INTERNATIONAL FEMINIST ACTIVIST LOOKS AT CREATIVITY FOR SOCIAL CHANGE

Spending time with Kari Anderson is synonymous with regenerating spiritual creativity for social change. She truly has the power of unlocking and unleashing female moral power in order to "bring it to bear on global, national, regional, local and personal issues."

Most of all she urges innovative ways to tackle both old and new problems that we face as individuals and as nations.

Kari Anderson is the featured speaker at the Women's Group on July 9 where she will share her national and international experiences as a consultant to policymakers, as a catalyst to redefine and restructure development policies, and as a collaborator for cross-cultural organizational grass root initiatives.

Kari Anderson may have stimulated grass-root initiatives, but she certainly is not allowing the grass to grow under her feet.

In May 1989 she participated in an international workshop, "People's Initiatives to Overcome Poverty" at the Institute of Culture and Communication Resource Systems in Honolulu, Hawaii. She acted as a representative in the capacity of co-program director of the Socio-Economic Policy and Forecasting Unit based in Thailand.

What concerns Kari is not only material poverty across the world, but also the spiritual poverty that she has discovered among American women. As citizens of a nation that is a forerunner in technological advances, "we have not yet figured out how to tap our spiritual energies," she says.

She herself is a living example of her emphatic philosophy that the individual makes a difference. And that difference will make it possible to find "new directions for future responsibilities in protecting and nurturing the planet earth," she explains.

Since men have so woefully failed in this regard, women constitute the true powerhouses from which creative initiatives will spring and provide solutions to socio-economic problems faced today.

But in order for that to happen women must first tap the energies of their spirituality.

Kari wants to create an international forum which would serve "to identify and reinforce certain values common to us all and realize the urgent need to cooperate rather than compete in our efforts to address a number of concerns which knows no borders, no gender, and cannot tolerate prejudices," she says.

Her own "spiritual awakening" came as a result of being chosen to be an American exchange student in Thailand about ten years ago. As a teenager in a small community in Minnesota, Kari would have been satisfied to become a P.E. teacher and "have a garden". Her experiences showed her another garden that needed tilling and gave her the mandate to be what she is today and what she plans for herself tomorrow.

Her first international encounter forced her to examine herself in a different light. What she found shocked her. She was embarrassingly ignorant not only about the rest of the world but also about her native country, the United States. She also discovered that "as Americans we are not living what our values are."

"We are clueless as to what we are doing internationally as well as nationally. We are ignorant in so many ways."

In her opinion, such national and international illiteracy is disastrous given the present state of affairs in our localities, in our nation, and abroad.

In a small school in Thailand, without the benefit of running water and air conditioning, without computers, Kari learned more about herself and her relationship to the world than she had ever learned.

She came to realize why it is so important for ordinary citizens to become more aware of the effects American policy decisions are having globally. "Our planet can ill afford ignorance in such matters. It is not enough to know that we are a 'Great Nation'."

In comparison to Third World counterparts, American women are far less informed about how policy decisions are made and what effect they have, according to Kari. She explains that ultimately there is a price to be paid for such ignorance.

As women "we must learn to think globally and act locally," is the message she wants to communicate to as many groups as possible across the world. Her own journey as an international feminist activist has taken her from being an active observer of the world to one who feels the urgency to jolt individuals and groups into creative action. And "jolt" is a word she uses often.

She feels that "whatever topic we may choose individually as a vehicle, we need to use the opportunity to bring our local communities together while simultaneously embracing with the global network."

POST SCRIPT (from the writer of this article):

And what does Kari do when she is not actively involved in a cooperative initiative abroad? She wears sunglasses with excerpts from news about political refugees (let her tell her own story of how she acquired them here in Houston).

After interviewing Kari as I sped down a superhighway to get back home experiencing all the comforts our technology can offer in my airconditioned late model car, I realized that living the American dream in material ways is but a paltry experience when compared to the hour I had spent with Kari as she unfolded her spirituality and "stream-of-consciousness" thoughts.

Her words had prompted a response and a spiritual bonding.

This article can do but justice in a small way to the magical aura Kari radiates as she speaks. Her voice is felt as well as heard.

Her gift of communication is rare.

