Nearly 100 new exhibitors in this year's Spring Festival

It must be spring!

The Westheimer Colony Art Festival enters its sixteenth year Saturday, April 8, with more and better art and crafts to usher in springtime in Montrose.

Among the 276 juried artists from across the United States, but especially from the Southwest, will be approximately 90 who will be displaying their talent for the first time at the corner of Montrose and Westheimer.

"We received more than 400 applications from exhibitors, many of whom signed up for this show before leaving the fall show in October," said Gayle Mueller, festival director. "Our fall show was an exceptional one for the artists, many of whom said they were sold out by Sunday afternoon."

The festival this year has a threefold personality: art, entertainment and food.

Tomorrow—What the new Two Pesos will look like in June

A new custom-designed Two Pesos Chiquita Cafe, one-quarter the size of the company's usual mostly drive-through Mexican restaurants, and built especially for Montrose, will soon beckon the hungry at the corner of Westheimer and Montrose, where once stood Willie's Grand Prize Bar-B-Que.

"We're making a substantial investment here," said John Schwartz, vice president of operational systems and a designer for this rapidly expanding restaurant chain. "We think Montrose has had a bum rap at times. We're out to prove it's a great place. We hope our effort will spur revitalization." To reflect the nature of Montrose, Schwartz says for the first time the building will have graphic arts and be kind of artzy. The corner lot is not large enough for a regular Two Pesos restaurant so

Yesterday—What was left of Willie's Grand Prize Bar-B-Que

Schwartz has designed a building suited for the space. Little parking is needed because Two Pesos is largely a drive-through operation.

Said Schwartz: "We will still make all our dishes from scratch on the spot, including the tortillas. As is our custom, our kitchen will take up a larger proportion of the building than chain restaurants that bring in ready-to-serve food. This is my pet project. It's going to be a fun place in a fun part of town."

Schwartz said that the traffic in the area should support the cafe as well as the large number of people who live within walking distance of the corner. He said he has confidence in Montrose. Crime has lessened and things are happening. "And it doesn't hurt to have a police substation just down the street," he added.

The cafe is due to open in June.

lesbian novels strongly influenced this generation's Rita Mae Brown), and Tennessee Williams (who, hopefully, needs no introduction).

Both Cornell and Yale Universities have established gay and lesbian collections as well as courses. It is quite amazing that something the United States Supreme Court has ruled as being illegal (based, as they claimed, on historical precedent, is recognized so openly by the educated of our society.

Just as it affects all facets of our lives, AIDS contributes to the urgency to preserve our gay heritage. Much of that heritage has always been oral—passed from generation to generation in the only recognizable minority that does not depend on procreation.

We are all becoming too accustomed to reading the obituaries. The other day one caught our eye in The New York Times: "Dr. John M. Hefton, a biomedical researcher whose work in skin grafting led to new techniques for treating burn victims, died of AIDS Thursday at New York Hospital. He was 50 years old and lived in Manhattan. ... He lived with his longtime companion, Scott C. Hudson. ..." He was on the faculty of Cornell University Medical College.

This is part of our heritage. Undoubtedly thousands of burn victims have been helped or even saved as the result of Dr. Hefton's work. We can only wonder how many other talented gays have died without any notice. We know of a Texas writer who died a few years ago, leaving a wife and family, and only a handful of men close to him who knew that he was gay and that he died of AIDS.

In nearly every city with a significant gay population there is, tucked away in some niche, a gay archive—usually lovingly attended by a lone individual with meager funds. Maybe, like so many other gay matters, this is something we'll tend to when the Holocaust is over. The Holocaust itself is contributing volumes to this very same gay heritage. It will be for a later generation to sort it all out. In this time of premature death it is at least reassuring to know that there will be a next generation.

Our uniqueness as non-procreators assures us of a progeny. It is one of the great ironies of our time that it is often the worst enemies who contribute to our continuity—not so, Phyllis Scheffy?

With bar openings to attend and parks to explore and sundry other pursuits to challenge the everyday routine of many gay men, it is understandable that few of us have the time or inclination to reflect on the broader issues of gay and lesbian life.

All cultures and all societies leave it to a handful to preserve their history, to write their past and define their future. Such is the case with gay history. (For the sake of condensation we shall use gay to mean women and men in this context.)

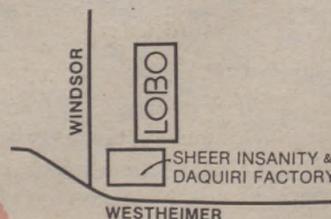

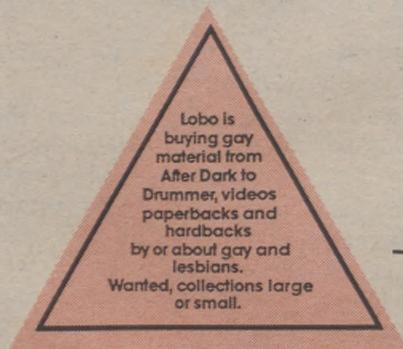

That we have a history, a definable past, should be important to us all. A recent study established the existence of homosexuality in every known society in recorded history. Surprisingly, a majority of such societies viewed it favorably—and not surprisingly, the most condemning has been the Christian-Judeo tradition in which we now live.

Unfortunately, much of our past is obscured both by the participants and by the later writers of history. A case in point is explored in the current Advocate, dealing with T.E. Lawrence, as in Lawrence of Arabia. Repeatedly in history family and associates have conspired to obscure the homosexuality of many famous men and women. The miracle is that we know as much as we do about as many as we do.

American history is based on hundreds of years of experience on this continent and connecting back across the ocean. Gay history, on the contrary, is relatively new and usually left to poorly financed, understaffed private archives. However, major repositories of gay history have long existed. Walt Whitman's notebooks in which he entered the names of his one-night stands rested in the Library of Congress for decades. Even his most recent biographer chose to ignore them and preferred, for his own Christian-Judeo reasons, to believe that Whitman was asexual and held only a platonic belief in "comradeship."

The University of Texas, in an aptly named Gay and Lesbian Collection, holds the papers of Edward Carpenter (a nineteenth century Englishman unashamedly gay and who tried to open Whitman's closet), Radclyffe Hall (her "Well of Loneliness" pushed open not only a few closet doors but also cracked a few inches in the door of censorship), Djuna Barnes (her

Women's Network offers new programs beginning Wednesday

At a depth of 150 feet, a member of Dr. Bass' excavation team explores oldest known shipwreck off Turkish coast

The Women's Network, a support and educational group established by the Women's Program of the Montrose Counseling Center, meets Wednesday, April 12, in the first of a series of twice-a-month workshops.

The Network is designed to serve particularly, but not exclusively, the lesbian and bi-sexual community of Houston women, although all women are welcome.

Wednesday's meeting, entitled "Building Self-Esteem," is presented by Gabriella Rappaport and will be held at 7:00 p.m. at the Center, 900 Lovett Blvd., Suite 203.

