A New Club In Oklahoma

University of Houston alumni in the Oklahoma City area have formed the first U of H club in the Sooner State.

On February 1, the evening the Cougars played the OCU Chiefs in basketball, the alums of Oklahoma City held an organizational meeting and elected officers for the coming year.

On hand to help launch the club was Cougar Basketball Coach Guy V. Lewis and Association Director Ted Hendricks.

Jim Parrish '54 was elected the first president of the club, and George Durbin was elected vice president. Cissie Newlin Sullivan is secretary-treasurer, and Jack Stalsby was elected reporter.

The Oklahoma Cougars initiated a plan to hold a meeting on April 13, the night of the Association's general meeting for all alumni of the University. While the general meeting is in progress in Houston, the Oklahoma Cougars will be holding their first annual Alumni Banquet.

Dr. Philip G. Hoffman, vice president and dean of faculties at the University, will speak to the Oklahoma club members. He will attend the banquet as the guest of the Alumni Association and the Oklahoma Chapter. There will be a social hour after the meeting.

All alumni in the central Oklahoma area are invited, and reservations may be made through Jack Stalsby, Continental Oil Company, Fidelity National Building, 200 North Harvey, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

Vice President Hoffman, guest speaker

If you are in the Tulsa area, Oklahoma City is only a short drive away on the Turnpike, and this meeting would be a good opportunity to get some advice in launching your own alumni group.

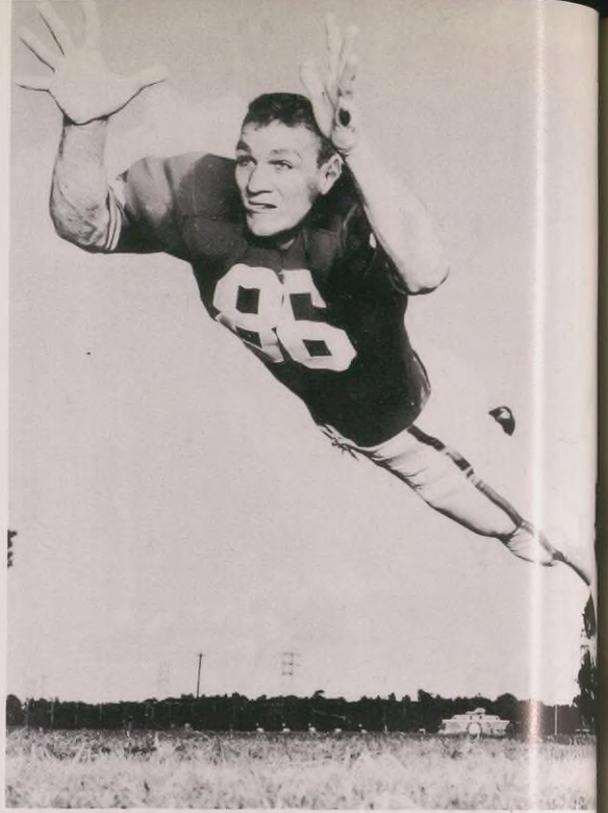

In addition to scheduling the April 13 meeting, the Oklahoma City Club plans a yearly schedule of approximately four meetings. The April meeting each year will be a banquet-business gathering, and the three others will be social.

At the inaugural meeting, the group discussed the possibilities for a summer family picnic, a theater party in the early fall and an athletic-event gathering when the University football or basketball team schedules another game in the area.

The Alumni Office would like to urge all alumni interested in forming a club in their area to contact the Association for a Club Handbook right away. The official Alumni Day at the University of Houston is the second Wednesday of April each year, a fine time for organizational meetings.

Many universities and colleges have annual meeting days. For example, University of Texas alumni meet on March 2, and Texas A&M has its annual muster on that same date. This is tradition at its best, and ours is just beginning.

A listing of the Association's various area chairmen and their addresses can be found on page two of this edition of The EXtra.

