Again Two Major Parties Go Into Huddle and Come Up With Nothing

Warren Brand of "Racial Unity" Prevails In Small Texas Town

A fair sample of "racial unity" of the Earl Warren variety has prevailed at a small Texas town, Mansfield, near Fort Worth for several days, where mobs have been gathered each day, 11 Negroes hung in effigy and Rangers sent in to prevent bloodshed.

It all started when a spineless Federal judge ordered eleven Negroes admitted to the all-white school of Mansfield. The citizens of Mansfield, however, had other ideas and they let it be known in no uncertain terms that their white and colored children were not to be mixed in the same school. A mob of 500 or more gathered around the school daily.

The governor of Texas advised school officials at Mansfield to transfer any student to other schools if such a course was necessary in preventing violence.

The governor was quoted in the press as saying at Austin: "Personally, I hope the United States Supreme Court will be given an opportunity to view the effect of its desegregation order on a typical law-abiding Texas Community".

Another National Political Convention Puts The Democrats and Republicans in the Shade

While the Democrats at Chicago and the Republicans at San Francisco were making vague and ambiguous promises to do everything for everybody and were shaping hazy and indistinct platforms on which to run for office, another national convention was being held which left no doubt where its candidates stood.

This was the national convention of the Organized Hoboes of America held in Britt, Iowa, August 21, and which attracted some 20,000 knights of the road all of whom are loyal, if not paid-up, members of the National Tourists Union.

Candidates put in nomination for the office of King of Hoboes were Scoop Shovel Scotty, veteran hitchhiker on the American highways and Hobo Benson whose extensive coverage of the United States has been done by the more luxurious mode of travel known as "riding the rods" of a freight train.

While the Champagne, Bourbon and Scotch which inundated Chicago and San Francisco delegates was understandably missing from the menu, the absence of these stimulating refreshments was partially compensated for by the presence of a huge pot of Mulligan Stew which graced the festive board.

The platform as it was finally adopted is believed to represent the greatest and most powerful demand for social justice since William Jennings Bryan came out for free silver.

It calls for a maximum of four hours of work a day, four days of work a week, a three month's paid vacation in summer and the revision of all welfare laws so as to provide $100 per month for all persons who have been deprived either by nature or the Federal Unemployment Compensation act, of all desire to participate in any form of physical labor.

It urges the picketing by accredited members of the guild of the back doors of private homes in all cases where a free handout has either been refused or does not measure up in quality or quantity to the specifications of accepted standards.

Looking toward a long-range program whose objective is to provide more time for leisurely contemplation and restful relaxation on the part of tired humanity, the platform calls on all self-respecting and responsible hoboes to gird their loins for a big push on Congress in the interest of passage of a "right-not-to-work law" and the adoption by the administration in power of a domestic policy which will guarantee all Americans "freedom from toil".

The only deviation from regular convention proceedings was the decision of the body to by-pass the outmoded custom of selecting the winning candidate by vote of State delegations and to settle the matter by an open and above-board slugging match between the two contestants.

This rule was adopted and the proceedings came to an abrupt end, along with Scoop Shovel Scotty's aspirations for public office, as a haymaker from Hobo Benson knocked him off the platform and out of the race.

Fair Deal Democrats and Fair Deal Republicans have held their national conventions at Chicago and San Francisco, respectively. Where once the deliberations, discussions and conclusions of such conclaves hinged around defense of the Constitution, exaltation of the Free Enterprise System based on Christian principles as the bulwark of American greatness and recognition of the Constitutional rights of the sovereign States to handle their own affairs, no word was spoken and no line written in the Windy City or in the metropolis by the Golden Gate re-affirming these basic beliefs in the institutions and governing processes of the American Republic. Impartially, both gatherings demonstrated that — under current conceptions of political and moral ethics — a Presidential nominating convention is merely an occasion for the maximum exercise of human tongues and minimum utilization of human brains. Never were so many words employed by so many speakers to say so little as in the case of the evasive, meaningless and equivocal statements which clogged the air and flooded the channels of communication during the Chicago fiasco and the San Francisco flop. Meantime, all that long suffering taxpayers can look forward to during the forthcoming campaign is a spirited battle between two dedicated internationalist left-wingers. It will not be a fight for the restoration of Constitutional government in the United States; for the preservation of American sovereignty against attempts by alien conspirators to destroy it; for the reclamation of lost American prestige throughout the world; for the maintenance of the rights, dignity and well-being of the overwhelming majority of the American people in all areas and sections of the land but rather a life-and-death struggle for possession of the key to the front door of the White House which both candidates feel is now in the keeping of the Negro voters of Harlem, and allied minority groups of the North and East.

Neither at Chicago nor at San Francisco was there any indication that the administration of the Federal Government under the provisions of the Constitution, rather than under the rules of psychology or the Communist Manifesto, is to be made an issue of the campaign.

No planks were adopted at either place which are not already familiar to the American people from first having appeared in the Socialist platform before the principles and policies of that party were absorbed by the Democratic and Republican organizations which presently constitute our so-called two-party system.

Also, it is notable that no speeches were made and nothing said at either convention, with two exceptions, that could be classed as a great and outstanding address such as those once heard at the official gatherings of the nation's leaders and party chiefs.

The first exception was the masterly challenge which Georgia's governor, the Honorable Marvin Griffin, hurled at the closing session at Chicago in which he vigorously protested the total disregard of parliamentary rules and the denial of prerogatives to duly elected delegates by the presiding officer of the convention and in which he roundly scored them for the failure of any speaker to even mention Constitutional government and the Rights of States.

Governor Griffin ended his denunciation by nominating for President the Honorable James C. Davis, Congressman from Georgia and who, incidentally — although his name received no consideration from the phonies dominating the convention — was the only real Democrat

Millions of Americans Think It-The Southern Conservative Says It

The Day Was When All Nations Respected and Feared the U.S.

The dastardly and deliberate act of the Chinese Communists in shooting down an American plane in which 16 men are believed to have lost their lives and for which the Chinese bandits made no apology, serves to remind us that not so many years ago no nation on earth would have dared commit such an act of aggression against the armed forces of the United States.

On the day that we first began mixing into the internal affairs of all nations and pouring billions of dollars into the treasuries of practically every country on earth, we started losing the respect of the world.

That respect has continued to dwindle until even a gang of brigands such as those who make up Communist China, feel that they are perfectly safe in killing American soldiers without fear of reprisal.

And still both political parties who are equally responsible for our senseless and indefensible foreign policy were cheered to the echo at Chicago and San Francisco within recent weeks.

All State of Tennessee Lacks Its Sound Leaders

The good people of Tennessee foresaw the horrible violence that is taking place at Clinton as the result of the action of a jelly-spined Federal judge who ordered the School Board there to allow Negroes in the white school.

Members of their legislature passed a bill which would have prevented integration sometime ago, but the bobbysoxer's delight, Governor Frank Clement, promptly vetoed it.

There is nothing wrong with the people of Tennessee. They feel like all other Southerners do about the mixing of the races in the schools.

It is only their leadership that is craven.

Two Major Parties

offered as a candidate to head the ticket at any time during the entire proceedings.

The second exception was the brave effort of former President, Herbert Hoover, who made a gallant, but futile, attempt at San Francisco to point the course of his party back toward the objective of Constitutional government when he said:

"If you here calculate what will please this or that minor segment of our population, and satisfy this or that pressure group or sectional interest, you will be betraying your opportunity and tragically missing the call of your time. Today the greatest issue in America and all mankind is the encroachment of government to master our lives. If you temporize with Socialism in any of its disguises, you will stimulate its growth and make certain the defeat of free men."

The convention cheered him heartily and went right ahead with its task of "pleasing minor segments of our population, satisfying pressure groups and temporizing with Socialism to make certain the defeat of free men".