—HGLPC sends help

At its meeting Wednesday, the Houston Gay/Lesbian Political Caucus voted unanimously to send $1,295 to the Lesbian/Gay Rights Lobby in Austin, having learned that the effort there is languishing. Most of the money was raised last week through sponsorship of a benefit performance of Wilde West at Main Street Theatre.

A standing room only crowd learned that the Caucus now has 370 members, a dramatic increase since the elections. Future activities are to man a registration booth at Mary's during the Westheimer Colony Art Festival and make preparations for the group's participation in the March on Austin April 30.

—'Junk Fest'

Catholic Charities, a multi-service social agency helping people of all faiths, will host the first "Eat, Drink and Garage Fest" Saturday and Sunday, April 8-9 at 3520 Montrose Blvd. from 10:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.

Referring to the on-going Westheimer Colony Art Festival, the Charities' slogan is "Tired of seeing Art? Come see our junk." On sale will be foods, handicrafts, Asian artwear, furniture, children's and adults' clothes, toys, kitchen goods, books, wallpaper, and antiques. All proceeds go to the Charities' many services to young parents, immigrants and refugees.

—AMIGA

In a special celebration to commemorate March as Women's History Month, All Mujeres Interested in Getting Active (AMIGA) inducted three latinas to the first AMIGA "Hall of Fame."

Rossana Daumas, feminist and activist was chosen for her success in bringing together lesbiana latinas in Houston, category: Community Service.

Edna Garcia, guitarist and singer, was recognized for her unselfish energy in music performance, category: Visual and Performing Arts.

Carmen Zepeda, psychotherapist and businesswoman, was honored for continuing to bring together latinas in workshop learning forums, category: Education.

—Noted archaeologist

Dr. George Fletcher Bass, excavator of the oldest known shipwreck in the world (14th century B.C.), will give an illustrated lecture on "Underwater Archaeology: A Bronze Age Shipwreck" on Sunday, April 9 in University of St. Thomas' Jones Hall Auditorium, 3910 Yoakum Blvd., at 8:00 p.m. Admission is free.

Bass, who received his doctorate in classical archaeology from the University of Pennsylvania, directed the excavation of a Bronze Age shipwreck off the coast of Turkey in 1960, while still a graduate student. He later founded the Institute of Nautical Archaeology, a private institute now affiliated with Texas A&M University, which is involved in research on four continents.

Publisher of six books and more than 100 articles on archaeology, his most recent book, "Ships and Shipwrecks of the Americas" was published in October, 1988.

Bass' personal interests continue to be shipwrecks in Turkey, including an 11th century medieval ship with a cargo of Islamic glass and a 14th century B.C. wreck with a cargo of raw copper, tin, ivory and glass.

First Annual Houston Conference on AIDS In America

*Hyatt Regency Houston
Houston, Texas
May 11-12, 1989*

Conference Director—Adan Rios, M.D.
Conference Co-Director—Gordon Crofoot, M.D.
Conference Coordinator—Lynne K. Tiras, CMP

The purpose of the Houston Conference on AIDS in America is to provide a forum for the City of Houston to bring the best of its efforts, its people, and its talents together to create an environment conducive to facilitating the creation of new strategies against the AIDS epidemic. It has been estimated by the Texas Department of Health that 100,000 Texans are infected with the Human Immunodeficiency Virus. As we attempt to translate this number into the humane, social, and economical devastation that it represents for the State of Texas and our society in general, the magnitude of the AIDS problem in Texas becomes painfully evident.

This year AIDS as it relates to the workplace, with its associated impact on the overall economy as well as the future of legislative efforts designed to help in the solution of this tragic problem in Texas, forms the core of the First Annual Houston Conference on AIDS in America. There has been no limitation in our effort in bringing together a distinguished faculty for this event.

—Patty's pool parlor

What a great party! The food was good, the music was good and everybody had a good time. Betsy sweetheart, you are to be commended for your hospitality. Patty and the rest of the board were really surprised and touched by everyone's expression of appreciation for the work we do. The plaques presented to us by Bob and Susie are more meaningful than any of the trophies any of us received. Thank you all very much.

Don't forget to submit your applications for the H.B.I.T. tournament. The deadline of April 30 isn't far away and Lisa (781-6801), Ann (868-4636) and Mitch (880-9308) are still waiting for your calls. Call any one of these young ladies for additional information about registration fees, tournament location, etc. As always, it will be held over the Memorial Day weekend and, as always, it will be fun.

Now that the season and all the festivities are officially over, Ann will resume the qualifying play for the Bacchus tournament. You all know how it works so get down to Bacchus on Sunday afternoon and toss your hat into the ring.

On a sadder note, we all learned at the party of O.D.'s illness and were told that he is in serious condition. On behalf of the entire league I want to express my most sincere best wishes to him and hope that he has a speedy recovery. He's a very special person and we all must do whatever we can to help him through this. Prayers, visits, get well cards, anything you can do to help this wonderful man will be appreciated. We love you O.D.

Nearly 100 new exhibitors in this year's Spring Festival

It must be spring!

The Westheimer Colony Art Festival enters its sixteenth year Saturday, April 8, with more and better art and crafts to usher in springtime in Montrose.

Among the 276 juried artists from across the United States, but especially from the Southwest, will be approximately 90 who will be displaying their talent for the first time at the corner of Montrose and Westheimer.

"We received more than 400 applications from exhibitors, many of whom signed up for this show before leaving the fall show in October," said Gayle Mueller, festival director. "Our fall show was an exceptional one for the artists, many of whom said they were sold out by Sunday afternoon."

The festival this year has a threefold personality: art, entertainment and food.

Arts and crafts

The artists in the festival have been juried for their unique, original works in metal, wood, glass, pen and ink, contemporary and impressionistic art, paper works, photography, pottery, sculptures, water colors, fabric and Western art. With the upswing in interest in art of the Old West and Southwest, many of the artists juried into this spring show will be displaying Western oils and water colors, mixed media, collages, pottery and jewelry.

Artists such as Randy Wilkerson of Amarillo, Sherry Banks and Alyne Carter of Austin, Becky Anthony of Lipan, Texas and Ron Mitchell of Oklahoma City will be showing an unusual group of Southwestern art graphics. New to this outdoor show, Wilkerson, a descendant of a full-blooded Choctaw Indian, has developed a traditional style of painting using mixed media water solubles while striving for a three dimensional effect. His works are widely accepted nationwide and in several foreign countries.

Bringing an almost portrait-like dimension to her water colors, Banks displays the early Indian in a striking show of depth and color. The wide scope of the early Western landscapes is evident in many of Anthony's pieces.

Along with the artists' concept of the Southwest are the pottery pieces that reflect those early days in their design and colors. Using the muted tones of mauve, soft blues, grays and tans of the desert sunsets, Betty and Fred Vance of San Antonio will be showing their wall murals and sculptural pottery.

Another view of the West will be seen

Metal fused sculpture by Austin's Daryl Colburn is example of high quality arts and crafts at Westheimer Colony Art Festival opening Saturday in the booth featuring Shirley O's distinctive designs, which is originally created Western denim jackets. Created by Shirley Bianchi and Joanne Carpenter of Humble, these jackets feature bridal lace with pearls, velvet, suedes and leathers.