Varsity vs. Exes: March 26

The fourth annual Varsity-Exes football game will be played on the evening of March 26 in Jeppeson Stadium on Cullen Boulevard. In the fourth outing of this rivalry the Varsity stands 2-1, looking for a chance to lengthen the lead.

The only victory for the oldsters was the 26-13 aerial circus that was the second game of the series. All of the contests have been close ones, and last year's was no exception. Early in the game Bob Clatterbuck, who had completed 23 out of 26 the previous year, pulled a muscle, and before the Exes were rallied by Don Flynn in the middle of the second quarter, the Varsity had a two touchdown lead. From that time on, the strong rushes of Don coupled with timely short completions to Joe Bob Smith made a real contest of what at first seemed to be a runaway. The final score was Varsity 26, Exes 20.

The game this year will have a strong professional flavor again, especially since the new American Football League has opened up more berths for players of professional calibre. Many of our Exes have signed in the AFL and will be on hand on the 26th for a sort of unscheduled spring training.

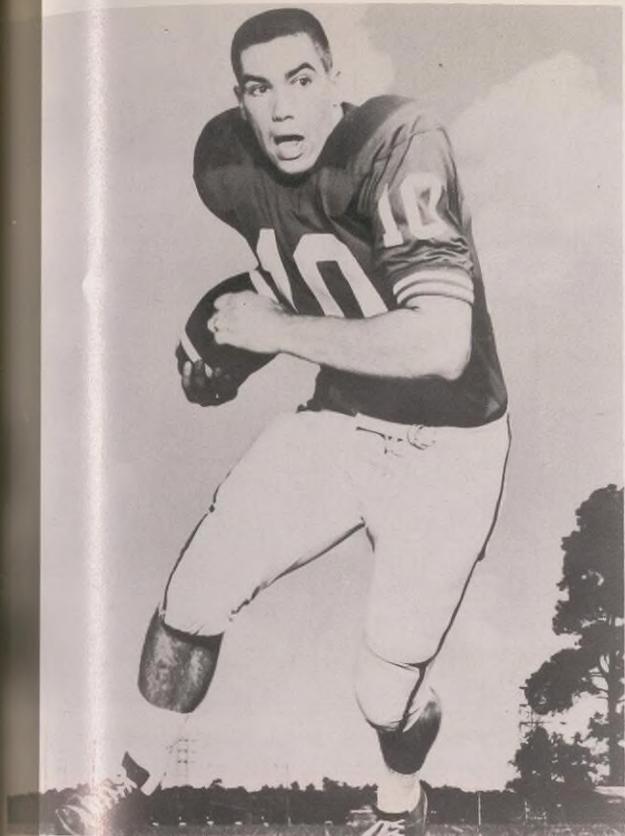

A run-down on the players will be carried later in the newspapers and is not available as EXtra goes to press. However, several players have been on hand at the Varsity's training sessions. Among these are the "Golden Toe" Ken Hawkins and Marvin Durrenberger, the chairman for this year's game. Don Flynn, Don Caraway, Harold Lewis of the World Champion Baltimore Colts and Joe Bob Smith have also been heard from. Joe Bob was the leading pass receiver in the Canadian Football League last season and will head back north this summer with Burr Davis, another Canada stalwart.

Marvin Durrenberger, game chairman, has announced that the official coach for the Exes this year will be Bill Cook, Houston's Austin High School head coach. Bill's appointment will start a tradition of having Exes designated as coaches for the Exes team each year. Bill was chosen to initiate the tradition since he has been a head coach in a major school longer than any other Ex.

The game will be played under free substitution rules for the Exes and under NCAA rules for the Varsity. All Exes who suit out will be played for at least a short period, Bill reported. "Naturally we play to win because there wouldn't be any fun in it for any other reason," the coach said.

The UH Varsity has a big problem as it goes work this spring. Although recruiting has been apparently successful, especially in the junior college area, there will be some good-sized shoes to fill. With only two returning lettermen at end, Linden and Dorsett, some sophs and junior college candidates have their work cut out.