There was only a single instance during the Chicago and the San Francisco sessions where human ingenuity, resourcefulness and inspired imagination caused the achievements of one gathering to soar above the accomplishments of the other and that was when California's governor, Goodie Knight, gave a blow-out that made the shindig which Perle Mesta threw in Chicago look like an ice cream social at a country church.

While Perle with all her wealth, her publicity blurbs as "the hostess with the mostest" and her acknowledged leadership in the glorified rat-race known as Washington society, was able to pour only two glasses of bubbling champagne down the thirst-parched gullets of the 800 free-loaders who fought, scratched and clawed their way into her swank soiree, Goodie is reported to have provided such quantities of the sparkling giggle juice that his 10,000 guzzling guests finally wound up with the stuff practically oozing out of their ears.

After all, the prestige of the party in power must be maintained and no doubt the Democratic Fair Dealers who were elbowed away from the gravy train four years ago, grudgingly conceded this superior social advantage to the opposition.

Otherwise the two conventions were much alike and with no distinguishing features which set one apart from the other. One was held near the stock yards in Chicago and the other in the Cow Palace in San Francisco but the "bull" which permeated both auditoriums was so equally balanced as to give them an even break.

Both heavily emphasized the "give-away" motif and tried to out-promise each other in the matter of generosity with taxpayers' money and in conferring "benefits" on a panhandling public which sees nothing degrading in accepting federal handouts from our two political parties both of which have firmly established the principle that poverty and indolence are cardinal virtues to which taxpayers must pay tribute while industry and thrift are qualifications carrying sinister connotations.

Bold bids were made by both conventions for the support of special classes and voting blocs such as farm groups, labor unions and religious and racial minorities but there was no Balm in Gilead for the millions of sound, conservative Americans in this country, including the 58,000,000 qualified voters who failed, or refused, to vote for either Stevenson or Eisenhower in 1952.

When these two candidates were before the voters in the last campaign, we had an editorial in the September, 1952, edition of the Southern Conservative giving our views on both and we see no reason why we should not reproduce the following excerpts from that editorial at this time since the situation is much the same — except a lot worse — at this good hour than it was four years ago:

"Whether we like it or not — and most of us don't — either Dwight D. Eisenhower running on a so-called Republican ticket or Adlai Stevenson campaigning on a so-called Democratic ticket, will be the next President of the United States and that

Type of Lawmaker Who Is No Credit To His District

When a Hollywood citizen, a Mr. Carl Mote, Jr., wrote a letter of protest to representatives in Washington during the last session of Congress against the passage of the Alaska Mental Health Bill, he received this reply from one Abraham J. Multer, representing the 13th district of New York: "As soon as the mental health bill is signed into law by our Republican president, after it has been passed by a Democratic Congress, I will make a special request that the first bed be reserved for you".

This arrogant and insulting reply by a member of Congress to an American citizen who seeks to exercise the American right of petition, is an appalling example of the low-grade politicians who, in far too many cases, are elected to our highest law-making body to help make the laws under which decent people must live.

A rude, uncouth and discourteous public servant not only lowers the moral standards of the office which he holds but is a reproach to the intelligence and integrity of the constituents who elected him.

is all there is to that.

"To add to the tragedy and dash any hopes of those who hold that a President of the United States should be an unyielding partisan of his own country and dedicated primarily to its advancement, interests and well-being, the United Nations issued a press release following the Democratic convention which said: 'The nomination of Governor Adlai Stevenson of Illinois was generally welcomed today by United Nations delegates . . . The selection of Mr. Stevenson, together with the nomination of Dwight D. Eisenhower as the Republican candidate, was taken as an assurance that, whoever was elected, the basic foreign policy of the United States would continue to follow the pattern fixed by President Truman . . . The fact that both Governor Stevenson and General Eisenhower are internationalists is expected to reduce uncertainties over the policy that the United States will follow in the General Assembly'.

"This stamp of approval placed on both candidates by the United Nations insures that the American people may expect no more consideration at the hands of the next President of the United States than the citizens of backward countries around the world will be privileged to enjoy.

"It means that our next Chief Executive must divide his allegiance equally between the interests of the industrious taxpayers of the United States and the welfare of shiftless mendicants of foreign lands.

"This is evidence that our accepted foreign policy for the next four years is to be based on the Marxian philosophy of 'taking from each according to his means and giving to each according to his needs'.

"It is a sad day in the history of a nation when the people in selecting their leader, are forced to choose the lesser of two evils but, Brother, that's just exactly where we are in this year of our Lord, 1952.

"It is a fundamental right of the American people to have two candidates for President who represent opposite ideologies and, in these perilous times with the future of the Republic hanging in the balance, it is doubly essential that we enjoy this prerogative.

"We should be able to choose between a candidate who believes in Constitutional government without equivocation or exception; one who boldly denounces corruption in government, including infiltration of Communists and domination by labor unions or any other group or class; one who is unalterably opposed to Socialism as embodied in the United Nations and who is alert to the danger to our sovereignty by any subversive world group; one who is outspoken in defense of the rights of the States to conduct, without any outside interference, the internal affairs of the people including their social customs, employment practices and any other rights granted to them by the Tenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

"We should, on the other hand, have the chance to vote for a candidate who represents the opposite principles and who advocates State Socialism as promulgated by Roosevelt and Truman for the past twenty years.

"This privilege is not to be granted us for both candidates hold such similar views on many vital issues that they might as well be cross-filed on both tickets".

Those were our views in 1952 and nothing has occurred within the past four years to cause us to revise our position in 1956.

The field is white and the workers few but we still believe that there are enough Americans whose patriotism and national pride have not been deadened by the tranquilizing pill of internationalism, to restore Constitutional government in the United States if they would only perform intelligently, organize efficiently and act in unison in defense of the American Republic.

Party Line Is Being Closely Followed

A Texas newspaper is running a series of articles on the Supreme Court ruling on segregation and its effects in Texas.

In these articles, it is pointed out that in the relatively few districts where integration has been adopted, it was done as quietly as possible, without publicity and an attempt made to attract as little attention as possible.

This is not surprising as Communist policy demands this sort of procedure and in all Communist literature on the subject it is instructed that the races be integrated gradually in various phases of life such as sports, entertainment, churches, schools, etc., in order that the objectives may be accomplished before the general public becomes aware of what is taking place.

If every subscriber to the Southern Conservative would persuade just one other person to also become a subscriber, it would help to greatly increase the circulation and would be deeply appreciated by the editor.

Some Charitable Observations on the Doings at Chicago and San Francisco

What Adlai said about Estes in the primary campaigns, what Estes said about Adlai and what Harry said about both of them should provide the Republicans with some ready-made campaign material.

Republicans are making a lot out of the fact that unity and harmony keynoted the San Francisco convention, forgetting that Hitler, Stalin and Mussolini were always returned to office by "acclamation" while harmony reigned all over the place. Unity and harmony are essential elements in a dictatorship but deadly in a Constitutional Republic. The right to dissent is an American prerogative.

"It is my privilege and my great pleasure to introduce to you a great Democrat, a great American and a great orator who will now address you briefly" was Sam Rayburn's stock phrase in presenting his contemporaries at Chicago. Whereupon, some long-winded old bore would ascend the platform and make a liar out of him by taking a half hour to say nothing.

We are sure that the venerable Mr. Rayburn must have wished many times during the proceedings that he could resort to the custom once employed by New York's Lower East Side theaters on amateur night. The stage director was provided with a long pole which was hooked at the end. When a rotten performer got to the point where he was inspiring catcalls and boos, the director reached out with the pole, hooked him around the throat and calmly yanked him off the stage.

One such "great orator" introduced by Chairman Rayburn was Senator Robert S. Kerr, Oklahoma oil and gas tycoon, with emphasis on the gas. Before he finally gave up, he even had television viewers squirming in their seats as he rambled on interminably about the great achievements of the New and Fair Deals. There are few spectacles more revolting than the sight of a bloated old multimillionaire Socialist spouting off about "freedom from want", shedding crocodile tears as he demands that other people "share the wealth" with the underprivileged, and then buzzing off in his air-conditioned Cadillac.

