposition of the moderates in the White House, led by chief of staff Howard Baker, Reagan nominated Ginsburg.

Just as the judge was making routine courtesy calls on senators, National Public Radio disclosed that Ginsburg had partaken of marijuana, the illicit weed, and more than just one youthful puff.

That left the moralogues, who seem able to forgive almost anything in a believer, traumatized.

There was something exquisite in hearing Helms, a self-appointed keeper of all morals, say he was relieved because he feared that the disclosure of drug use concerned cocaine, not just marijuana.

And there were the swift protestations that Ginsburg's smoking was merely an indiscretion of youth and, as another conservative remarked, comparable to drinking beer in college—both of which ring true but not when spoken by arch conservatives.

Sen. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, railed, "What do we want on the Supreme Court? Do we want a bright young person, get them through law school and lock him in a closet for 25 years—pull him out and put him on the Supreme Court, so that there's nothing they have experience about?"

In addition to putting the conservatives on the spot, Ginsburg split their ranks—one faction that pushed for his withdrawal, the other that wanted him to fight, despite the marijuana disclosure.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, went public in a news conference to lambaste the "gutless wonders" in the White House who refused to stand by Ginsburg and said, for the first time, he could not get a telephone call through to Reagan to urge a confirmation fight.

At the same time, Education Secretary William Bennett, a doctrinaire member of the right, was the one who told Ginsburg to get out, claiming he spoke for Reagan, a version the White House does not confirm.

As a result of the Bork-Ginsburg fiascoes, Reagan has now nominated, as his third choice for the Supreme Court, Judge Anthony Kennedy, backed by Baker in the showdown with Meese on the reasonable grounds that he was a confirmable conservative.

"HE WAS THE ONLY POLITICIAN WE COULD FIND WHO NEVER SMOKED POT, NEVER PLAGIARIZED HIS SPEECHES, AND NO WOMAN BUT HIS WIFE WOULD HAVE ANYTHING TO DO WITH!"

Judge Kennedy's Luck

Commentary By Arnold Sawislak
UPI Senior Editor
FOR THE MONTROSE VOICE

WASHINGTON—In Washington, it is a good rule of thumb to expect few new laws to be enacted and practically no presidential appointments to be rejected.

This is just a matter of numbers. Every year tens of thousands of bills are introduced and hundreds of nominations are sent to Capitol Hill. Only a few hundred bills become law; only a very few nominations are turned down.

The rejection of any presidential appointment is news in Washington because of the unwritten presumption that the president has the right to choose his own underlings for the executive branch.

Any attempt to defeat a nomination, even at the level of district judge or second-level bureaucrat, is regarded as akin to drawing a sword in the presence of a king—if you're going to do it, you better not be bluffing.

In a more contemporary context, a challenge to a president's Supreme Court or cabinet nomination may be seen as the equivalent of nuclear war. It is the kind of battle that you can't afford to lose, but it may cost you far more than you wanted to spend to win.

President Reagan's nomination of Judge Anthony Kennedy for the Supreme Court vacancy left by the resignation of Justice Lewis Powell illustrates the kind of situation the winners in a nomination brawl can find themselves.

When Reagan nominated Judge Robert Bork, liberals and moderates beat him on the issue of ideology, showing him to be so conservative in his view of the Constitution that he seemed to ignore much of what has happened in the life of the country since 1787. Bork's rigidity, not the opposition's publicity, beat him.

Then Reagan nominated Judge Douglas Ginsburg, who some described as a "baby Bork." Ten years younger than Bork, he had left a shorter paper trail of his views and some who felt he was just as hide-bound as the first nominee despaired of making a strong case against him.

They didn't have to; as a young adult of the 60's, Ginsburg dabbled in enough of the counter-culture to make him unacceptable to the ultra right-wingers who originally cheered his selection.

So Reagan turned to Kennedy, who acquired the image of moderate conservatism because White House chief of staff Howard Baker preferred him to Ginsburg. At one point in fact, Sen. Jesse Helms, D-N.C., was reported threatening a filibuster if Kennedy got the nod.

It may very well be that Kennedy is too conservative for senators like Joseph Biden, D-Del., Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and Howard Metzenbaum, D-

Ohio. But they are going to have a tough time if they try to beat Kennedy on the same issue they defeated Bork and it seems likely that Kennedy's closets will be thoroughly examined by the White House before the formal nomination is sent to the Senate.