The line is strong and a bit deeper, even considering the loss of Colvin, Pierce and others. Principle challengers seem to be Johnny Rogers and Johnny Branson trying to oust workhorse Jim Windham at Guard; Jim Norris, Gerald Deen and Mutt Bowers fighting for a tackle berth with John Semian and Danny Birdwell holding the center position.

Backfieldwise, the most interesting spot will be at man-under. In brief flashes last season, transfer Don Sessions demonstrated a whiplash throwing arm with 205 pounds of hustle. With the new substitution rules in effect, Don will be able to rest while the Cougars are on defense and thereby give the Big Red a stronger scoring threat than in the past several seasons. Spelling him will be Larry Lindsey, who played at end last year, and David Bradshaw. Both strong on defense, they have shown occasional sparks of real leadership offensively in the past, so the QB slot may be tough to hold.

Running backs will see some real new talent. With the change to an Exes shirt for Claude King, Ken Bolin, Eddie Mitchamore and Robert Sanders will be in the spotlight. At fullback, the decision is easy. In early spring scrimmages, junior letterman Charlie Rieves has served notice to all that he will be on tap for any occasion involving the knocking together of heads.

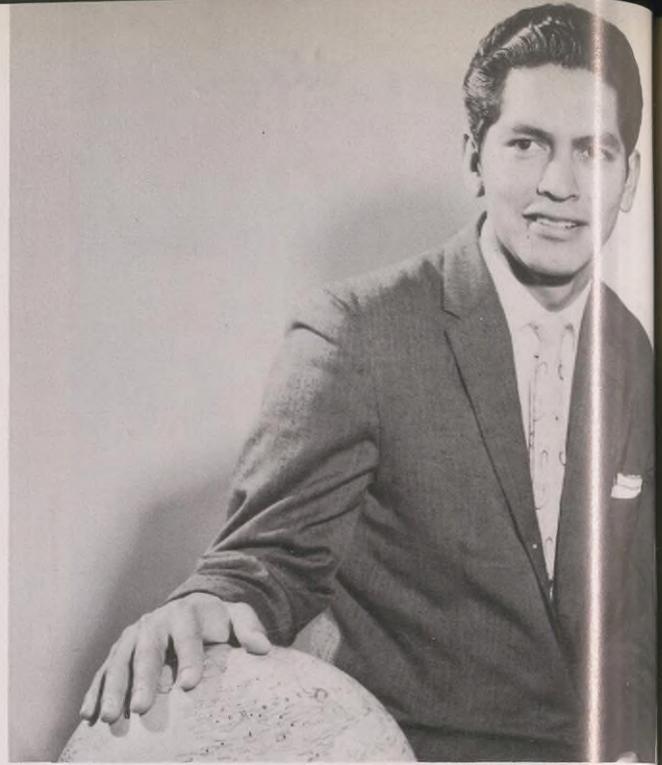

Hilmer Potchinski will bolster this position, and certainly no better man have the Cougars had for some time. Pot has been the good luck charm at crucial times for the Big Red; witness the Miami game of a year ago when he broke the first running play for 40 yards and put the team in position for a score that led to a happy win, breaking a four-game losing streak.

This spring the Big Red will put up a most interesting array of talent, but it will have to go some because Exes also want to even up the score in games.

Game time is 8 PM, and the price hasn't changed: $1.50 for adults, $.75 for students and $.50 for children under 12. Advance tickets will be on sale at Oshman's, the Alumni Office on the campus and through the H Association. If you buy in advance, you get four tickets for five bucks, a dollar savings.

Remember that date, Saturday night, March 26.

On alumni and faculty

Lopez

Many Alumni will remember Thomas L. Lopez, now assistant advisor for University foreign students, as Lupe Lopez, guard on the winning varsity basketball team during the years of 1954-56.

Lopez graduated in 1956 with a degree in accounting and went to work for Interstate Life Insurance Company. After seven months as a accountant with the firm, he was drafted and spent the next two years in the Army. He was assigned to the medical corps, but after basic training he was placed in a field that he knew very well: basketball. He was based in San Antonio and played for a team called the Medical Service Comets.