It is widely believed that Eisenhower was in on Stassen's abortive attempt to dump Nixon and that if the movement had developed any widespread opposition to the vice president, the president would have heaved him overboard so quick it would have made his head swim. As it turned out, poor dumb Stassen was the goat and was left to wander around the Cow Palace like a lost soul.

The conceited little ass from Independence jumped up and down like a jack-in-the-box during the proceedings at Chicago and when he finally managed to get the platform, he brayed himself right out of the picture. It is a tragic and regrettable thing when a great man is cut down but when a pipsqueak bites the dust, there are few who mourn his end.

From the acceptance speech of Stevenson at Chicago and that of Eisenhower at San Francisco, it is clear that the two top candidates intend to go easy on Civil Rights and let the second men on the ticket do the dirty work. Eisenhower will tread lightly around the subject in an effort to rope in Southern votes and Stevenson will sweet-talk his way through the South for the same reason. The smelly job of corraling the Negro vote will be left to Nixon and Kefauver who have nothing to lose as neither of them has any standing in the South, any way.

The biggest joke pulled at the Chicago convention was the act by Adlai Stevenson when he played it straight and didn't smile as he announced to the assembled convention that the nomination for vice president would be open to all comers and that he would personally have nothing to say in the matter. Only a few knew that the Kefauver nomination was all settled weeks in advance when Kefauver swapped such of his delegates as he could control to Stevenson in return for which the former Illinois governor was to put a bug in the right ears at the right time to cinch Kefauver's selection for second place on the ticket. It's all done with mirrors.

We imagine that Lyndon Johnson emerged from the Chicago convention with more respect for Governor Allan Shivers of Texas than he had previously shown when he was being kidded into believing that he was a big shot by Reuther's CIO boys in Texas. Johnson lost everything at Chicago except his shirt and when Stevenson put a fast one over and secretly selected Kefauver for vice presidential nominee, a man whom Johnson holds in very low esteem, he was said to be fit to be tied. And if Shivers indulged in a wry smile as he watched Johnson lose out all the way down the line, he is to be forgiven for his I-told-you-so attitude. Shivers had warned Johnson that Stevenson was a double-crosser, who was not to be trusted out of sight, but Johnson had to learn the hard way.

Incidentally, Lyndon Johnson had never been regarded in Texas as a serious candidate for the presidency, the vice-presidency or even as a favorite son. In spite of the fact that he was able to throw in with the Negroes, CIO and other liberal riffraff groups and head the Texas delegation to Chicago, responsible Texans still remember him as a former errand boy for Roosevelt who slid into the Senate on a stolen base.

It is understood that Stevenson selected Kefauver as his running mate because of the horse-faced Tennessean's anti-Southern, left-wing stand on Civil Rights and his refusal to sign the Southern Manifesto which carried the signature of practically all Southern senators except those of Kefauver and Johnson of Texas. Thus Stevenson will play the role of a "moderate" candidate, or a political eunuch so to speak, while Kefauver makes his pitch along lines laid down by NAACP, CIO, ADA and other pro-Red groups. By playing both ends against the middle and working both sides of the street, these two political city slickers hope to make a cleaning. Ain't statesmanship grand?

Averill Harriman, the multimillionaire Socialist, was another casualty of the Chicago convention whose presidential ambitions were permanently stymied. History will probably record him as merely the man who built the greatest number of government-subsidized comfort stations ever erected in the Philippine Islands.

Eisenhower's speech of acceptance at San Francisco in which no fundamental principle of the American Republic was touched on, was reminiscent of Franklin D. Roosevelt's "pie-in-the-sky" and "bright-new-world-of-tomorrow" technique through which the New Deal president was able to keep unthinking Americans hypnotized until the day of his death.

One of the unfathomable mysteries of American political conventions is the selection of a carefully-screened committee whose members will spend days and nights sweating and laboring over the wording of their party platform, editing, amending, changing and revising until they are convinced that every group and every section is properly pacified, placated and appeased. Then, on the day after the election, this platform will be filed away in a pigeon-hole and completely forgotten until four years have passed and it is time to run for office again.

Wayne Morse had a busman's holiday at the Chicago convention where he gave a first-hand demonstration of the manner in which he empties the Senate Chamber in Washington by merely getting up to speak. Some years ago Morse was kicked in the head by a horse while visiting in his home state of Oregon. A lot of people think that is what's wrong with him now. However, he was reported at the time to have suffered no ill effects from the accident, although the horse's hoof was said to have been permanently injured.

In our July-August edition, we said concerning the selection of Frank Clement, governor of Tennessee, to make the keynote speech at Chicago: "Eloquent, high-sounding words will flow from his ruby lips like escaping gas from an open jet, but when the shouting is over and the applause has died down, he will have talked loud, long and fluently and said nothing". We were on a train in Wyoming the night he made his speech and therefore didn't hear him but we feel that our prediction is vindicated. Nobody can tell us what he said although many stated that it sounded good and that he was "eloquent". Even newspaper reporters were vague about the contents of his address and used most of their space in comparing him to Billy Graham or Elvis Presley.

During the Republican convention in Chicago in 1952, Senator Dirksen of Illinois endeared himself to the people of the South by his eloquent plea for conservative principles and for the nomination of Senator Taft. Today his rating is very poor in the same area because of his disgusting activities in behalf of the mongrelization program of Fair Deal Republicans, to whom he seems to have surrendered lock, stock and barrel.

According to a special writer on the Chicago Daily News, Walter Reuther was observed sneaking up the back stairs in the dead of night on his way to Adlai Stevenson's suite during the Chicago pow-wow. Which provides us with the unhappy reminder that the behind-the-scenes President of the United States for the next four years will be either Sherman Adams or Walter Reuther.

It is conceded without argument that there are more horse's necks in Washington than there are horses and the consensus of opinion has always been that Estes Kefauver accounted for the major portion of this surplus equine anatomy. And so we place him in a position where he could conceivably one day become President of the United States.

Some persons have gotten the idea that, because Harold Stassen's head is out of all proportion to his body in size, his cranial section must contain an extra supply of brains, forgetting that an over-stuffed sofa filled with saw-dust produces the same effect.

THE TENTH AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES:

The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people.

Every American Taxpayer Should Read It and Weep

Our nomination for the soundest and most unanswerable discussion so far made by anybody, anywhere and at any time concerning the idiotic foreign aid program of the American government, is that by Frank Chodorov.

Appearing in Human Events of August 25th, entitled "A Case of DT's" or "How the American Government got the Foreign Aid Habit", it is the most withering and blistering indictment of the madmen in Washington who have played ducks and drakes with $50,000,000,000.00 since World War II which they filched from taxpayers' pockets, that it has ever been our privilege to read.

Twenty cents sent to Human Events, 1835 K. Street, Washington, 6, D. C. will bring one of these folders containing Mr. Chodorov's matchless editorial and a dollar will bring ten of them. It is not particularly our mission in life to sell other people's publications but we wish from the bottom of our heart that every tax-paying sucker in the United States could read this particular version of how we got that way.

From a business executive in Detroit: "Lady, you have just about made me revise my opinion of women as far as politics is concerned. It has always seemed to me that most of them are incapable of making a sound discussion of issues. Now, you take Eleanor Roosevelt (Editor's note: You take her yourself; we don't want her) and you have an example of a woman who is constantly talking but does not know what she's saying. I am glad to note that many women are now using their brain and doing their own thinking. I think your paper has encouraged them along this line."

We wonder if it is true, as reported, that Ellen Borden Stevenson, Adlai's divorced wife, is writing a book to be called "The Egghead and I."