In any case, the liberals have to beware of appearing to be blindly obstructionist and as stubbornly dogmatic as they accuse the conservatives of being.

So Kennedy, who might have been put through a wringer by the liberals if he had been the first choice for Powell's seat, may have an easier time when he goes before the Senate Judiciary Committee.

He certainly can't expect a free pass from the liberal lions, but the defeat of Bork and the hurried withdrawal of Ginsburg probably will make a conservative with common sense and a clear record look very good indeed to the committee's pivotal middle-of-the-road Democrats and Republicans.

Study: AIDS Rate Varies Greatly for Drug Users

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Federal health officials said a new four-city study has found that Los Angeles has a considerably lower rate of AIDS infection among its intravenous drug users than New York, it was reported last Saturday.

Officials from the National Institute of Drug Abuse, which sponsored the study, said the day before that they could not explain the difference in the rates of the two cities, but they theorized that the AIDS virus began spreading among the New York drug population earlier than in Los Angeles, the Los Angeles Times reported.

"Also, 'shooting galleries' are much more common in New York City than in Los Angeles, which may be one of the factors," said Dr. Roy Pickens, the institute's clinical research director, referring to places where addicts purchase and use narcotics, often sharing hypodermic needles.

Data was collected between March and September from 581 intravenous drug addicts under rehabilitation in New York, Los Angeles, central New Jersey and San Antonio, according to Charles Schuster, director of the institute.

Among the preliminary findings of the study released at a news conference last Friday was that New York had a 57 per cent infection rate compared to Los Angeles' 2.8 per cent. In New Jersey the rate was 39 per cent, while in San Antonio it was zero.

The study, however, examined only drug abusers who were undergoing treatment. Because most addicts are not being treated, Pickens suspected that the rates of infection in each of the cities were much higher. He added that other studies in Los Angeles indicate rates as high as 6 per cent.

Six more cities, including Miami and Baltimore will be looked at in the institute's ongoing study. "Data like this will be better when we get all the studies and put them together," Pickens said.

Schuster said rates of acquired immune deficiency syndrome infection among intravenous drug users has been rapidly increasing in the last few years.

GGB Sparkles in Brazil

Gay Happenings Worldwide
by John Hubert

The Grupo Gay da Bahia (GGB) in Salvador, Brazil, has published No. 14 of their Boletim Do Grupo Gay Da Bahia (Bulletin of the Gay Group of the State of Bahia). It is eight pages, legal size, and comes out three times a year with news about GGB and other groups in Brazil. $5 (US or Brazilian) will get you a year's subscription and $2 cash a sample copy in Portuguese.

juana, B.C., Mexico. A GGB supporter from Holland, Theo Smit, for the second time, sent them a generous contribution which has helped them with their publication and other activities. They hope other gays from more wealthy countries will follow their example, as with $30 US they can publish one edition of their bulletin.

GGB also would appreciate receiving any publications for their library, in any language. GGB is a member of the ILGA (International Lesbian and Gay Association) and of BWMT (Black and White Men Together). Write in English, Portuguese or Spanish to GGB, Caixa Postal 2552, 40.000 Salvador, Bahia, Brazil. On June 28, GGB celebrated Gay Pride Day with a grand rally and party in the Plaza Castro Alves, with music, speeches, distribution of pamphlets and gay pride buttons.

Two new gay groups from South Africa have joined the ILGA. The African Gay Association in Cape Town and the umbrella organizations for anti-apartheid groups, the Congress of Pink Democrats, are presently stabilizing their new twinning relations with ILGA European groups. The more wealthy and experienced group pays the ILGA membership fees for the new twin group, plus they exchange information about their activities and culture.

Black gay activist Simon Tseko Nkoli has been released from prison on bail after spending three years in jail. His trial continues and along with the other 21 black leaders, they expect to get the verdict in the coming months. The charges for inciting riots in which five people died carry the death penalty. So far there has been no evidence to link Simon, or any of the others, directly to the deaths. It is generally considered the most important political trial since the trial of Nelson Mandela some 25 years ago.