After he was discharged in January, 1959, Lopez paid a call to the campus and visited an old friend, C. L. Farrington, who is chairman of the foreign language division and advisor for foreign students.

Lopez, who speaks Spanish and English equally well, had once taken a Spanish course from Mr. Farrington, not to learn the language but to keep in touch with it. Their acquaintance proved to be a fortuitous one because Lopez was looking for a job and Mr. Farrington was looking for an assistant foreign student advisor.

Lopez thought the job sounded interesting when he heard about it, and, he said, "it becomes more so as I go along."

The University enrollment now includes 250 foreign students, representing 56 countries. Lopez's knowledge of Spanish comes in handy when students with language difficulties come to him for counseling because 40 per cent of the foreign students are from Spanish-speaking countries.

Good will
good work

The first semester is the hardest, Lopez said, for the foreign student. If a student has any language difficulty, he usually reports to Lopez's office right away. He probably needs counseling of several varieties, from where to eat and sleep to what courses he should take. Lopez remarked parenthetically that foreign students are usually encouraged to live in the dormitories for their first semester.

University curriculum includes a course entitled English for Foreign Students which is a class which meets for five hours weekly and may be substituted for the regular freshman English course.

Most University foreign students, he said, are male. About 40 per cent are studying engineering and most others are studying one of the sciences. A few are majoring in business administration.

There has been a gradual increase in the number of foreign students at the University," he said. The situation at the University reflects the trend over the country which Lopez sees as a beneficial thing for the student and for the United States.

The tall basketball player is working on his MA in Spanish literature. He is interested in continuing his work with foreign students and in teaching.

Born in Houston, the 25-year-old foreign student advisor is still playing basketball. "I play now for exercise and the fun of it," he said.

He plays with the La Rose Cleaners team which is a member of the Major City League. Lopez's team plays other teams in Houston, but nobody worries about the score. Another University Alumnus, George (Doc) Jones, plays on the La Rose team. They play twice a week during the basketball season.

Lopez is married and the father of two children, John, 2½, and Velma, eight months. His wife, Alice, recently went to work for the American Insurance Group Company as a policy writer. She is experienced in the insurance business. Alice and Lopez were working for the same insurance company when they were married. She continued to work there after he was drafted but quit when the children started arriving. Lopez and his family live at 4205 Koehler.

Another alumnus, Henry G. Escamilla, is working for international good will as an international sales representative for Southwestern Industrial Products in Mexico City.

A graduate of the class of 1950, he received both a BBA and an MBA with a major in foreign trade from the University. As soon as he received his MBA he went to work in the oil fields for Pemex, the federal petroleum company of Mexico.

Escamilla spent two years roughing it in the oil fields of Reynosa, covering all the fields where drilling was being done. It was in the small town of Coatzacoalos, Veracruz, that he met his wife, Aurora, a first cousin of Miguel Aleman, former president of Mexico. The newlyweds lived in Coatzacoalos until they returned to the United States. The 38-year-old alumnus first came to the United States in 1926.

The Escamillas had scarcely arrived in Houston when another alumnus, W. F. (Bill) Gore, introduced Henry to a neighbor, K. R. Delman, who is president of Southwestern Industrial Electronics. Delman wanted to survey Mexico to determine if there was a need for SIE products.

Escamilla found himself retracing his steps to Mexico to make the survey. The trip led him into a new field, the geophysical side of oil exploration. He has been there ever since.

Some of Escamilla's customers for SIE include Pemex, Secretara de Curos Hidraulicos and other government agencies as well as independent drilling and exploration companies. Escamilla's work has taken him into all areas of Mexico.

A United States Army veteran, Escamilla served in the U.S. and in the Philippines. It was in the Army that he became an American citizen. Although he was born in Mexico City and now lives there, he has retained his American citizenship. Escamilla's mother and sister still reside in Houston. His sister attended the University and majored in foreign languages.

While he was a student at the University, Escamilla was a member of Phi Theta Kappa, Phi Kappa Phi, French Club, on the committee of international relations for the Junior Chamber of Commerce, a member of the Inter-American Club of Houston and was listed in the "Who's Who Among Students" in colleges and universities in the United States.