The Conservative Groups In The South Will Pool Resources In All-Out Fight

While the various Conservative groups which have been organized in opposition to the two liberal major parties are regarded as of Southern origin, these movements have attracted wide support from the English-speaking people of New York and other population centers of the North, East and West.

During August and September there have been regional and State meetings held by the separate organizations composing the Conservative movement, and a coalition of these forces is expected to be brought about well before the November election.

The Constitution Party held its national convention in Fort Worth on August 27-28 which claimed representation from 37 States and adopted a platform calling for adherence to the Constitution, the Rights of States, the repeal of the income tax amendment and such other planks as were once taken for granted as part of the commitment to the American people by the major parties before they deserted to the cause of National Socialism.

Keynote speakers at this convention were Mary Cain of Mississippi and Fred Spangler of Texas, both of whom stressed the abandonment of Constitutional government by the Republicans and Democrats and the need for a virile, dynamic party to replace them.

T. Coleman Andrews, former collector of Internal Revenue was nominated by the Constitution Party for president, Thomas H. Werdel former Congressman from California for vice president and it is believed that all the other Conservative groups will make the same selection.

On September 15, We, the People, a group of strong Conservatives, with headquarters in Chicago, will begin a two-day meeting at the Conrad Hilton Hotel in that city, when the Honorable Clarence Manion will make the keynote address.

At the Chicago convention a plan whereby all conservative groups may work together is to be presented by the Honorable Hugh Grant of Georgia and a panel of other prominent Americans from various sections of the country.

On Tuesday, August 21, a called meeting of the Executive Committee of Mississippians for States Rights was held in Jackson, when the selection of eight independent presidential electors was made. Present at this gathering were interested visitors and onlookers from Arkansas, Louisiana, Tennessee and Texas but who took no part in the meeting.

Announcement was made at the Jackson meeting that Independent electors are already on the ballot in 16 States and that similar action is expected in other States.

On September 14 and 15, a joint meeting of For America, Federation for Constitutional Government, Campaign for the 48 States and other conservative organizations will meet in Memphis, Tennessee when it is expected that coalition of all Conservative forces will be thoroughly gone into and final details arranged.

While the numerical strength of these various conservative groups is not to be compared to that of liberals and left-wingers who have been taking the country farther into Socialism each year by their ballot, it should be remembered, as some of the speakers in the conservative cause have pointed out, they have something which the leadership of the two major parties cannot boast and that is — political integrity.

Americans who have stood still and criticised the Socialistic behavior of leaders of the two major parties owe a heavy debt to those in Conservative ranks who have tried not merely to criticize, but to do something about it. They should also keep in mind that the Republican Party was composed of merely a handful of people in 1856 who held their convention in one small room, and by 1860 was able to elect a President.

As for us we pray God's blessings on each and every member of these organizations who are fighting for the return of Constitutional government under seemingly insurmountable handicaps and remind them that every successful movement in history was begun when only a few were gathered together in a righteous cause.

The More This Veto Is Analyzed The Less Sense it Makes to Us

There are those who still believe that the President vetoed the Fullbright gas bill at the last session of Congress because his moral sense was offended at the appearance of attempted bribery in connection with its passage.

Meantime, Federal regulation of the production and distribution of gas at the well-head continues and it would seem that the immorality involved in this invasion of the Rights of States by Washington would cause a Constitutional President of the United States more pain and humiliation than the reported offer of a $2,500 campaign contribution to a member of the Senate by a representative of an oil company.

This would especially seem to be the case in view of the fact that it was brought out at the time that the same representative of the same oil company made a contribution in 1952 to the Republican Campaign committee in the same amount of $2,500, and certainly the President cannot view that donation as an attempted "bribery".

Maybe we just have a suspicious and evil mind but we think there would be only one reason for a veto of this bill — which should have been approved — and that would be because the one exercising the veto approves of Federal regulation in all cases, from gas on down to local public school systems, although publicly claiming otherwise.

"Every strike is a small revolution and a dress rehearsal for the big one" — from Labor Defender, December 15, 1918. This warning from a publication representing the IWW, forerunner of the CIO, is just as applicable now as it was in 1918.

Constitution Criticised By One Who Swore To Uphold It

As most Americans probably realize by this time, Earl Warren is Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States.

Most of them also realize that his decision on Segregation, concurred in by the other eight weaklings on the Court, has stirred up racial bitterness throughout the South which had not heretofore been experienced since the close of the Civil War.

And while this dissension, strife and violence is taking place, Mr. Warren according to the press, is in India where he made a public speech to Nehru's collaborators with Russia in which he strongly criticised the American Constitution and claimed that its overhauling had been due for forty years, or words to that effect.

Maybe that is true but as it now stands, that Constitution provides that Supreme Court Judges shall hold their office only during good behavior.

In line with that provision of the Constitution, we submit that Warren's term of office should be immediately ended.

It does not require much courage to speak disrespectfully of the American Constitution to the people of far-off India, but we believe that the Chief Justice would hesitate before making similar assertions in, let us say, Texas, Mississippi, Tennessee, Alabama and some of the other Southern States where the results of his "overhauling" of that revered document are making things pretty rugged for upright, honorable and law-abiding citizens of both races right now.

Friends Service Committee Is Denounced By Texas Quakers

The American Friends Service Committee which has been the recipient of much criticism in recent years because of its alleged pro-Communist leanings, was charged by the Texas Quakers who compose the Friendswood Quarterly meeting of the Religious Society of Friends with having "furthered Communist propaganda."

These charges were made at a meeting of the Texas group at the Bayshore Friends Church at Bacliff in Galveston County, recently.

The American Friends Service Committee is a subsidiary of the Religious Society of Friends and has not been repudiated by the parent group as the Federation for Social Action was repudiated by the Methodist Church, although the Friendswood meeting at Bacliff charged that control of the Committee "has passed out of the hands of the legitimate Society of Friends."

The Bacliff meeting further claimed that the Committee fosters liberal, unitarian religious doctrines, and that its Institutes of International Relations are "schools for Communist propaganda and liberal religions."

At Austin, one F. E. Hutchins, executive secretary of the regional office of the American Friends Service Committee, received the charges of the Friendswood group with the bland admission: "We are accustomed to having aspersions cast at us" as if this, somehow, were a form of distinction.

It is not known whether the Austin Hutchins is, or is not related to Robert M. Hutchins of the Ford Fund For the Republic who is also being kept quite busy at this time denying charges of advancing Communist interests in this country.

ACLU's Elmer Davis Asks "Protection Money" to Defend the Bill of Rights

What the difference is between "Civil Liberties" and "Civil Rights", we wouldn't know. We only know that leftists groups are working both subjects for all the traffic will bear.

Those old boys in the Kremlin back there in October, 1927, who first thought up the idea of stirring up strife among Negroes and other minority groups in the United States by reminding them that their "Civil Rights" and Civil Liberties" were being violated and thereby promoting the interests of Communism in this country, perhaps didn't realize at the time how aggressively some of their ideological allies here would latch on to their suggestion and promote the idea for all it was worth.

So much emphasis has been placed on the matter that we have recently seen the two major political parties in the United States practically relegate all other issues to the background while they sweated and labored to say just exactly the proper things in their "civil rights" planks and their platform writers did a balancing act on a tight rope as they endeavored to attract the "minority" vote without, at the same time, repelling the "majority vote". It was quite a feat of political acrobatics but both parties apparently feel that they have "gone and done it".

Perhaps inspired to greater activity by all this concern in the minority races, the American Civil Liberties Union, now gets into the act by making a bid for some of the easy money that is always available to Pinkos under whatever name.

In August a letter went out to prospective contributors from this American Civil Liberties Union signed by Elmer Davis, as a member of the National Committee. Mr. Davis warns that the Bill of Rights needs protecting and as evidence of this great need, he points out that "Emmett Till's murderers are free".

What he intends to do about a criminal case which the legal authorities of the sovereign State of Mississippi have officially disposed of is not made clear in his letter soliciting financial aid and we greatly fear that the "protection" he proposes to give the Bill of Rights would largely resemble that which a wolf might offer to a coop full of fat chickens.