Entertainment

The stage on the Yoakum side of the Block of Art will be busy throughout the two days from 10:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. bringing a variety of entertainers from all parts of Houston.

Chief among the groups will be students from the High School for the Performing and Visual Arts, one of the institutions receiving funds from the Festival for the past four years. Starting at 10:00 a.m. Saturday, there will be presentations by the Clarinet Quartet, a woodwind trio and a woodwind duet. The HSPVA jazz sextet will perform from 11:00 a.m. to noon.

Students from the Theater Department of HSPVA will present Loren Wheelers and Keith Davis in two dramatic presentations while Kevin Cayhoon and Darlesia Cearcey will display the intricate steps of the Charleston dance until 1:00 p.m. They will be followed by Claudia Zarate and Vincent Sandoval who will give a "ballet folklorico" demonstration.

Saturday afternoon will be filled with jugglers and comedians, and Godfrey's Rangers, a local musical group.

Sunday performances begin at 10:00 a.m. with radio station KLOE playing the Beatles and olden goldies, to be followed by the comedians of the Flaming Idiots, the music of the Gypsies and the Uptown Boogie Band, Rhythm and Blues with a Texas Sound, Many Kids, an Acres Home dance company of boys and girls performing jazz, modern and gospel music and dance, and concluding with the always popular Klickity Kloggers.

The Festival regularly provides scholarship funds to HSPVA. Two $5000 scholarships have provided two graduating seniors money to help continue their education in the arts. In the summer of 1988, two students, one in dance and one in violin studies, were given scholarships to the summer program of the International Music Camp at Interlochen, Michigan.

Food

Eight different types of food will add to the personality of the festival.

A taste of Japan will be found in Bud Sukamoto's booth where he will be serving shish-ke-bab of beef or sausage with vegetables, shrimp tempura, vegetable tempura and egg roll.

Noemi of Noemi's Tacos will offer an array of Mexican foods including tamales, burrito, tortilla, nachos and sausage on a stick with a Latin touch—the addition of a soft tortilla.

The current rage for Cajun foods will be satisfied by Me-Maw's Kitchen, which will serve red beans and rice, seafood gumbo and pralines.

A Texas touch can be found at Luther's bar-b-que.

Raymond Wong's Asia Rendezvous offers food with a Malaysian twist: curry puffs, shrimp crackens and keropok.

Other booths will offer steak and shrimp on a stick, frozen yogurt, funnel cakes and fried ice cream.

Food can be purchased direct from each booth. Cold drinks are purchased with tickets bought at special booths.

As in the past, the 1000 block of Westheimer from Yoakum to Montrose will be closed to auto traffic, thereby providing walking space to the Festival entrances on Montrose and Yoakum. Since this one block will be free of traffic, there will be room for the Urban Animals, a roller skating group, to provide the crowds with impromptu shows.

Also as in the past, there is a one dollar donation to enter the Block of Art, the proceeds to be used for local charities and for cultural and visual art projects.

(Next week, The Montrose Voice's Arts Reporter will present a critique of the arts and crafts of the Westheimer Colony Art Festival).

'Happy Hooker' back in U.S. after 17-year exile

By DENISE BARRICKLOW
FOR THE MONTROSE VOICE

NEW YORK (UPI)—Former high society madam and "happy hooker" Xaviera Hollander, back in the United States after 17 years of exile, said Tuesday she hopes to start a talk show to make Americans less "uptight" about sex.

Hollander gained worldwide notoriety in 1971 with her best-selling book, "The Happy Hooker," which chronicled her life as a call girl and madam at several exclusive brothels on Manhattan's Upper East Side.

A year later, Hollander became embroiled in another scandal when she testified about payoffs to cops before the Knapp Commission, a panel set up to probe widespread police corruption in the city.

Under threat of deportation, Hollander, a Dutch citizen, left the United States in 1972. She was denied permission to re-enter the country for 17 years but was granted a visitor's visa this month.

"For so many years I was treated like an outcast. I'm glad to be back," the pretty but portly 45-year-old former madam told a news conference.

Hollander, author of a monthly advice column in Penthouse magazine, said she planned a three-week visit to the United States to explore the possibility of writing another book or starring in a talk show.

She said her talk show would aim to make Americans less "uptight" about their sex lives.

"People take sex too seriously. For a lot of people, it's still done with the lights off. I'm all for explaining," Hollander said.

Hollander said she planned to tour the country to get reacquainted with the land where she once plied her trade.

"I don't know what America wants. I haven't been here and I really can't judge yet what's happened. But I know it's become progressively more puritanical compared to when "The Happy Hooker" was written," she said.

"Today a life of frivolity is out," said Hollander, whose demure flowered dress and graying locks contrasted sharply with the brazen, mini-skirted young woman on the cover of "The Happy Hooker."

Fear of AIDS is partly to blame for the new conservatism, she said.

"AIDS creates selectivity. It stops frivolous promiscuity. I think the fear is a little bit exaggerated, but I'm glad I'm not 17 and at the beginning of a sexual career. I'm glad I'm not a prostitute anymore," she said.

But she does not regret her past.

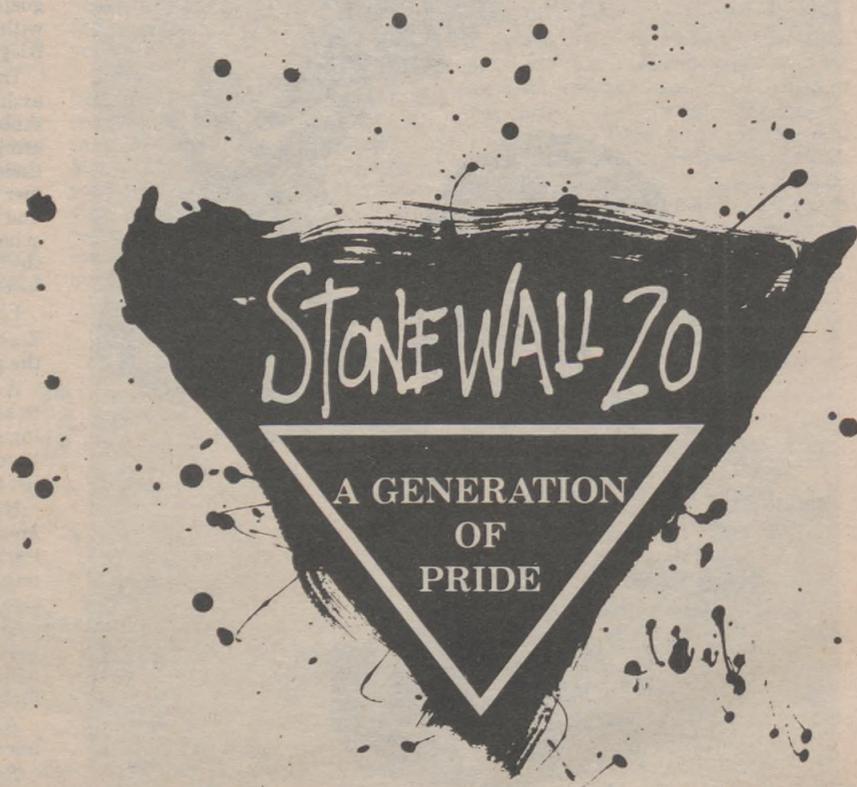

"I've done a lot of good for the nation," she said. "I was the first person who dared to call the beast by its name. I was the first woman to use four letter words and say that sex was fun. I've done something for the sexual revolution."