The young foreign trade graduate's business is now six years old. Started on a shoestring, it began with the surveys he made for Delman.

Escamilla believes that relations between Mexico and the United States are improving. In general, he said, Mexicans understand the U.S. better than Americans understand Mexico, a situation which he attributes in part to the fact that many Mexicans study English very early in their school years.

He also stated that when Americans go to Mexico, they should remember that they are in a foreign country, under different laws. Americans, he cautioned, should not expect citizens of a foreign country to do things as they are done in the United States.

The people of Mexico have their own philosophy, he added; they are quite happy and proud of their country.

The Escamillas have three children, Enrique, Rosa Aurora and Jorge. They live at Melchor Ocampo 264 in Mexico City.

EXtra articles and pictures have often featured members of the faculty at work. You've seen or read about scientists in white smocks running intricate experiments, architects concentrating on their drawing boards and lecturers busy at the blackboard or with their notes. EXtra Photographer Ted Johnson has focused on another aspect of faculty life in this edition. It offers you a look at the faculty relaxing together at the Faculty Club.

Frontier Fiesta

University students agreed to suspend production of the 1960 Frontier Fiesta and to appoint a committee to begin work on the 1961 show.

Because some participating organizations failed to meet scholastic and other requirements, the students agreed to cancel the 1960 performance of the western show which was scheduled for six days in April.

The students, representatives of campus organizations participating in Fiesta and comprising the Fiesta Association, decided to hold a substitute activity during the 1960 spring holidays.

Under the direction of Drama Major Pat Harrison, the activity will be a variety show in the vein of the discontinued Varsity Varieties and will be called Fiesta Festival.

The Fiesta Festival will be held for two nights during the regular Fiesta holidays, April 18-23. As the EXtra went to press, definite dates for the two-night run had not been selected.

Parents and friends

The question of tax support for the University of Houston will be discussed by General A. D. Bruce, chancellor, at the annual spring meeting of the Parents and Friends Society, Saturday, May 14.

All parents and friends of University students are invited to attend the session which will start at 2 PM in the M. D. Anderson Library auditorium.

Robert L. Davis, president of PAFS, will preside at the meeting.

New facility

A $21,542 addition to journalism and graphic arts department facilities has been approved by the University Board of Governors.

The addition is designed to relieve overcrowded conditions of present facilities and will be financed by funds earned by student publications, according to Bruce Underwood, chairman of the department.

The 20x120-foot addition will be joined to existing buildings, forming the east side of a quadrangle, and will provide 2880 square feet of space.

The new space will house a laboratory for advertising, typography and news and feature writing, office facilities for the Houstonian, campus yearbook, two offices for faculty and staff and rest rooms.

The addition will be constructed of grey transite siding with a red composition shingle roof in keeping with the existing facilities. The University maintenance department will handle construction on the project. Construction time has been estimated at two months.

Architecture alums

The University of Houston Architectural Society is interested in forming a permanent alumni group called Friends of the UHAS. For an annual dues fee of $2, members would receive information and invitations for all major UHAS functions.

The Society holds numerous parties and receptions for visiting lecturers to the College of Architecture to which the auxiliary organization would be invited.

The UHAS needs current information about alumni activities in order to keep accurate and up-to-date records. All former students and graduates are requested to send in changes in address and other pertinent information.

The UHAS is planning a trip to Mexico City from April 13-20 to which former students are invited. The tour will leave from the Architecture Building on April 13, returning to Houston late on the evening of April 19. Tour members will stay at the Regis Hotel in Mexico City. Price of the trip, including bus fare, two days of tour and hotel bill, will be $46 per person.

All communications to the UHAS can be addressed to the University of Houston Architectural Society, University of Houston, Houston 4, Texas.

MARILYN MILLER, 21-year-old elementary education senior, has been named Miss Houstonian, the staff of the campus yearbook announced. Miss Miller was chosen from a group of ten campus beauties who were selected by judges to appear in the Vanity Fair section of the 1960 yearbook. The annual will be distributed during the summer.