Names of the sponsors of any organization always intrigue us and those on the letterhead of Mr. Davis' ACLU outfit held such fascination for us that we decided to make a run-down on them. There are 29 members of the Board of Directors and 78 members of their National Committee. Of these 107 men and women whose hearts are bleeding for the "civil liberties" of their downtrodden fellowmen, 59, or more than one-half, have official citations as having belonged to one or more Communist fronts dedicated to the overthrow of the American government.

Perhaps some one should set up an organization to protect the American form of government from the protectors of "civil liberties". After all, what good will their "civil liberties" do them if they are able to abolish the only government in the world which could insure such "liberties"?

If any of the fuzzy-brained Pinkos on the ACLU letterhead are able to intelligently answer that question, even we will be willing to kick in and send Davis the ten bucks which he is asking American suckers to send him.

Books Too Filthy For U. S. Mail Are Given Teenagers To Read

The acting postmaster at Larkspur, California, where the courageous Anne Smart has been carrying on a one-woman campaign against lewd, obscene and subversive books in the high schools in the Tamalpais district, has ordered that no quotations from the books even can be sent through the mails.

Because of their obscenity, these books or quotations from them, violate U.S. code which prohibits the mailing of "obscene, lewd, lascivious or filthy publications," the acting postmaster said.

And now the officials of the schools in the Tamalpais district, and the officials of the National Education Association, both of whom strongly defended the books and kept them in the school library for children to read, must face the responsibility of providing material for teenagers to read which has officially been declared too offensive to be transported through the United States mail.

Such foul books cannot be found in the Communist schools of Russia. The Communists only encourage the readings of such pornographic stuff by students in the countries which they wish to demoralize. A teacher providing Moscow pupils with such filth would probably be quietly taken out and shot.

"2109" Is Valuable Contribution to the Record of Subversion

Circuit Riders, Inc., of Cincinnati, Ohio, is a national independent group of Methodists which exposes and opposes the use of church facilities, programs and personnel for the spread of Socialistic propaganda.

One of the invaluable services this organization has rendered is the publication of a brochure carrying the names and Communist front affiliation of 2,109 Methodist ministers throughout the United States.

No comment is made in any case and the brochure merely lists the record of these ministers as taken from official reports of the investigating committee, of Congress and of the various states. The compilation was made, according to the publishers after years of meticulous research work, documentation and the expenditure of considerable money.

The title of this brochure is simply "2109" and the address of the organization sponsoring it is Circuit Riders, Inc., 18 East 4th Street, Cincinnati 2, Ohio and one dollar will bring the brochure to those desiring it.

It is understood that the organization will also bring out the Communist front record of other denominations and the information should be of great value to those who are interested in keeping a file of subversive activities.

Many Bogus "Mental Health" Groups Should Be Investigated By Congress

There is no nobler profession on the face of the earth than that section of medicine which is dedicated to the art of mental healing.

The reclamation of a human mind from the dark pit of insanity is one of the richest achievements which is within the power of mortal man to fulfill.

By the same token, the most degenerate and depraved specimens in the sewers of civilized society are those psychiatrists who mix their professional and political activities and contribute their knowledge and gifts to the promotion of fanciful ideological theories or who undertake to brainwash vast segments of humanity in the interest of one-world government.

National and international so-called mental health organizations are running over with this type of off-color psychiatrist whose pronouncements indicate that they are far more mentally unbalanced than any patient they might be called on to treat, and it is they who are giving a black eye to an honorable profession.

If the Congress of the United States would make a thorough investigation of the whole "mental health" set-up, they would find that most of these national and international organizations are merely propaganda mediums of a very sinister and dangerous type and that, in the final analysis their subversive propaganda is directed against the United States. All are openly committed to some form of one-world government and that means the end of the United States as a free, independent and sovereign Republic.

In their book, patriotism and love of one's own country is a form of insanity, only "freedom from morality means freedom to think" and their top screwball, Dr. C. B. Chisholm who, by all accepted measurements of sanity is as crazy as a bedbug, says that "even self-defense" involves "neurotic reaction" and especially when it means "defending one's own wealth from others who are in great need."

Recently the World Federation for Mental Health which works closely with WHO of the United Nations with headquarters in London, issued its annual report which gave a list of its sponsors and associates in the various countries.

There were two pages of Americans shown as affiliated with the outfit and for the information of our readers we decided to go into their backgrounds by checking their records with official government files on subversion.

On this list serving as the American representatives of the World's Federation for Mental Health, there were 37 individuals, both men and women, who have been cited as belonging to Communist organizations which advocate the overthrow of the American government.

God knows it is dangerous enough to the security of this country when those in government, defense, education, religion and labor align themselves with Communist causes but when those who tinker with the human mind also seek such affiliation, it seems to us that it is high time something be done about it.

Policies closely resembling those of Henry Wallace when he was Secretary of Agriculture, went into effect with the adoption of the Soil Bank plan. No little pigs are to be slaughtered nor crops plowed under but the principle is the same as farmers are to be paid cash for crops they don't plant.

We have been furnished a carbon copy of a letter Earl Warren wrote to Herman H. Ross of Anchorage, Alaska, on June 5th, 1948 just before he became a candidate for vice president on the Republican ticket with Dewey, in which he is shown as having said in part: "In my opinion, there should be some overall rules in the matter of the relationship of the various segments of our population, particularly where election to Federal office is involved. Local problems, however, whether they be on this or any other subject, should be dealt with by local government. We cannot hope to have a vigorous democracy in America unless this is our firm policy." It would be most interesting to know who, or what changed his mind so completely between 1948 and 1952 when he completely turned a somersault.

A headline says that State Department officials are seeking expulsion of Reds from the United Nations. That's fine but how about getting them out of the State Department, too?

Senators Who Voted Against Two Highly Undesirable Appointees

In our last edition, we promised to publish the names of members of the Senate who voted against the confirmation of Simon Sobeloff, the appointee of the White House as Judge of the Court of Appeals of the Fourth District composed of Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, North Carolina and South Carolina.

If those who selected Sobeloff for this job had searched the entire country for a nominee who would be more distasteful to Southern people than this South-hater, it would have been impossible to find one. Many Senators from the States involved pled with their colleagues to turn Sobeloff down but they paid not the slightest attention and voted for his confirmation.

Those who voted against confirmation were: Byrd, Eastland, Ellender, Ervin, Frear, Hill, Holland, Jenner, Johnston of South Carolina, Long, McCarthy, McClellan, Robertson, Russell, Scott, Sparkman, Welker, Williams and Wofford. Those who were either absent or not voting but would have voted against the confirmation were Daniel, George and Stennis.

While we are on the subject, we will give the names of the Senators who voted against the confirmation of Paul Hoffman, appointed by the White House to represent the United States in the United Nations. Hoffman has been one of the ramrods in the Fund for the Republic, an organization with a record since its organization of defending Communists: Barrett, Bricker, Bridges, Butler, Byrd, Curtis, Dirksen, Dworshak, Eastland, Frear, Goldwater, Hruska, Jenner, Johnston of South Carolina, Langer, Malone, McCarthy, McClellan, Mundt, Schoeppel, Wofford, Young. Those who were absent but would have voted against confirmation were: Daniel and Welker.

Justice Department Enters Local School Fight in Hoxie, Arkansas

Immediately following the San Francisco convention where Republican leaders made it clear that force would not be used by the Federal government in trying to enforce the Supreme Court ruling on segregation, the Department of Justice interfered in the Hoxie Arkansas, school wrangle where racial tension is already at a dangerous pitch.

The Justice Department called on the United States Court of Appeals to prevent citizens of that small town from trying to keep segregation in effect and to allow integrationists to continue their program to mix 25 Negro children with 1,000 white school children of Hoxie.