Hollander has lived in Canada, Spain, Mexico and Holland, writing some 20 books and setting up a telephone sex business in the Netherlands, which she claimed was very successful.

"The one and only thing you can get from telephone sex is a hearing aid," she quipped.

Hollander said she plans to visit San Francisco, Washington, and New Orleans.

Teenage boys more sexually active, survey finds

By ROB STEIN

UPI Science Writer
FOR THE MONTROSE VOICE

BOSTON—Teenage boys in the United States have become more sexually active in the past nine years but because of the AIDS threat a lot more of them are using condoms, a study said March 30.

The first comprehensive national survey of sexual behavior among U.S. male teenagers in the 1980s found 76 percent ages 17 to 19 reported having sexual intercourse in 1988—up from 65 percent in 1979.

The increase, however, coincided with a sharp jump in condom use, the survey found. Fifty-eight percent of males 17 to 19 said they used a condom the last time they had sex in 1988—a dramatic increase from 21 percent in 1979.

The researchers noted the survey was written to ask the same questions in different ways to detect whether those surveyed were exaggerating their sexual activity—a common criticism of such surveys.

"Even though more teenage males were sexually active in 1988 than in 1979, proportionately fewer males were unprotected in 1988," said Freya Sonenstein, a sociologist from Brandeis University in Waltham, Mass.

"The apparent increase in condom use in teenage males between 1979 and 1988 is probably a result of increased awareness of the risks of AIDS and increased knowledge about the capacity of condoms to prevent the transmission of this virus," she said.

The bulk of the increase in condom use apparently occurred in the last two years, said Sonenstein, who conducted the study with Joseph Pleck of Wheaton College in Norton, Mass., and was to present the findings at a meeting of the Population Association of America in Baltimore.

Sonenstein noted however that the teenage males who needed to use condoms the most—those engaging in high-risk activities—were the least likely to use them.

"The bad news is that kids who might be categorized for being at high risk for AIDS transmission are showing lower levels of condom use than other kids," Sonenstein said.

Only 51 percent of the teens considered at very high risk for contracting AIDS used condoms compared to 66 percent of those considered at low risk, she said.

High-risk activities include intravenous drug use, sex with intravenous drug user, sex with prostitutes and having many sexual partners.

For the survey, the Institute for Survey Research at Temple University interviewed a representative sample of 1880 unmarried males ages 15 through 19 between April and Nov. 1988. Sonenstein compared the results with a similar survey conducted in 1979.

Sixty percent of those questioned in the new survey said they were sexually active and 57 percent reported using a condom the last time they had sex.

The levels of sexual activity increased with age. Among the 15-year-olds, 33 percent had had sexual intercourse. The proportion rose to 50 percent among 16-year-olds and 66 percent among 17-year-olds. By age 19, 86 percent of males reported having sexual intercourse.

Sexual activity varied by race and ethnic group. While 81 percent of black males ages 15 to 19 reported having sexual intercourse, the percentage dropped to 60 percent among Hispanics and 57 percent among whites.

The greatest variation in sexual activity occurred at the youngest age. Two-thirds of 15-year-old blacks had had intercourse. But only one-third of Hispanics and one-quarter of whites that age were sexually experienced.

Blacks overall, however, also reported a higher rate of condom use, with 66 percent reporting condom use compared to 54 percent of whites and 53 percent of Hispanics.

This is a very busy month for art in Montrose

By ALLEN THOMSON
The Montrose Voice

In addition to the offerings of the Westheimer Colony Art Festival this weekend, numerous galleries expose other artists in the following weeks.

The Watercolor Art Society of Houston presents a retrospective show of Ballet Folklorico paintings by Houston artist Dave Mahavier during the month of April.

The paintings display a colorful array of ribbons, dresses and swirling skirts that lead the eye through the composition to the focal point of the dancers' faces. Over two years worth of work have gone into the series of 20 paintings represented in the show, backed up by the artist's 25 years of experience as a designer and commercial artist.

The show runs through April 29 at the WASH Gallery at 3209 Montrose, one-half block south of Westheimer. Gallery hours are Monday-Saturday, 10:00 a.m.-3 p.m.

The Society is also presenting the 13th National Exhibition representing artists from coast to coast. This display will continue through May 12 at Interfirst Plaza, 1100 Louisiana, Monday-Friday, 9:00 a.m.-6 p.m.

Artist Richard Williams will exhibit wall reliefs at the O'Kane Gallery, University of Houston-Downtown, April 10-28 with the formal opening April 13, 7-9 p.m.

The O'Kane Gallery is located at One Main Street and is open 10:00 a.m.-5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Williams has received a variety of awards for his works. He has shown at the Drawing Room Gallery, the Art League of Houston, the Glassell Museum School of Art, Blaffer Gallery and other galleries in Texas, Louisiana and Germany.

Thirty-one glass artists from the United States and Europe will present sculptures representing glass making techniques, in an exhibit at Judy Youens Gallery through April 20.

Among the artists represented will be Dale Chihuly, Damian Priour, Keith Brocklehurst, Gene Koss and Kyohei

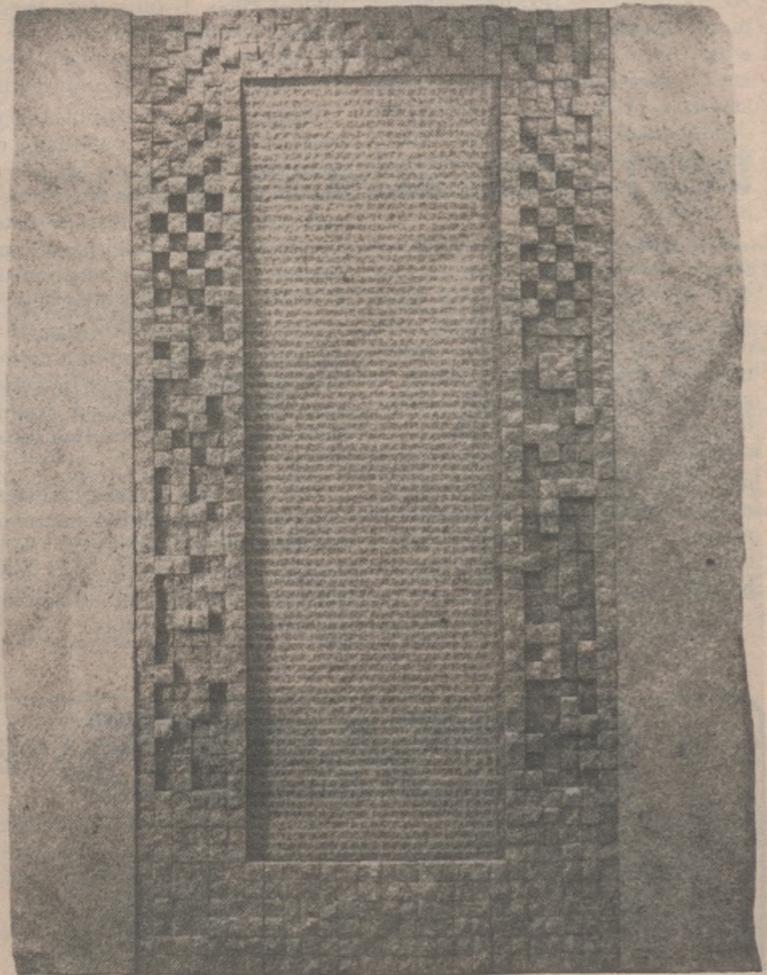

Sculpture by Isabel McIlvain at Meredith Long

Fujita. Youens Gallery is located at 2631 Colquitt. Gallery hours are Monday through Friday, 10:00 a.m.-5 p.m., Saturday 11:00 a.m.-5 p.m.