NEWS IN BRIEF

JAN McMULLAN, 21-year-old radio-television major, has been selected the best-dressed coed on the University campus. As the University's best-dressed coed, Miss McMullan will be entered in a competition sponsored by a national magazine which will determine the ten best-dressed coeds in the nation. The University contest was sponsored by the Cougar, student newspaper.

ROTC change

Some 130 ROTC students at the University will be affected by a revamped course of study announced by the Department of the Army, according to Lt. Col. Jack M. Smith, professor of military science and tactics.

Effective this fall, the change will mean fewer hours of military instruction which a cadet will replace with regular University courses in science, psychology, speech or political science.

Military subjects on the campus have been revised and revitalized and will be taught by active Army personnel.

Military subjects, such as crew-served weapons training, removed from the campus phase of instruction, will be presented at a six weeks summer camp normally attended between the junior and senior years. It is the opinion of the Department of the Army that these subjects lend themselves to better presentation while the cadet is at an active Army training site.

Law fellowship

Raymond L. Britton, assistant professor of law, has been awarded a $6500 Ford Foundation fellowship for advanced legal study at the Harvard Law School.

The award is the third which members of the University College of Law faculty have received in consecutive years. Britton received the Ford Foundation fellowship through nation-wide competition and plans to begin his year of residence at Harvard in September.

Other law faculty who have received large grants for advanced study are John Neibel, assistant dean of the College of Law and associate professor of law, who received a $5000 Cook fellowship to study at the University of Michigan in 1958-59; and James R. Gough, assistant professor of law, who received a $5500 Ford Foundation fellowship to study at Columbia University in 1959-60.

All three grants have been for study toward the Doctor of Jurisprudence degree.

Enrollment

A total of 10,700 students have registered for the spring term at the University, according to Ramon Vitulli, registrar.

The figure represents an approximate eight per cent decline from the fall enrollment. This drop from fall to spring is normal, Vitulli stated.

The University, now being considered as the 20th unit in the state system of higher education, lost approximately 1500 students last September as tuition was raised to an average of $650 per year for full-time students.

The increase was necessary because of operating deficits now averaging $700,000 per year.

Vitulli said that losses in enrollment were concentrated among freshmen and sophomore students. These students, most of whom are eligible for state junior college aid, pay only $500 instead of $650 per year in tuition.

Careers Inc.

Careers Incorporated is now distributing a book entitled "Career: For the Experienced Engineer and Scientist" in which a group of leading employers describe new job opportunities for technical personnel.

The book will be sent free to anyone in the classes of 1941 to 1957. These alumni will also receive a monthly newsletter and confidential registration in the National Manpower Register.

Members of other classes can order "Career" through local bookstores or direct from Simon & Schuster. It is priced at $1.95.

Those entitled to free copies should write to:

Careers Incorporated
15 West 45th Street
New York 36, N. Y.

Requests for the book should include your name, address, college, class and major field.

Carin Cone

Carin Cone

By Ted Nance

Six days a week while most of the 10,000-plus students at the University of Houston are sleeping, turning off noisy alarm clocks, or eating breakfast, one Cougar coed is doing something entirely different.

She's swimming.

A couple of hours later when this early morning mermaid returns to a busy slate of classes, few of her fellow students could identify her as Carin Cone, one of the world's greatest women swimmers in the backstroke event.

To them she's just another sophomore. Even then, however, they are mighty wrong.

For Carin Cone is a rare combination of beauty, brains, talent and competitive spirit.

This pretty lass who will be 20 in April is: an Olympic and world record holder, has an "A" average in college, and was one of ten finalists in the annual Vanity Fair beauty contest sponsored by the campus yearbook, the Houstonian.

An active member of Delta Gamma sorority, Carin finds time for dates and other activities in her crowded schedule of schoolwork and training.

Training, of course, is the reason for her early morning pool plunges. Phill Hansel, her coach and former UH swim master, can tell you all about that.