The power of the Justice Department was aligned with the 25 Negroes, leaving the 1,000 white students unrepresented except by local sentiment which is almost one hundred per cent for continued segregation.

It is believed by many that this case is only one of several similar instances in which action will be taken between now and the election by the attorney general in attempts to influence Negro votes.

In France, taxes are so high that the owner of a 30-room chateau at Poitiers blew it up with dynamite because he couldn't keep up the expense. Two thousand people watched as the fine old building with fairy-tale turrets and painted ceilings was blown to bits. There was no report of anything being done to those who levy the exorbitant taxes which caused this wanton destruction of property. Maybe they'll get around to that later.

Muncie, Indiana, officials locked up the gates to their swimming pools early in the summer and kept them locked because of the demand of Negroes to use them. It was the first time Negroes had ever tried to use the pools, according to the police chief there. Score up another victory for the fine "racial relations" which the Supreme Court has fostered.

Keeping up the record of Federal Judges in recent months in contributing their share to the administration's mongrelization program, Judge Palmer Hutchinson of Houston barged in to the meeting of the American Bar Association at Dallas with a resolution which would have called for enforcement of integration by the Federal government. He was turned down flat.

Behavior of Texas Voters Leaves Us Slightly Dizzy

The political situation in Texas, to put it mildly, is about as confused and contradictory as it is possible for the affairs of an American Commonwealth to be in this muddled world.

In the first primary on July 28, Senator Price Daniel led the ticket in the race for governor by more than 165,000.

In the same primary Texans voted to keep segregation and against all forms of integration by an average of three to one and in some cases, five to one.

Since Daniel's opponent in the run-off was Ralph Yarborough, a perennial candidate for the office and regarded as the voice of the CIO and the NAACP, the vote on integration by the people of the State provided Daniel with an effective and dynamic issue around which the great majority of Texans could be expected to rally.

The issue was ready and waiting but Daniel ignored it and, for some reason beyond the power of most Texans to fathom, merely made token protest against integration. Perhaps it was the Washington influence to which he was exposed for some three or four years and where a courageous and forthright expression on any issue is regarded as little short of treason.

At any rate he nosed Yarborough out by only three thousand votes, the narrowest margin by which a candidate for governor of Texas has been elected within memory, in the second primary on August 25.

Between the first and second primaries when it became evident that Daniel was merely going to flirt with the segregation issue, most people lost interest and the campaign in the August run-off election was the dulllest and most listless contest ever staged in the State. More than 200,000 Texans who voted in the first primary didn't even go to the polls in August.

To make the affair more weird, W. Lee O'Daniel, former governor and United States senator who received some quarter of a million votes in the first primary and who has a strong following among rural voters, came out at the last minute and asked his supporters to vote in the second primary for Ralph Yarborough on the ground that Yarborough was the weakest candidate and promised that he, O'Daniel, would make the race as an Independent in November and beat Yarborough, thereby insuring the election of a strong segregationist as governor of the State.

Apparently the majority of his followers took him seriously and voted in large numbers for Yarborough although the legality of a candidate making the race in July as a Democrat and as an Independent in November has been seriously questioned in some quarters.

About the only thing which has been proved by the whole proceeding is that the leftists are going to have to get themselves some new material next time since Yarborough has been an unsuccessful contender for the office in five different primaries and that is way above par for the course even in Texas where we are accused of doing things on a big scale.

We Stick Our Neck Out to Predict Election Results

We have had quite a number of letters recently asking our opinion on whether Dwight D. Eisenhower or Adlai Stevenson will win the race for President in the November election.

Of course what we know about it is exactly nothing as we have no gift of prescience which would enable us to penetrate the mysterious veil of the future and foretell something that has not yet happened.

We are just as ignorant and ill-prepared to prophesy as the public opinion pollsters and the political columnists who are always eager to stick their neck out and tip off the public about what the voters will do at the next election.

But we do have ideas on the subject and have never yet been known to refuse to put in our two cents worth concerning any subject having to do with politics and we never let it be said that we fail to give our opinion when asked. And so we submit our views for whatever, if anything, they are worth.

We think that Eisenhower will be elected for what, to us, seem valid reasons on which to base our deductions:

There are more than a million persons in this country and abroad whom we will call active internationalists. Of course, we have another name for them but for the purposes of this discussion, that designation will suffice.

These internationalists control not only the money of the world but have a firm grasp on the political, social, educational, labor and religious forces of the United States who think and act as a unit toward the attainment of the overall international objective.

This objective, of course, is ultimate one-world government and the inclusion of the United States into this super-governing body after its sovereignty has been gradually whittled away.

Whether or not Mr. Eisenhower was sympathetic to the internationalist cause before he became President, we wouldn't know but we do know from his actions and his public statements that he is an enthusiastic convert to their program now. During the past four years, he has advanced the internationalist plan immeasurably and it is only reasonable to assume that he will take us further — if not all the way — toward a one-world government if he is given another four years in office.

By this we do not mean to imply for a moment that Adlai Stevenson would not become their captive, if elected, because we are convinced that he would. He is so thoroughly imbued with the Marxian philosophy, and so utterly lacking in understanding of, and sympathy for, the fundamental principles of the American Republic, that he would probably fall into the internationalist trap without waiting to be pushed, just like over-ripe fruit from the limb of a persimmon tree.

But Eisenhower has four years' advantage of him in experience, in international contacts and indoctrination which makes him far more valuable to one-world planners than Stevenson who would have to be educated from scratch, and initiated into all the intricate and complicated methods by which a great nation is dismantled and gradually welded into a larger world super-state.

Because these internationalist forces are all-powerful and because their influence extends all the way down into every unit of organized human activity, we believe that they will elect the candidate of their choice and that their choice is Mr. Eisenhower.

Of course the election returns can make a fool out of us as they have done many times in the case of far wiser persons than we, but this is the way we see the situation.

The anti-States Rights liberals are now clamoring for the "unification" of traffic laws throughout the United States in preparation for the proposed Federal system of highways which Eisenhower asked for and got out of the last Congress. Harry Hopkins was the first one to suggest the building of a highway system to cover all the States. He made the suggestion to Roosevelt as one of the various ways in which he could get his clutches on the States. For, of course, when the thing is started the Federal boys will be right in there setting prices and bossing the job generally.

Anyone Wanting the Low-Down Will Form a Line to the Left

From the Christian Century, perhaps the pinkest of many pink church publications in this country, it is learned that the New England Methodist Conference meeting in Malden, Massachusetts, recently went a step further into extracurricular activities than has been taken in all previous history of that denomination.

It was decided at this Conference that "planned parenthood is a Christian responsibility" and a resolution passed at the gathering advised Methodist ministers to "make information on planned parenthood available to parishioners" and "to advise people where to secure birth control information."

Whether the good men of the Cloth will openly discuss the subject during their Sunday morning sermon or slip the information to their worshippers privately as they file out the door following the singing of the Doxology, was not made clear in the Century's discussion of the matter.

In other resolutions, the Conference demanded mixing of Negroes and white people "in ALL areas of society," denounced the right-to-work laws of the several States, urged that money given away to foreign countries be distributed through the United Nations and called for the emasculation of the McCarran-Walter immigration law which was passed in the interest of the national security of this country.

Admission of Red China to the United Nations was strongly approved in a heated debate on the subject, but official approval of this step was defeated.

Nothing of a religious nature was discussed at the Conference apparently as there was no mention of it in the record of the proceedings appearing in the Century.

Communist Frontier In NAACP Agitates For Racial Mixing

Dr. W. T. White, Superintendent of the Dallas Public Schools has taken a very firm and commendable position in regard to the matter of segregation.

Dallas schools, he announced, would continue segregated as before during the 1956-57 terms. Beyond that, he had nothing to say.