The Rand Gay Organization (RGO) continues to search for a new Lesbian and Gay Center in Soweto in order to begin immediate social services and counseling activities, as well as to provide a meeting place for interested lesbian and gay groups. Three national lesbian and gay groups from Sweden, Norway and Denmark are providing 100 pounds sterling ($165 US) a month for the next three years to cover the rent and operation costs. The RGO reports that Winnie Mandela, the wife of imprisoned ANC leader Nelson Mandela, has given her support to the gay liberation movement both in South Africa and to the ILGA.

The International Lesbian and Gay Association (ILGA) reports that the following groups are looking for a Twin: COGAM of Madrid, Spain; Gruop Y Que of Tijuana, Mexico; Triangulo Rosa de Rio de Janeiro, Brazil; and the Warsaw Homosexual Movement of Poland. Any interested group should write to Bill Schiller, ILGA, c/o RFSL, Box 350, S-10124 Stockholm, Sweden.

If your group is not now a member, you can obtain your ILGA membership and request a twin at the same time. Full or associate memberships for organizations are 60 pounds British ($100 US) and 35 pounds ($60 US) for individuals. A little ILGA benefit party by your group would probably easily raise your membership fees plus a little extra for the ILGA. They need it!

Another new group has started in Colombia called "Liberacion y Derechos" (Liberation and Rights). Their principal objectives are to educate and orient people who wish to become part of gay life in Bogota, the capital.

For more information, write to Camilo Caicedo, director, Liberacion y Derechos, Apartado Aereo 50284, Bogota 2, D.E., Colombia. Contacts from other groups and publications for their library will be especially appreciated.

Loren's (Lorenzo) Herrera, the founder of the three year old Grupo Polen, the youth group of Tijuana, Mexico, is preparing to make his first journey to Guadalajara and Mexico City to visit and learn from the gay groups in these two cities. Loren's, who is now pushing 19, is appealing for financial assistance for this important trip. If you can send a dollar or two or even five, that will do the trick. Wrap it in some paper so that it doesn't show and rush to Loren's Herrera, Presidente, Grupo Polen, Apdo. Postal 3404-Centro, Tijuana, B.C., Mexico.

A Purpose for Aries Emerging

By Mark Orion

Your Horoscope from the Voice

For Friday evening, November 27, through Friday morning, December 4, 1987.

ARIES—True to your essential nature, all that energy you've been feeling is finding its purpose and direction. You can be a real help to others. You're learning to share without giving it all away. Ever thought of becoming sex therapist?

TAURUS—Diamonds and rust. A keen awareness of a shining present is not without remainders of what has been and gone. Polish the memories into another kind of diamond and show some humility in the face of all you're blessed with.

GEMINI—Talent, ambition, and your love of what is both beautiful and romantic can combine to make this a time to remember. In fact, it might be a good idea to keep a diary of what's going on. Be easy with those less fortunate. A gentle touch could soothe a pained soul.

CANCER—Combination matchmaker and mediator, you're good at bringing people together and helping them along the way. You're feeling more selfless than usual. Your own needs and desires are not as pressing as those of the people you love. You're so kind.

LEO—So what's to be confused about? You just can't understand why everyone doesn't share your joie de vivre, but don't get flustered. By next time the answers will be obvious, and you'll be getting ready for a new adventure.

VIRGO—The fun you had last time has really inspired you. Your energy, creativity and playfulness are all in full swing, and swinging along is what you feel like doing. If the Thanksgiving season needed advertising, you could easily be the whole campaign.

LIBRA—You're getting more aggressive all the time. You even surprise yourself with your ability to go for it and get it. However, there's a surprise in store for you that will be truly a surprise: unexpected and out of no where. What's this?

SCORPIO—Lost in love? All around you life is going on with its usual routines, while you're off to the side, falling deeper and deeper, wondering where this is all going. Lost track of where you are? Staying close to the one you love is the best medicine for this.

SAGITTARIUS—How's your gender? You could teach someone who needs to know about theirs (and their sexuality) an important lesson. Allow yourself to take on the role of advisor, and you could have your hands full with a student who's more than eager to learn.

CAPRICORN—You're in the driver's seat, and the one sitting next to you is in for a fantastic ride. The right moves and turns are yours. Take off the safety belts; this is going to be a lot of fun. "We're in for a bumpy night," you said. "Drive," they said.

AQUARIUS—The times started off with a jolt of speed that you weren't quite prepared for. Now that things are under control, your mind is moving at an even faster rate. Keep turning those thoughts into action. (Speaking of action, there's plenty of that in the picture, too!)