Meredith Long and Co. has announced its exhibition of Important Contemporary Sculpture by 13 American and European artists.

Works included in the show will be by Stanley Boxer, Anthony Caro, John Duff, Allan Hacklin, Bryan Hunt, Win Knowlton, Isabel McIlvain, Jesus Bautista Moroles, Mimmo Paladino, Michael Steiner, Turko Trajan, William

Contemporary sculpture by Jesus Bautista Moroles

Turnbull and James Wolfe.

The exhibition will continue through April 21 at Meredith Long Gallery, 2323 San Felipe, Tuesday through Saturday, 10:00 a.m.-6 p.m.

In response to all the calls about "Texas Art Celebration '89," the exhibition will be on display through May 18 at 1600 Smith St., 7:00 a.m.-7 p.m., Monday through Friday, 9:00 a.m.-6 p.m. Saturday and noon to 5 p.m. Sunday.

Illegal strip-searches follow AIDS rally arrests

NEW YORK (UPI)—Police acknowledged Sunday that 30 women arrested during a protest over funding for AIDS sufferers wrongfully were strip-searched and said departmental charges would be brought against at least two matrons.

The strip searches of members of the AIDS Coalition to Unleash Power, or ACT Up, were "clearly improper" in light of the "minor charges" against the women, said Alice McGillion, the deputy police commissioner for public affairs.

Police department regulations require that all people taken into custody be patted down by an arresting officer, but strip-searches are conducted only when the initial search creates a "reasonable" belief that weapons or drugs may be hidden on a suspect.

Even then, permission must be obtained from a desk officer before a strip-search is conducted.

Police acknowledged some matrons have been conducting illegal searches on women prisoners, apparently in an overzealous effort to find drugs. However, ACT Up demonstrators said there was no attempt to search their clothing.

"They certainly couldn't have been looking for crack," said Catherine Saalfield, 23, of Manhattan, who said she was ordered to strip in a separate cell, as were other protesters, at the Seventh Precinct on Manhattan's Lower East Side.

"They never checked the pockets of my jacket. It was purely for intimidation and harassment," she charged.

Police attendants forced many of the women to remove their clothing and underwear, squat and bend over, said the women, who had been arrested outside City Hall during a protest Tuesday to demand more money for better medical treatment and housing for people with AIDS.

In all, some 200 ACT Up members were arrested for disorderly conduct, resisting arrest, or both, after they briefly blocked morning rush-hour traffic with nearly 3000 protesters on the Brooklyn Bridge, Broadway, Centre Street and Park Row.

A preliminary inquiry found 30 of 41 women were subjected to unauthorized strip-searches at the Midtown South Precinct and the Seventh Precinct, police confirmed.

"Two civilian attendants in both precincts were strip-searching on these minor charges," McGillion said. "That's a violation of our rules, and charges and specifications will be brought against them because their actions were clearly improper."

Police said men who were arrested apparently were not subjected to strip-searches because they were processed by regular police officers more familiar with the departmental regulations.

Some of the women, however, said police officers shared blame with matrons.

"The police escorted us there," said Rachel Lurie, 26, of Manhattan, referring to cells at the Seventh Precinct where she and others were searched.

"The police knew what was happening. It wasn't as if the matrons just did it on their own," she said.

Some women complained they also were verbally harassed in the precinct house, but said it was unclear whether officers or others inside the station were responsible for abusive language directed at them.

"The whole experience was unnerving," said Ellen Neipris. "Everyone was trying to calm each other, not to let it humiliate us."

Some of the women threatened to sue the city for subjecting them to the illegal searches.

"I'm going to do as much as I can to keep them from doing something like this again," said Gerri Wells, a 34-year-old photographer who said she also was held overnight in a pen crowded with prostitutes and drug addicts.

The protesters have been ordered to appear in court next month to face charges in connection with the demonstration.

Texans as whole are informed about AIDS, survey shows

By JERI CLAUSING
FOR THE MONTROSE VOICE

AUSTIN (UPI)—Texans overall are more informed than the national average on AIDS, although only a small percentage consider themselves at risk of contracting the deadly disease and only half reporting multiple sex partners have used condoms, a survey released March 31 shows.

And while tolerance for AIDS sufferers was directly linked to how well informed respondents were about the virus, only 59 percent were opposed to quarantines for people infected with the virus, which is spread primarily through the transfer of body fluids and blood.

Still, 65 percent said they would allow children infected with the virus to attend public schools and 58 percent would afford AIDS patients the same legal protections as the handicapped.

The survey, conducted by the University of Texas for the Texas Department of Health, showed that middle class Texans were best informed about the virus and how it is spread, and that a number of people are changing their sexual habits.

"Some of us have become less promiscuous. Some of us are using condoms. Some of us have become monogamous, and a few of us have become celibate," Dr. Robert Bernstein, Commissioner of Health, said in releasing results of the telephone survey of more than 16,000 adults.

Bernstein said two-thirds of the 13 percent who admitted having more than one sexual partner in the past year reported they had changed their behavior as a result of the epidemic.

Still, only half of those judged sexually active, but non-monogamous, reported using condoms in the last year. Condoms are the best known way to lessen the risk of spreading the disease through sex.

On questions relating to basic knowledge about the virus and how it is spread, there seemed to be knowledge gaps among certain ethnic groups, with 56 percent of Hispanics and 50 percent of blacks giving incorrect answers, compared to 30 percent of whites.

"We've got a long way to go in some areas of the heterosexual population," said Christie Reed, director of the Texas Department of Health's AIDS Division. "For example, two out of five Texans think you can contract AIDS by donating blood. That's wrong."

In a 10 question section on AIDS knowledge, she said, 37 percent of Anglos answered at least eight questions correctly, compared to 22 percent of Hispanics and 17 percent of blacks.

"This indicates a need to overcome language and cultural barriers if we're going to reach all segments of the Texas population," Reed said.

The survey, which cost $136,000, was funded by the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta. The goal, Bernstein said, was to gauge knowledge of the virus among the general population and see what groups should be targeted by AIDS prevention education.

"I think we've done an outstanding job (on educating the general public)," Bernstein said. "But obviously, we're not where we ought to be or where we hope to be."