The position of Dallas school officials has been made difficult because of the activities of a Negro representing the NAACP there, one U. Simpson Tate, who, like the rest of the Negroes and white trash composing that organization, has sought court action to force integration in many parts of the South. Only in one large Texas city, however, has any progress been made in this respect and that is the extremely "liberal" city of San Antonio, where some schools have accepted the mongrelization program.

U. Simpson Tate, the Negro attorney for the NAACP at Dallas, is named on page 626 Vol. 1 of the Special Committee on un-American Activities, 1938—"Investigation of Un-American Activities in the United States"—as having been national treasurer of the National Negro Congress at one time, which was cited as Communist and subversive by the Attorney General of the United States.

"World Goodwill" Outfit Makes Threats Against Future of U. S.

There is not much heard of an outfit called "World Goodwill" because it has not been publicized as much as some other one-world organizations whose propaganda is cluttering up the mail and the communications media of all nations. But the "World Goodwill" group is one of the most subtle and dangerous of all.

It has headquarters in London, New York and, of course, Geneva which is a hotbed of world movements and where it is eventually planned to locate the head of the one-world government.

Although this World Goodwill has been putting out literature for several years, it has only now begun the issuance of a regular bulletin, volume 1 and number 1 of which has just been issued.

It is characteristic of the trash they put out that no names are ever shown, and it is virtually impossible to pin down the identity of its sponsors with the exception of one Ian Gordon-Brown of London who signed a letter sent out in August soliciting funds.

Two typical paragraphs from their bulletin carry a veiled threat against those who might protest against world government and implies the futility of "ignorant and useless resistance" just as the people of the United States have it hammered into their heads that "ignorant and useless resistance" will get them nowhere in connection with the Supreme Court's assault on the American Constitution.

"The Twentieth Century has been aptly characterized 'the century of change'. Some people still mourn the passing of 'the good old days' and try to resist the swift current of events sweeping them away from the safe and comfortable anchorage of familiar custom. The uncertainty and the adventurous challenge of the future for which the experiments of today are a temporary phase of preparation, excite a sense of expectancy in some of us and of foreboding in others.

"Nevertheless this individual reaction is relatively unimportant because whether we like it or not there is no blinding our eyes to the fact that humanity stands on the threshold of a new age. We have the choice of cooperating intelligently and skillfully in the birth of the new day so that it may dawn in beauty, or of sticking in our toes and raising a dust cloud of ignorance and useless resistance. We shall be in spite of ourselves 'carried kicking and screaming into the new age' as Mr. Adlai Stevenson is reported to have said on a recent occasion."

This last paragraph should be read over and over again. Certainly some interest will be stimulated in the citizen's mind as to who is back of all these threats that are constantly being made against the American people. And where does

'Low Mentality Groups' Damage U. S. Abroad, But Race Can't Be Named

(From Charleston, S.C. News and Courier)

Book That Reflects No Credit On Its Author

General Telford Taylor's book "The Grand Inquest" is devoted to condemnation of investigating committees of Congress and to security measures which have been passed for the protection of the Republic.

No one will question General Taylor's right to author such a book but there must be many who challenge his judgment and his wisdom in issuing a volume which can only give aid and comfort to the enemy.

The "Grand Inquest" is further verification and vindication of charges made by Senator Joseph R. McCarthy of Wisconsin concerning sympathy for the Communist cause on the part of Americans in high places in the government, in the Army and in defense plants.

The announcement by the Constitution Party, preceding its Fort Worth meeting on August 27th that Mary Cain of Mississippi would make a keynote speech of its convention was superfluous information. Any speech the brilliant Mary Cain makes is a "Key-note address," no matter the place, the subject or the occasion.

There is much agitation on the part of the Texas League of Women Voters for re-writing the Constitution of the State. We don't know what they have in mind and they probably don't either. They just want to change it, but in our humble opinion, we should let it alone. Only God knows what would happen if we turned politicians loose to shape a new Constitution according to their ideas. We only know that Reds would horn in on the act and take over.

"American Communists have announced that they stand on a platform of 'jobs, peace, equal rights, and democracy.' But they omit the two most important words — 'Moscow style'. When the Communist smirk begins to change to a smile, as is the case right now, we would be well advised to refocus our sights. Behind those changing spots, the same bad blood still flows through the leopard's veins." — J. Edgar Hoover.

Addled Adlai, whom they quote, come in? He's not in the White House yet and it would seem to be time enough to start this one world propaganda after he is safely elected.

From the above statements, those leading the World Goodwill outfit would appear to be fools and crackpots and they are, but they can't be dismissed lightly for we cannot deny that fools and crackpots are the leaders today and are shaping national and world policies.

And what a happy thought that a nest of internationalist degenerates in London is circularizing the world with threats against the future of the American people and of the American Republic.

The protest of Gen. Hodes, European commander of the U. S. Army, against sending "low mentality groups" to foreign military service is national news of first importance. It is news that we fear will not reach, with its full implications, the bulk of the American people. The facts, however, will be exploited to their full worth by the enemies of our country. For the truth is that in many parts of the world the people mean it when they say, "Yankee, go home."

One of the reasons why our country is earning more hatred than love is that foreign troops are never welcome indefinitely. Whether they are occupying armies among conquered peoples, as in Japan and Germany, or police garrisons as in Iceland and scores of other places in the world, sooner or later they are intensely unwelcome.

This historic distaste for foreign troops is even more acute when racial differences are added.

Gen. Hodes' protest that some of the men assigned overseas are unfit to represent their country apparently made no reference to race. In view of the integration orders from the Supreme Commander in the White House, he hardly could have mentioned it.

The subject is in the spotlight as a result of indignation over a gang-rape in Bamberg, Germany. Seven American soldiers are charged with assaulting a girl of 15. All seven are Negroes.

Reports have been current for some time that American troops have behaved badly in foreign places. Not all of the crimes of course are committed by Negro troops. The Army does not keep statistics by race and therefore it is not possible to get an official statement. Statistics on crime by race are available in the United States, however. They show plainly that Negroes commit far more than their share.

Would it be surprising if Negro troops have a similar record overseas?

The United States should not permit Negro troops to be billeted in all-white countries. But national policy forbids segregation in the armed forces. Segregation, we have been told, supplies bad propaganda. Yet the American commander in Europe calls for segregation of his troops from "low mentality groups." Juggling of words to avoid reference to race can't hide the truth forever.

We know nothing, and care less about the game of golf but we have a deep and profound respect for Babe Zaharias whose gallant spirit as she fights for her life in a Galveston hospital has won for her the admiration and sympathy of all Americans. The world of sport has been made cleaner and finer by her participation in it.

On a business trip to the West in August, we spent one delightful day in Denver, one of our favorite cities. We were entertained at luncheon at the Brown Palace by Mr. and Mrs. Leon V. Almirall... later we had a wonderful visit with two of our favorite cousins, Olive Yates Coy and Helen Logue.

The Most Arrant Example of Human Hypocrisy in History

The absolute hypocrisy of the leaders of both the major political parties on the despicably over-worked and over-publicised question of "Civil Rights" was so forcefully demonstrated by both at their conventions that there should be no further doubt in any one's mind of their complete insincerity in the matter.

Nothing was more obvious that the sole concern of each was in corraling Negro votes than the facility with which each party changed and amended and shifted its plank on the subject in order to avoid offense to one section while, at the same time, carefully taking into account the danger of alienating the voters in another area, with the result that both came up with a wishy-washy solution that commanded no respect from decent white people and stirred no enthusiasm among self-respecting blacks.

This is the inevitable outcome when political weaklings and incompetents who aspire to national leadership assume the prerogative of taking up and disposing of matters which do not properly come within the jurisdiction of Federal authorities. The Tenth amendment to the Constitution specifically reserved to the States all powers not delegated to the Federal government and by no stretch of the imagination did the Constitution delegate to Washington the authority over the American public school systems, swimming pools, golf links or other educational or recreational centers into which the Supreme Court is now attempting to come charging and throw its weight around.