PISCES—Loosen up. If you're being so hard on yourself, it's difficult for anyone to get close to you. Open up. Don't close yourself off just because you're putting in overtime on your self image. Try laughing at yourself for a change. Humor could help.

□ It's Only A Play

Many of us have very fond memories of Terrence McNally's The Ritz with its hilarious hijinks as a Mafia gunman chases a chubby garbage man through a bathhouse. Another play by him, It's Only a Play (Main Street Theater) is not nearly so manic. This is McNally in a more reflective mood.

Still, McNally reflecting is wilder and funnier than most other playwrights cutting loose. His characters are as broadly drawn as Christopher Durang's, but they have more to do. His philosophy isn't quite as profound as Joe Orton or recent Ayckbourn, but there's more hear in his work. Larry Shue would be his closest modern blood-brother, but, of course, Mr. Shue is dead. For which we can't really blame him. Plan crashes being what they are, but there you have it. The man simply isn't going to write another play.

When Sheridan wrote a play like this, it ran off and on, with great popularity, for 50 years. This one isn't going to do that. It's too topical. It's funny enough, but 30 years from now a lot of the humor will be flat. McNally dishes the dirt about too many people by name who may have been forgotten by then.

In fact, if you don't at least half way follow Broadway, the movies and T.V. you might miss a couple of the in-jokes even now. But the jokes keep flowing so fast and furiously that if you miss one, just wait a half minute for the next. Myself, I kept laughing so loud and so often that I was glad I was alone rather than embarrassing a date.

It is opening night of a play. The party of the year is going on downstairs to celebrate it. Everyone who is anyone is there. We, however, are upstairs with the motley crew of small time movers and shakers (shifters and twitchers?) who were responsible for putting on the play. We are in the bedroom of first-time-out producer Julia Budder (Ginny Lang). She is so flustered she just realized she's had her fairy boots on under her gown all evening. Peter the playwright is so upset we're not sure at first if he'll make the party at all. The leading man doesn't.

Peter's best friend James Wicker (Steve Garfinkle), whose first big break came in Peter's first play but who's too busy with his TV sitcom to star in and maybe save this one, does. Such a tongue on that one!

But not as bad as nasty critic Ira (Alan Horton-Welch) Drew's. He once said, in print, that the leading lady (Claire Hart-Palumbo) looked like a "female impersonator looking for a female to impersonate."

Will they all pull together or pull each other apart when the insufferably egotistical, kleptomaniac director (Tim Palumbo) gets his irreverent, insincere wish his first flop?

And who are the temp. and the cabby (Manning Mpinduzi-Mott and Peg Glazer) who keep horning in? Are they merely pushy yankees?

Director Patti Bean keeps everything moving at such a clip, flowing between such unlikely happenings so naturally that we see them for what they are the truth. Or at least what these flamboyant artists would want the truth to be.

How clever!

□ The Tempest

The Tempest (Stages) is going to be of most interest to people who attend that company's shows regularly. Mainly them, but not only them. I attended with a friend who had never seen (or read) this company or this show before and he did enjoy it, though not as much (I think) as he enjoyed Vampire Lesbian, which I will discuss next week.

This show is a learning, stretching exercise for important members of the company. Ellen Swenson, playing Ariel, a spirit of the air, is without that bird-like stiffness which has often characterized her to date. Sally Edmundson (Sometimes you have to go a long way out of your way to go a short way correctly.) changed her sex to play Antonio, Prospero's brother. She was able to submerge herself completely into the character to an extent I had not seen her do before.

Sturdy regulars in smaller roles also did wonderfully, and a trio of relative newcomers really shone. Julia Figueroa and Tim Gardner as the young lovers had fairly simple roles, but Caliban is one of the best roles Shakespeare ever wrote. It is, being a monster, more open to interpretation than many of his other powerful characters. Richard Johnson makes him very human, but tricky, and uses a melodious Caribbean accent with authority.

Stephano and Trinculo (Dane Cruz and Jeffrey Gimble) are funny! In this production, they are played as flaming queens. Given that, why didn't they go the one step further and re-define (or perhaps re-discover lusty Willy's definition) the innuendos of getting Caliban to worship them by letting him suck on their bottle?