Here is a typical training day described by Hansel.

"Carin is up by 6:45 a.m. and in the pool at Southeastern Junior High in Pasadena by 7:15. She's out of the water at 8:30 and in class by nine, usually eating breakfast, fixing her hair, and making up on the way back to the campus," explains Hansel.

Incidentally, Hansel gets quite a workout himself. It's a long way from the Hansel homestead in Hunter Creek near Spring Branch to Pasadena. Consequently the coach is up about a hour before his star pupils.

Two other UH coeds and nationally-ranked swimmers join Carin under Hansel's direction. They are Brenda Dietz and Eileen Murphy.

The coaching of Hansel, a former Purdue University swim captain who is now vice-president of Allied Securities in Houston, was the prime reason Carin picked Houston over the University of Maryland, much closer to her home in Ridgewood, N.J.

Her high school "A" average and ranking at the top of a class of 488 could have provided her with an academic scholarship to just about any college.

Carin's competitive spirit is one of her greatest assets, according to Hansel. But, at times she relieves too much on her desire to win, the worried coach says. You've got to be in excellent physical condition, too, in order to compete in the national and international meets, Hansel says.

"I'd say that Carin is just about at the same point in her training that she was at last year at this time," relates her coach, recognized as one of America's finest young swim mentors.

If she can come up with winning performances like she did last year, Hansel will be happy, to say the least.

The 5-6, 130-pound blonde splashed her way to, among other titles, two backstroke records in both the indoor and outdoor national meets. Later, she raced to a record and two gold medals in the Pan-American games in Chicago, Ill.

With the Olympics in Rome just months away, Carin will swim in the following big meets in preparation for the world championships in Italy:

The indoor championships are April 14-16 in Bartlesville, Okla., just before her birthday on the 18th.

In early July she'll travel to Indianapolis, Ind., for the outdoor nationals.

Then, the first week in August, the Olympic trials will be held in Detroit, Mich.

Carin will move into the Shamrock Hilton's 50-meter pool in April to get ready for this tough competition.

Naturally, her big goal is to win in the Olympics. She just missed in 1956 in Melbourne, Australia, where Judy Grinham of England was awarded first place on the judges' decision, though both girls had the same record-setting time.

If she does make it to Rome this summer, Carin will have the benefit of previous Olympic competition and maturity.

An invitation For all Alumni

The annual general meeting of the Alumni of the University of Houston will be held on April 13 at 8 PM in Oberholtzer Hall Ballroom. All alumni are invited.

In addition to the regular meeting, nominations of candidates for office and other business, a discussion of the University's bid for full support from the State of Texas will be led by John Toomey, president of the Alumni Association. Several University administrative officials will be on hand for a question and answer session.

The annual meeting will follow the University hearing before the Commission on High Education which is scheduled for April 11 in Austin, making the discussion especially timely and pertinent.

Every alumnus should be well informed on the subject of state aid since the success or failure of the University's request could depend on the overall opinion of the public. Public opinion may be influenced directly by what you, as an alumnus, have to say when questioned on the subject. Your friends and others who know you are an alumnus will ask you for your opinion.

The nomination for election of the four principle officers of the Association, president, vice president, secretary and treasurer, and the five director's positions that are open by rotation will be on the agenda for the 13th.

Nominations may be made in three ways: by the nominating committee, by voice from the floor of the general meeting or by petition signed by 21 dues-paying members. The petition must be filed in the Alumni Office on the campus 24 hours prior to the meeting.

To be eligible to vote or to be nominated to office, an alumnus must be a dues-paying member as of March 31 in the year of election. In other words, to vote a person must have paid dues prior to April 1 of 1960 and after April 1 of 1959. All proxy votes must be signed and filed in the Alumni Office on the campus 24 hours prior to the meeting.

The election of officers and directors will be held by mail following the general election. Ballots will be sent to members through the mail.

We urge you to encourage your friends to attend the meeting, and if they are not current dues-payers, encourage them to do so in time to vote.

Voting privileges, like muscles, must be exercised to be strong and effective.