"Health education from kindergarten on is an absolute must. This has to do with not just AIDS. It has to do with smoking, we're still killing ourselves with cigarettes. It has to do with teenage pregnancy. It has to do with drug use and alcohol."

And he emphasized the education must be handled by professionals, "not by an assistant coach who has nothing to do on a rainy day."

Mecham's running again; Senate rejects new trial

By DAVID HURLBERT
FOR THE MONTROSE VOICE

PHOENIX (UPI)—State Senate President Robert Usdane rejected Wednesday a request by former Gov. Evan Mecham for a new impeachment trial and said he did not think Mecham could legally run for governor again.

Mecham's attorney, Donald MacPherson, filed a series of documents with the Senate Tuesday, seeking dismissal of the impeachment charges against Mecham or a new trial. The request came hours before Mecham announced Tuesday night that he would try to regain the governorship in 1990.

Mecham did not seem surprised by Usdane's action, telling reporters, "We thank him for his prompt attention." But Mecham stood by his claims that the Senate had violated its own rules during last year's impeachment trial.

"There wasn't even an impeachment legally," Mecham said.

Usdane, R-Scottsdale, said that on the advice of Senate attorneys and after talking with other senators, he had decided to return the documents to MacPherson.

Usdane said the decision was based on grounds the Court of Impeachment that convicted Mecham on two of three charges and the 38th Legislature "did not exist." The Court of Impeachment, composed of the 30 state senators, adjourned after ousting Mecham from office on April 4, 1988, and a new Legislature was elected last November.

Even though the Senate has six new members, Mecham said, "The 39th Legislature can change anything the 38th Legislature did."

The Senate president said he expected Mecham to challenge the impeachment in court although state Supreme Court Chief Justice Frank Gordon Jr., who presided at the trial, has said he does not think an impeachment can be appealed.

"I think he has that opportunity and we wouldn't preclude that even if we could," Usdane said. "I think he should take it to any court he wants to and we'll defend it."

Mecham confirmed Usdane's belief, saying a lawsuit would be filed with the state Supreme Court, but he declined to say how soon. He also said he would carry the court fight "as far as we need to go."

Usdane also said he thinks the Arizona Constitution prohibits Mecham from running from office again.

At the time of Mecham's impeachment trial, it was believed he had retained the right to run again because the Senate failed to gain a two-thirds vote on the so-called "Dracula Clause" that would have specifically barred him from seeking election again. The vote for the clause was 17-13, three votes short of the two-thirds majority.

Usdane said he did not originally think Mecham had been barred from seeking election again but had changed his mind after conferring with legal authorities.

"I'm glad he's rewriting the laws," Mecham said when told of Usdane's comments.

Arizona Attorney General Bob Corbin is researching the question and is expected to release a legal opinion next week. However, Corbin has said he hopes the question eventually will be settled in court.

Mecham had sought the new trial on grounds the Senate violated the Arizona Constitution and state laws and that at least three senators had expressed a bias against him before the trial was completed.

'The focus should be on safe sex, not abstinence'

By HELEN GAUSSOIN
FOR THE MONTROSE VOICE

SANTA FE, N.M. (UPI)—AIDS prevention specialists who push abstinence or monogamy should be focusing on safe sex instead, a Pomono College researcher said Wednesday.

Ralph Bolton told an audience at the annual meeting of the Society for Applied Anthropology that promiscuity's role in the spread of Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome has been overemphasized.

"Named or not named, the concept of promiscuity has been key," he said.

Some 1000 anthropologists and their associates have gathered in Santa Fe for the conference that ends Saturday.

AIDS prevention material has been aimed at reducing promiscuity in order to reduce the chances of someone having sex with an infected partner, he said.

But, he said, very few are able to practice abstinence.

"Abstinence might work for those with a low sex drive but most think life without sex is unsatisfactory," he said.

And most people are likely to continue to have sex with at least several partners, he said. Even those in monogamous relationships face the danger of their partner being unfaithful or a drug user, he said.

"Abstinence, monogamy and promiscuity all have risks," he said.

Those who limit the number of partners reduce the risk of becoming infected, but instead should be encouraged to practice safe sex—sex without the exchange of body fluids, he said.

AIDS prevention material also emphasizes knowing your partner, he said.

"They act as if only strangers carry danger," he said, "but perfectly healthy people could be infected."

The emphasis on promiscuity has distracted attention from the real issue of practicing safe sex, he said.

"They need to go beyond condom or no condom and need to explore other areas of safe sex," he said.

Those who continue to be sexually active also need to be told how to have frank conversations with their partners before sex to agree on acceptable sexual behavior, he said.

"The advantages of monogamy or abstinence over promiscuity in terms of HIV infection (human immunodeficiency virus) is an illusion and a dangerous illusion at that," he said.

'Doonesbury' strips dealing with AIDS prompt debate

By FREDERICK M. WINSHIP
FOR THE MONTROSE VOICE

NEW YORK (UPI)—A few of the 900 newspapers that carry Garry Trudeau's "Doonesbury" comic strip were refusing to run this week's installments dealing with AIDS, which have been both panned and praised by gay activists.

Trudeau's editor, Lee Salem of Universal Press Syndicate in Kansas City, Mo., said Wednesday he knew of only three papers that had dropped the strip because they believed it to be in bad taste and possibly offensive to homosexuals.

He identified them as the Hackensack (N.J.) Record, Montreal Gazette, and Adirondack Daily Enterprise, Saranac Lake, N.Y.

"This is the second week of the sequence on AIDS and I feel that once Gary's critics see the full three weeks of the sequence they will not respond negatively to what he is trying to do," Salem said.

"If there is any surprise about Gary taking up the AIDS problem, I guess it is that he has taken so long to get around to it. I know he found it difficult to find a way to approach the subject and I feel he is handling it very sensitively."

In the sequence that began last week, Trudeau has Lacey Davenport, his 81-year-old congresswoman character, explore the AIDS epidemic, about which she is uninformed. This week, the sequence deals with Davenport's aide, Joanie Caucus, and her discovery that an old friend, Andy Lippincott, is hospitalized with AIDS.

In Tuesday's strip Lippincott's doctor, apparently keeping it light, tells his patient, "You know your jammies (pajamas) clash with your lesions, don't you?" Lippincott replies, "So who are you, Ralph Lauren?"

In Wednesday's strip, Joanie faints at seeing how emaciated Lippincott is and the doctor observes, "You still make 'em swoon, kid!"

"Well, women, sure," Lippincott replies. "A lot of good that does me."

The Hackensack Record ran an editor's note Monday after seeing this week's sequence of strips, saying, "The Doonesbury cartoon strips scheduled for this week are not being published."

"The series, which dealt with a dying AIDS patient, were considered by the editors to be offensive and in poor taste."

Mark Howat, the Record's senior editor in charge of cartoons, said some readers responded by accusing the Record of censorship.

"We think it's responsible editing," Howat said.

Kirk Scharfenberg, deputy managing editor of the Boston Globe, said "When we looked at it initially, our first reaction was that it might be offensive, and we asked Universal Press Syndicate if they had anything to replace it.