The play centers around Prospero, however. Walton Wilson is too careful, trying too hard to put every brick just so. The edifice he erects is fairly imposing with little gingerbread and only a few warm-hearted gargoyles. There are candleabra burning in most of the windows, but the fireplaces are cold. All the lights are on, but there's nobody home.

To be fair, he is way too young for this role. He will do it very well indeed if he does it again in about 20 years. And this performance does exhibit a calm control which may have been his classroom assignment.

This South Seas version (lifted from Orson Welles' voodoo MacBeth?) does occasionally catch fire. But, all in all, director Ted Swindley has here provided us with the kind of evening we have more right to expect from educational theater that from a proud semi-pro company about to bankrupt itself by turning into a union house.

After a bizarre theft of props and costumes, Mummenschanz rescheduled their Houston appearance to December 1. Later, most of the dancemime group's losses were found undamaged in the trash bin of a mobile home firm that had also been burglarized.

Go 'Nuts' Over Streisand's Return

Houston Screens by Bill O'Rourke
Montrose Voice

Nuts is the first film Barbra Streisand has made in four years, ever since Yentl. In that time she's been making a well publicized search for strong scripts with roles right for her, no matter what the size. It's said she optioned As Is and planned to do the small role of the nurse.

In Claudia Faith Draper she has found a role which not only shows off her heavy dramatic talents, the side of her deft way with a piercing wisecrack, the side of her most fans adore the most.

It has been two years since her Broadway album. Although she wrote the music for this movie, it is still instrumental. Unfortunately, we do not get to hear her sing again, just yet.

Streisand was also the producer. Wisely, to make sure her star didn't overpower everyone else and unbalance the show, she made sure than anyone else with more than five lines in this small cast was a very well respected, seasoned pro, many deserving, if not actually having, the same magnitude. Richard Dreyfuss, Maureen Stapleton, Karl Malden, James Whitmore, Eli Wallach and Robert Webber what a dream cast!

Barbra the producer also decided to opt for a little more objectivity in her director and a lot more time to work on her own character than she would have had if she directed herself again. This is director Martin Ritt's 25th movie. His past work includes such solid hits as The Long, Hot Summer, The Great White Hope and Norma Rae.

You may remember the Alley's production, about three or four years ago, of this play. It was quite a success. People were talking about it all over town. Well, playwright Tom Topor was one of three people to jointly adapt his stage piece to the screen.

Although the action has been opened up a little to include some scenes in the Barbra Streisand stars in "Nuts" as a strong-willed woman who launches a fierce battle to prove her mental competence mental hospital and flashbacks illustrating major points of the testimony, the majority of the show is in the courtroom.

I am about to give away a lot of the plot. You only get it in bits and pieces in the movie. If you don't want to know what's happening before the film tips its hand, skip the next paragraph.

Mrs. Draper has had to develop a healthy skepticism and an adversarial stance towards the world, especially men. Her father deserted her. Her stepfather was a child molester. Her husband was a wife beater. When she finally took responsibility for and ownership of her own life and became a call girl, one of her clients, when the session should have been over, tried to rape her and then attacked her violently.

In protecting herself, she killed him. Her influential stepfather (again) did not want the humiliation of a public scrutiny for either his child or himself.

So he arranged for her to be declared mentally incompetent to stand trial. This is the hearing at which she has a chance to prove her sanity, to save herself from up to 15 years without trial in a state mental institution and to give herself a chance to prove her innocence.

I'm glad to see a film that is grownup enough to agree with Heinlein's Lazarus Long. I quote Time Enough for Love, "A whore should be judged by the same criteria as other professionals offering services for pay. ... It is possible that the percentage of honest and competent whores is higher than that of plumbers and much higher than that of lawyers."

However, I know a few fairly successful call boys. They do not live in the "best" parts of town. They can't afford it. I'm afraid I have nearly as much trouble believing Mrs. Draper can afford a $2,400 a month apartment as I did that Lois Lane, on a reporter's salary, could afford a penthouse with a roof garden.

To my sorrow, I have a lot easier time believing the male chauvinist pig worst cast scenario that makes up her biography. I hope the time will come when all peoplewomen, blacks, gays, etc. will band together with other people not in the weak, dependent sense of needing them but in the confident sense of merely wanting to be with them. The laws, few in number, will be based on reason lains of the series.

Chilly Scenes of Winter (Rice, 28 and 29) Two Salt Lake City civil servants (John Heard and Mary Beth Hurt) comically attempt to deal with passionate love.