Here is the way and the only way in which this strictly non-governmental subject of Civil Rights became injected into American political campaigns where it is now serving the purposes of gimlet-headed politicians in their ambitious attempts to have, or to hold, public office:

Moscow Communists, ever on the alert for trouble-raising issues which would promote Communism throughout the world, hit on the idea of stirring up illiterate Southern Negroes on the ground that they were being discriminated against and that their "civil rights" were being violated.

Roosevelt who was always a sucker for any social experiment, no matter how outlandish, far-fetched or bizarre, fell right in with the plan to foment discontent among colored people of the South. It proved effective and diverted many votes to the Democrats which had traditionally gone to the Republicans. Truman employed the same cheap, scurvy and disgusting tactics which further cemented the colored vote to the Democratic Party.

When Eisenhower came to power with his promises of a "change" and his avowed intention of halting corruption and cleaning up the mess, he took a second look and decided that this potential source of votes was worth further exploitation. Accordingly he has worked the racket more thoroughly than his predecessors ever intended and has finally appeared willing to wreck the Constitution in order to harvest every possible ballot which this field provides.

Way to Get Secret and Classified Information Is to Pay Five Bucks

The people of the American Republic were properly shocked in September, 1951, when Harry Truman, President of the United States, issued his infamous Executive Order 10290 establishing censorship in all the agencies and departments of the Federal government. This order left up to agency heads the right to decide what information should be given the Congress and to the American people and what should be withheld from them.

Up to that point in history, the question of the right not only of the Congress of the United States, but of the people, to be informed as to the activities of the government, was unquestioned, and accepted as a matter of course.

Truman had been faced with some embarrassing investigations involving the loyalty of highly-placed government personnel such as Alger Hiss, Harry Dexter White, William Remington and others which had evoked the President's notorious "red herring" statements. With the spite and vindictiveness which were, and are, the outstanding traits in Truman's character, he retaliated by issuing the Censorship order.

When "the change" came in 1952, it was confidently believed that this order would be rescinded and that the Congress and the American people would once again be given all legitimate information, and especially in peacetime, to which the citizens in a free Republic are entitled.

However, Mr. Eisenhower did not only not see fit to rescind this censorship order but issued one of his own dated May 17, 1954, in a letter directed to the Secretary of Defense during the Army-McCarthy hearings in which he said: "You will instruct employees of your Department that in all their appearances before it (Army-McCarthy hearings) they are not to testify". Since that time, according to Senate document 2621, Report of the Committee on Government Operations, page 31, more than twenty government agencies and departments have cited this letter as their grounds for refusing information to Congress.

Meantime, the American people have become more or less used to the semi-slave status in which they find themselves and in which they are not allowed any information concerning the activities of their government except such censored data as the executive department and its agencies may dole out, although members of the Congress have never ceased to vigorously protest the refusal of information to them which is necessary in discharging their legislative responsibilities.

It was, therefore, with much the same shocked amazement that would attend the dropping of an atomic bomb, that members of the Congress and the American people received the startling information that a newspaper man had been turned loose to graze among the secret files and documents which have so long been withheld and that this newspaper man, Robert J. Donovan had incorporated this information in a book called "The Inside Story".

Senator John L. McClellan is Chairman of the Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations of the Committee on Government Operations, which committee had tried in vain to get vital information from the Executive Department in connection with a series of hearings which it had been conducting into the matter of East-West trade and the downgrading and de-control of strategic goods which NATO countries were being permitted to shift to European Communist bloc countries.

The attitude of the majority of the members of this committee was expressed in this statement by Chairman McClellan on Page 556 of the Report on hearings on East-West Trade, part 3:

"It is something novel in my experience that a Senatorial or Congressional committee charged with the duty and responsibility of studying the government at all levels can be denied government documents, memoranda and material which is on file in the executive branch of the government on the grounds that it is confidential; documents that are certainly at a lower level than the minutes of Cabinet proceedings and then find that the minutes of Cabinet proceedings which are secret and confidential, can be made available for public use, for private enterprise, and for profit and gain to some individual. It presents a rather shocking situation to the Chair".

Chairman McClellan immediately dispatched a letter to Maxwell Rabb (formerly Rabinowitz), Secretary of the Cabinet in which he told him it was difficult to understand why confidential information had been given to an outsider which had repeatedly been refused to committees of the Congress. Senator McClellan respectfully asked Rabb to appear before his Committee and testify concerning the matter.

With typical arrogance of the little man in a big job, Rabb curtly replied to Senator McClellan telling him that he knew nothing about the matter and, relying on Eisenhower's censorship rule, refused to testify.

Meantime, it is reported that Donovan is getting rich on the sale of his books at five dollars each, and that his new job as a peddler of secret, inside information from government files is proving so profitable that he may retire from his profession as an active newspaper correspondent.

On the jacket of the book, Donovan openly brags that: "For the first time in our history an administration while still in office has permitted a distinguished journalist (Gad, how he hates himself.—Editor) to compile an authentic, independent account of its conduct of affairs of state. In this sense this book is an inside story of Eisenhower in the White House. Here is a wealth of new and unpublished information obtained through access to Cabinet officers, key men and other sources. The book reveals much about the President and his associates; it also shows how great decisions were reached and describes the intimate workings of the White House".

Since we are an avid seeker of information—inside or otherwise—on the behavior of Washington politicians, we dug down in our jeans and gave up five dollars for the book containing 422 pages of "inside information" and while we, with all our other responsibilities, have only made a very perfunctory examination of it, we find that there is one very significant piece of "inside information" which Mr. Donovan omitted and that is:

"Who promoted Peress?"

Negroes Trip Themselves Up In Attempted Ballot Fraud

A pitiable example of the way Negroes are being used by pro-Communist advocates of integration was afforded in the recent State election in Texas.

In one all-Negro voting box in Fort Worth, the official voting list was turned in by the precinct chairman with the names of the voters listed alphabetically.

State laws specify that the name of each voter shall be entered on the list at the time he receives his ballot and marks it. Of course voters do not come to the polls in alphabetical order so there was something obviously wrong.

A poll of those whose names were turned in by the precinct chairman in this all-Negro box showed that many of them were ill, out of the State, or for other reasons did not vote.

The frightened Negro woman who was election judge for the controversial box refused to comment other than to repeat what she had been told to say: "Returns from that box are valid".

The matter is in the hands of the Grand Jury and they will no doubt deal leniently with the Negroes.

The real culprit is probably some white scoundrel who put them up to the crookedness. He forgot to instruct them properly and of course they know nothing of the law on the subject and thoroughly messed up the attempt to stuff the box.

The box which cast 656 votes in the first primary reported 1060 in the last primary, with 1034 for Yarborough the NAACP candidate, and 26 for Price Daniel.

There is nothing that infuriates us like having someone refer to the United States as a "Democracy." Heretofore, we have attributed such errors to ignorance but apparently that is not the answer. At San Francisco Mr. Eisenhower called the United States a "Democracy" and certainly he is not ignorant. We can only assume that his designation of the Republic as a "Democracy" was deliberate.

Westbrook Pegler who can hit the nail on the head a hundred times out of a hundred sums up the two recent political conventions in this manner: "The truth of this year's Democratic and Republican conventions has eluded the whole nation. The truth is that both the Democratic and Republican parties are Socialistic and are merely two rival gangs of fakers, both completely hostile to the Constitution because it provided plain impediments to their treacheries."

THAT'LL BE THE DAY: When American taxpayers get full up to the gullet with the deceit, hypocrisy, double-crossing, four-flushing and treachery of the Fair Deal Democrats and the Fair Deal Republicans and band themselves together to put an American of integrity, common sense and administrative ability in the White House. He doesn't need to be a statesman even; we have learned to get along without statesmanship. If only he is possessed of horse sense and patriotism for the United States, rather than loyalty to the United Nations, he would bring back hope for the restoration of Constitutional government.