"It got out that we were going to drop the column and gay and lesbian advisory groups got in touch with us and convinced us it was realistic depiction of how AIDS victims try to keep up their courage with humor—gallows humor. We ran a story about it in the Living Section of the Globe on Monday to help readers understand what was going on."

Spokesmen for several AIDS groups in San Francisco agreed with the Globe's decision. Steven Retrow of the San Francisco AIDS Foundation said Trudeau's humor "is really helping to underscore the difficulty we have in talking about this very serious subject."

"I think Gary Trudeau is doing a real public service," said Larry Bush, aide to San Francisco Mayor Art Agnos.

But gay groups in New York and Philadelphia were not as supportive.

"He may have intended his humor to be ironic, but irony is not appropriate to the subject," said Tom Stoddard, executive director of a New York gay rights organization named Lambda.

Rita Odessa, director of the Gay and Lesbian Task Force in Philadelphia, described the strips as "anti-gay and anti-men with a AIDS."

"It's the not uncommon media equation of gay men and AIDS," she said. "Trudeau gives the impression of liberalism. How odd that he would engage in gay bashing."

No.1 in the nation, Oscar pays off for 'Rain Man'

By VERNON SCOTT
UPI Hollywood Reporter
FOR THE MONTROSE VOICE

HOLLYWOOD—Oscar paid off quickly for "Rain Man," which jumped to the top of the box-office rankings immediately after winning its Academy Awards.

"Rain Man" soared to an 84 percent turnstile increase to gross $5.5 million in 1581 theaters, leading all other pictures in earnings for the week following the March 29 Academy Awards ceremonies.

It climbed from third place the previous week when it grossed only $3 million.

Enhancing the film's box-office appeal were Oscars for best picture; best actor, Dustin Hoffman; best director, Barry Levinson; and best screenplay, Ronald Bass and Barry Morrow.

The story of an autistic man with flashes of genius (Hoffman) spirited away from a mental institution by his greedy brother (Tom Cruise),

"Rain Man" has grossed a total of $142.3 million in its 16 weeks in release.

It is estimated that winning the Oscar could bring "Rain Man" additional revenues of $20 million.

Falling from its perch at the top of the rankings was "Fletch Lives," the Chevy Chase comedy that had occupied the catbird seat in its two opening frames.

"Fletch Lives" grossed $4.2 million on 1511 screens for a three-week total of $23.5 million.

No. 3 was Disney's reissue of the animated feature-length comedy "The Rescuers," slipping a notch from the No. 2 spot the previous week.

"The Rescuers" pinched $2.8 million from moviegoers' pocketbooks to register a gross of $13.9 million in three weeks on 1482 screens.

"Lean on Me," the story of a controversial educator in a Paterson, N.J., ghetto high school, remained in fourth position with a gross of $2.2 million in 1071 theaters. In five weeks it has compiled $23.7 million.

Despite negative reviews, "Bill and Ted's Excellent Adventure" continued to attract customers with a take of $2 million in its seventh week. Playing in 1313 theaters, the juvenile action film has totaled $31.7 million.

The Academy Awards gave box-office receipts a boost, with the other four top nominated films showing impressive increases in attendance.

"Dangerous Liaisons" gained 24 percent to gross $1.6 million. "Working Girl" increased 40 percent with a take of $1.3 million. "Mississippi Burning" jumped 55 percent, grossing $905,750. "The Accidental Tourist" picked up 54 percent while grossing $444,146.

All the same, it was a slow and disappointing week collectively for 23,000 North American theaters. The total tally was $65 million, as opposed to $87.9 million for the same week last year.

So far in 1989 all theaters have grossed $972.1 million, still out in front of pace-setting 1988, which registered $923 million by the first week in April.

The top 10, the week's gross, total gross, weeks in release:

1. "Rain Man," $5.5 million, $142.3 million, 16 weeks.
2. "Fletch Lives," $4.2 million, $23.5 million, 3 weeks.
3. "The Rescuers," $2.8 million, $13.9 million, 3 weeks.
4. "Lean on Me," $2.2 million, $23.7 million, 5 weeks.
5. "Bill and Ted," $2 million, $31.7 million, 7 weeks.
6. "Leviathan," $1.9 million, $12.5 million, 3 weeks.
7. "Dead Bang," $1.8 million, $5.7 million, 2 weeks.
8. "Troop Beverly Hills," $1.7 million, $5.7 million, 2 weeks.
9. "Chances Are," $1.7 million, $13 million, 4 weeks.
10. "Dangerous Liaisons," $1.6 million, $27.4 million, 15 weeks.

Now it's Oklahoma

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI)—An Oklahoma Senate committee has decided that real estate agents and property owners should tell potential buyers, if they ask, something about the history of property they offer for sale.

The Senate Business and Labor Committee amended a House bill Monday to require disclosure, upon inquiry, if the property was the scene of a murder, suicide or other felony, or if it previously was occupied by an AIDS patient.

Flip side of The Far Side

"Far Side" cartoonist Gary Larson has designed his first record album cover—for the latest Concord Jazz recording by guitarist Herb Ellis. The name of the album is "Doggin' Around" and Larson's cartoon pictures a pack of dogs having a good time at a jazz club called The Stuffed Cat. "In a way, the cover design was an opportunity for me to repay a debt," Larson says. "I've drawn so many 'Far Side' cartoons while listening to Herb Ellis."

Larson, a guitarist himself, is a big fan of Ellis and for compensation he said he wanted either a $5 million payment or a free guitar lesson from Ellis. Ellis naturally chose the latter and he was so impressed after their two-day session at Ellis's Midwestern home that he's tempted to let Larson play on his next album.

State income tax checkoff for AIDS research proposed

BOSTON (UPI)—Massachusetts taxpayers could make voluntary contributions to the state's AIDS education, research and treatment efforts through an income tax checkoff proposed Thursday.

The legislation would create an advisory committee of health experts and AIDS patients to distribute proceeds of a fund that sponsors characterize as a supplement to current state and federal efforts.

A similar idea was killed in the California Legislature last year.

"The state has an epidemic called AIDS that is devastating some of our constituencies and a responsibility to deal with that epidemic," said Boston City Councilor David Scondras, the proposal's author and one of the state's more prominent gay politicians. "The state has appropriated money ... but not as much as is needed."

"This is a very creative, common sense and cost-efficient way of dealing with some of the fiscal problems that we're having at the state level," said Rep. Kevin Fitzgerald, D-Boston.

If approved by the Legislature, the checkoff would be the fourth on the Massachusetts income tax form. The existing options attracted nearly 200,000 contributions from the 2.9 million tax returns in 1987, generating about $750,000.

Department of Revenue figures show the non-game wildlife and endangered species fund collected $39,707 from 69,222 taxpayers, while the election campaign fund generated $84,831 from 65,795 taxpayers.

An organ transplant fund generated $260,164 from 54,333 taxpayers, said DOR spokeswoman Betsy Houghteling.

"You generally don't increase the pool of people who do the checkoff, you just see a shift," she said, adding the tax collection agency has mixed feelings about using the tax form to generate contributions.