Salvation! (MFA, 28 and 29) A family living in a trailer camp takes over a televangelist.

Ancient Treasures from the Deep (Channel 8, 1, 7:30 p.m.) exploring a 23 century old shipwreck.

This is Our Home, It is Not for Sale (Rice, 3, 7:00 p.m.) Jon Schwartz's documentary tracing the history of Houston's Riverside neighborhood. Music by that area's own Arnett Cobb.

So, with a worthwhile intent and a nearly flawless execution, my only choice is to give this show a four out of four rating.

what started out with great promise soon wilted and became just another jumbled movie showcase for two major talents who seem miscast. Director Elaine May made sure there are some funny moments, like the blind camel in a crowded marketplace and a few one-liners, but they cannot rescue things. Obviously patterned after the Bing Crosby-Bob Hope "Road" pictures of yesteryear, this is more like a detour; there's no Crosby and certainly there's no hope. 1987. 107 minutes. RCA-Columbia Pictures Home Video. Rated PG-13. $89.95.

"Superman IV: The Quest For Peace"—It's time Christopher Reeve hung up his cape and moved on. His Superman series has about run out of gas. What once was a good idea has now become tired and repetitious. While Superman is whisking in and out of outer space, busily trying to end the global arms race (he catches missiles and throws them into the sun), he is challenged and nearly done in by an equally super Nuclear Man, a creation of the evil Lex Luthor (Gene Hackman hamming it up.) But, of course, the Man of Steel emerges triumphant, which is more than can be said for the movie. On

"Million-Dollar Mystery"—A light-weight treasure hunt film starring a group of unknowns who could very well stay that way. A shadowy government official (Tom Bosley, the only "name" in the cast) suffers a fatal heart attack at a small Arizona roadside restaurant, but before he dies he gives the gaping diners some obscure clues about a $4 million fortune he has hidden. The rest is a wild, cliché-riddled chase for the loot, a minor league version of "It's A Mad Mad Mad Mad World" without the inspired mayhem. 1987. 95 minutes. HBO Video. Rated PG. $79.95.

"A Tree Grows in Brooklyn"—Another golden oldie making its home video debut. An excellent period piece, it deals with the determination of a young girl to rise above the squalid tenement surroundings in turn-of-the-century Brooklyn. "Rodney Dangerfield: It's Not Easy Bein' Me"—It may not be easy, but it's funny. Rodney runs through a series of rapid-fire, self-deprecating comedy routines filmed at his New York club, "Dangerfield's." When he's not busily bemoaning everything ("I don't get no respect,") he shares the spotlight with six promising new comics, including Roseanne Barr, Jeff Altman and Sam Kinison, named the Comedy Awards' Best New Comedian of 1987. The Oriental Eye Delights in Contrasts

Hi Art! by Bill O'Rourke
Montrose Voice

Mr. Tik Kon Ho of Hong Kong is displaying many of his paintings at the Houston Chinese Community Culture and Service Center. It is a good bit of a drive down Southwest, but it is worth your while. You will enter a world of nature rarely visited by humans, seen through the eyes of a sister counter-culture. Who knows? You might also get a chance to help build the rainbow coalition.

There are landscapes, full of clouds and waterfalls and birds, that will tantalize you with the illusion that if you peer closer you could make out more detail through the mist.

There are few tigers, seemingly all teeth, eyes and muscle. One doesn't want to get too close to these magnificent beasts.

There are extreme closeups of bamboo or flowers with their attendant birds and insects. Look closely here and you will see that the ink they are drawn with is translucent. You can see right through them, reminding us that their beauty is all the more precious because it is ephemeral, of but a moment's duration.

Composition is extremely important, not only the curves of where something is but also the blunt starkness of where something isn't. That is what gives this soft loveliness its hard edge. Always remember—the eye, perhaps especially the Oriental eye, delights in contrasts.

Schwarzenegger Sets The Box-Office Pace

By Vernon Scott
UPI Hollywood Reporter
FOR THE MONTROSE VOICE

HOLLYWOOD—Arnold Schwarzenegger's "Running Man" outpaced the rest of the nation's motion pictures at the box office last week despite a drop of 30 percent at the turnstiles.

With musclemen Schwarzenegger starring as a super athlete in a futuristic life-and-death game show, "The Running Man" grossed $5.6 million in its second week in release.

So far it has earned $15.9 million in 1,692 theaters.

Disney continued its corporate run of good luck with another re-release of one of its classic feature-length animated cartoons. In its opening week "Cinderella" cashed in her glass slipper to the tune of $5.1 million on 1,646 screens to nab the No. 2 spot in the rankings.

Earlier this year Disney re-issued "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," which picked off a whopping $45.5 million.

Another new release, "Flowers in the Attic," was No. 3 with a gross of $5 million. The grim drama of four children left to wither in the upper floor of their grandparents' mansion, "Flowers in the Attic" features a no-name cast, excepting Louise Fletcher as a chilling granny. It opened in 1,051 theaters.

The fall's biggest money-earner, "Fatal Attraction," dropped two clicks from No. 2 to No. 4, but still managed to gross $4.9 million in its 10th week. So far it has earned an eye-popping $101.3 million.

"Nuts," Barbra Streisand's new drama of a family torn by accusations of insanity, was No. 5. In a limited opening, 536 theaters, "Nuts" grossed $4.6 million for an impressive $8,593 per-screen average.

"Teen Wolf Too," starring Jason Bateman of TV's "Valerie's Family" picked up $3 million in its debut week on 1,540 screens. It was No. 6.

The national box office approached the holiday season with robust attractions. The 13 top films grossed $1 million or more each, although excepting the four new arrivals, all hold-over percentages dropped in double digits.

It is almost assured that the domestic box office for 1987 will reach the $4 billion mark for the first time in history. So far this year the total gross is $3.5 billion. Last year at this time it was $3.1 billion.

The top 10, last week's gross, total gross, weeks in release:

1. "The Running Man," $5.6 million,

2. "Cinderella," $5.1 million, 1 week.
3. "Flowers in the Attic," $5 million, 1 week.
4. "Fatal Attraction," $4.9 million, $101.3 million, 10 weeks.
5. "Nuts," $4.6 million, 1 week.
6. "Teen Wolf Too," $3 million, 1 week.
7. "Hello Again," $2.6 million, $14.9 million, 3 weeks.
8. "Baby Boom," $1.6 million, $18.3 million, 7 weeks.

EYEBEAM

WELL, SALLY, IT'S FRIDAY NIGHT! WHAT'S ON OUR PARTY WEEKEND AGENDA?

SLEEP. I'M BEAT. I HAD A LONG, HARD WEEK.

YEAH, I GUESS I'D FADE PRETTY FAST TOO. OH WELL, SATURDAY'S WHEN THE REAL WEEKEND BEGINS...

I'LL HAVE TO DO LAUNDRY- I'M OUT OF UNDERWEAR. PLUS IT'S THE ONLY DAY I CAN PICK UP THAT PACKAGE FROM THE POST OFFICE...

I SHOULD SPEND SOME TIME AT THE OFFICE, TOO. BIG CASE THIS WEEK.

IT'S YOUR TURN TO VACUUM. AND WE'D BETTER FIND A PLACE FOR THAT PILE OF LUMBER BEFORE IT KILLS THE GRASS UNDER IT.

THEY JUST DON'T MAKE WEEKENDS LIKE THEY USED TO.

NO, BUT HAVE YOU TRIED THE NEW, IMPROVED MONDAYS? WAKE UP AND SMELL THE DECAF...

SAFE SEX?

For your mental health, have sex. For your physical health, make it safe sex. Safe sex is where there are no bodily fluids exchanged. The virus which leads to an AIDS condition is believed usually transmitted from one person to another from blood or semen. Those who are "receptive" are especially at risk. Do condoms protect? They certainly help. But condoms MUST be used with a water-based lubricant. Petroleum or vegetable-based lubricants will actually dissolve the condom and eliminate the protection. Please "Play Safe."

A CLASSIFIED AFFAIR?

John Preston and Frederick Brandt can show you how to have active fun or play passive games with the personal ads. In their book, "Classified Affairs," they'll tell you how to write an ad that really stands out, what to expect when you place or respond to an ad, and even what all those funny little abbreviations mean. Send $8 to "Classified Affairs," Alyson Pub., Dept. P-5, 40 Plympton, St., Boston, MA 02118. (Also included will be a coupon for $5 off on your next Personals in your choice of 25 publications, including the Voice.)