"Every time a checkoff issue arises, we want to look at it very carefully just because of the problems with putting too much stuff on the tax forms," she said. "We've worked hard to make it as simple as possible."

Checkoffs have become increasingly popular in states that collect income taxes, with non-game wildlife and political campaign funds among the most numerous.

Other causes include child abuse prevention, indigent care, substance abuse education and enforcement, cancer and Alzheimers disease research, and aid to the U.S. Olympic Committee.

More specialized uses include Idaho's agriculture in the classroom fund, Arkansas' football stadium maintenance and upkeep fund, California's Vietnam Veterans Memorial fund and New Mexico's veterans cemetery fund.

A Wisconsin Assembly committee this week considered that state's first checkoff to fund research and education efforts into Lyme and Alzheimers diseases.

UT Survey shows much ignorance about blood donations

AUSTIN (UPI)—A new statewide poll released Thursday by the University of Texas showed about one-third of all Texans still erroneously believe that donating blood can give them AIDS.

The survey of 400 respondents showed that 30.5 percent believe AIDS can be contracted by donating blood while 28 percent believe they would be in personal danger if they gave blood.

Linda Golden, a UT marketing professor who developed the study, said she was surprised at the results because of the number of public service announcements that say blood donors are not in danger of getting AIDS.

"There is obviously still confusion in people's minds between blood donorship and blood transfusion," she said. "My personal opinion is that public service announcements should spell out the differences."

Dr. Melinda McMichael, associate director for medical services at UT's Student Health Center, also said the response was surprising, and could be detrimental to the health care system.

"It has never been possible to contract AIDS from donating blood," she said. "People should not be worried about contracting AIDS in this manner."

McMichael said there is still a minimal risk of contracting acquired immune deficiency syndrome through a blood transfusion, but the risk has been greatly diminished by a screening process instituted in 1985.

It's Diana time again

The 36th Annual Diana Awards Show, entitled "What Becomes a Legend Most," will be held this year at the beautiful Wortham Theatre on Saturday, April 15, at 8:00 p.m.

The show will be followed by an elegant gala featuring live orchestra, dancing, cocktails and midnight breakfast at the Imperial Ballroom of the Hyatt Regency Hotel.

During its 36 years, the Diana Awards Show has progressed from a small, amateur effort to a professional production which many feel rivals Las Vegas in terms of quality. No other city in the country has anything like it. It uses the talents of more than 300 volunteers from all parts of Houston's gay community to bring it to the stage.

The Diana Show is based on a spoof of the Academy Awards Show with awards and musical dance numbers tailored to Houston's gay community. The entire evening is meant to be fun. Even for people receiving the awards the intent is to make them blush, but still feel glad about the recognition.

In addition to an evening of fun, the Diana Show has a serious purpose: to raise money to help needy AIDS victims who have no one else to turn to. During 1988, for example, Diana gave the Montrose Clinic four inhalation machines to administer pentamidine treatments. Diana also provided money to buy the drug for patients who could not afford even the small fee the Clinic charged.

Diana donated money so the AIDS Community Action Program could continue providing the audio cassette tapes that have been so effective in helping victims, families and friends deal with the emotional trauma of AIDS.

Diana has contributed generously to the DIFFA Houston Assistance Fund which administers a program to pay health insurance premiums for people who can no longer afford them.

Diana volunteer, Peter "Rose" Forbes, loves making hats

Diana also works to support the community. Last year, when the Names Project of Houston ran short of money, Diana stepped in to fill the gap at a critical time so that the Quilt was able to come to Houston.

"So many people have told us that they would like to come to the Diana Show, but have never known how to obtain tickets," said Harry Guyton, president. "To solve this problem, this year we have installed a telephone hotline so that those interested can request invitations. If you have never seen a Diana Show, plan to join us this year. Become part of something special. We think you'll be as proud to be a part of it as we are. And if your finances permit, your extra tax deduction donation will help us continue our community support effort."

To receive an invitation to the 1989 Diana Awards Show and Gala, call 521-2800 and leave your name, address and phone number on the answering machine. Your invitation will be mailed to you the next day. If there is not time for mailing, call and someone will get in touch with you.

Man murdered in Montrose parking lot

Near daybreak on Tuesday, April 3, residents of the Westmoreland Apartments on Marshall Street heard shots being fired and called the police.

Dead in the parking lot with bullet holes in his head and back was Richard Todd LaRiviere who lived in the 1400 block of Woodcrest in the Oak Forest subdivision of Houston. He had turned 25 the day before.

Police found no weapon or eye witnesses to the shooting. They identified the victim with the aid of the car keys found in his pocket which matched a 1979 Pontiac Sunbird parked nearby.

LaRiviere, who moved from Connecticut to Houston eight years ago, was a waiter who lived with his brother, Joe, 23. According to Joe, Richard carried no money or wallet nor wore a watch or jewelry. He is not aware that Richard knew anyone in the Westmoreland Apartments or that he ever ventured into the Montrose area.

Police are seeking witnesses and motives and have not ruled out robbery or a drug connection.

Heaven's promotion director, Randy Jobe, is busy putting together the final details on the Mr. Texas contest to be held on Sunday, April 23, at Heaven. Among celebrity judges and entertainers, look for the incredible, gorgeous body of Jody Hanvey, the reigning Mr. Gay USA who will be a special guest at the contest.

This weekend is the Westheimer Colony Art Festival so make your plans to visit the fun on Westheimer and the surrounding area as a lot of the bars and businesses have special events planned both Saturday and Sunday.

At 3611 Fondren you'll find our newest bar, 20/20. Let semi-muscular Monte pour your favorite cocktail, sit back and relax or dance under their magnificent lighting system.

Walter has embarked on yet another facet of the BRB: Uncle Walter's Get ready for next Friday's (April 14) fashion event at the Galleon sponsored by Basic Brothers. It promises to be an unforgettable evening.

Next Thursday at Scandals should be a lot of fun as the bar presents "A Royal Wingding," an evening sponsored by Houston's T.G.R.A. Royalty contestants 1990 benefiting The Texas Gay Rodeo Association and featuring the talents of T.G.R.A. and the Colt 45s. Mark your calendar to be present and accounted for.

It's official! At a special meeting last Monday, the 60 plus employees of Heaven, J.R.'s and the Mining Company were told that they are going to have a new baby-sister bar (with Charles Armstrong as proud papa). The location next to J.R.'s (formerly Cutters) will become a Santa Fe style watering hole. Pacific Street just keeps on growing.

Sundays in April will get hotter and hotter! Look for the fabulous 7th Avenue to perform live at Heaven on Sunday evening, April 16. But, to help cool things off you can enjoy FREE Coors light draft all night long with FREE well drinks 7-9.

Coming This Spring to BarZaar

The Friday Fox

Our BarZaar section of the Montrose Voice has been so successful that we've decided to give it its own separate section beginning in the spring. This means BarZaar will have its own cover ... and that means someone attractive (as in, sexy) will be there to get your weekend up and rolling.

Are you Fox material? Or know someone who is? Let us know.

Call Henry McClurg, 520-0206.