PUSSY POEM

Pussy is better than custard pie better than grass or a cocaine high she's hot, she shivers, she sucks you in sticky and drooly all over your chin;
oh, better than diamonds or boxes of sweets is a cunt-eating session under the sheets.

You slurp and she shudders, the bedsprings announce your game to the neighbors with each happy bounce she bucks like a mustang, you lift off the bed
you lips glued together, her thighs squeeze your head;
one hand grabs a nipple, another her ass,
she howls like a freight train descending a pass.
Your tongue moves like lightning, her blood answers thunder wave after wave till you're both going under oh happy oyster, you're drowning, you're drunk, swallowing, swimming in juice of a cunt.

Oh let's skip the moonlight, the sentiments rare
the whispery nothings, the lace underwear;
let's take off our bluejeans and give a big cheer for a fat creamy cunt with thick curly hair.

HOMework SUGGESTIONS FOR LESBIANS

Date - One person be responsible for inviting her partner for a special activity, the invitor is to take responsibility for all aspects of planning, reservations, transportation, childcare, etc.

Turn Ons/offs - Each woman makes a list of the things that turn her on and off about sexual involvement with her partner. When both of the list are completed, they can be shared at home or in a therapy session. It can be productive to have the discussion lead into desired changes for the sexual relationship.

Spoon Breathing - Both partners lie close together and facing in the same direction. Gradually the woman in back begins to breath in the same rhythm as the woman in front. The couple breaths at the same pace for 10 minutes, and then switch positions and roles.

New Activity- Each woman is responsible for initiating one new sensual or sexual activity during a week.

Body Adornment- Each woman takes a turn being the recipient and the giver in a body adornment session. Body adornment can include use of jewelry, body paints, make-up, food, scarves, etc.

Sensual Bathing- Each woman takes a turn being the recipient and the giver. The giver may use bath oils, special soap, candlelight and is urged to be creative.

Erotic Massage- This massage may or may not include genital touching. The massager is instructed to gather objects of different textures like, feathers, fur, velvet, smooth rock, brush, or different scented items, and to slowly rub each item over the partners body. The receiver is instructed to inform her partner if any part of the massage is uncomfortable or unpleasant.

Self Sexuality Sessions- Each member of the couple takes individual private time to take a sensual bath, look at herself carefully in a mirror, or to masturbate in a familiar or new way. They may want to share information with other from these sessions.

Sharing Masturbation- The couple can discuss their feelings about masturbation and ways that each woman pleasures herself, Each woman can demonstrate how she stimulates herself. The exercise is useful in developing the concept that they both do not have to be genitally sexual in the same touching session

Prohibition of Genital Contact- Be creative in developing a wide range of sensual activities that do not include genital contact.

Sharing Sexual Fantasies- Encourage the couple to share information about their sexual fantasies, and to discuss if they would like to incorporate any part of their sexual fantasy into their sexual relationship.

Heart Song

HeartSong, Houston Women's Community Chorus, under the direction of Lynne Weynand, celebrated its third anniversary in June. Under Lynne's leadership the chorus has grown to 40 members.

Preparations are well underway for HeartSong's Second Solo Concert, "Creating Harmony . . . our music, your heart". Prices have been kept low at $6.50.

For information on how you can become a Zing-A-Mama and help the chorus off to a flying start (and get reserved tickets to the concert) call Mary Helen at 526-4000.

NEW GROUP FORMS FOR WOMEN WHO WANT TO BE INVOLVED POLITICALLY

The purpose of this group is to educate and involve women in the political process. To empower their participation in the election of feminist candidates, to encourage them to run for office and to decide and establish our own agenda based on feminist principles and issues. This is meant to be a grassroots (radical) effort to organize women as activists within and without existing party structures, or by forming new ones. Strategies include precinct organizing, voter registration, lobbying, organizing the delegate selection process, campaign activism and coalition building.

An organizing meeting was held on June 16 to initiate dialogue concerning how we as feminists can meet the challenge of the times. There was discussion on what our interests were and what goals we should establish. We talked about being motivated by issues. Choice, Domestic Violence, judicial reform and 21.06 were some of the concerns. There were questions about taking this action within a political party, and whether we must align ourselves one way or another. While our purpose states that we intend to do this within or without existing party structures, it is thought that our best hope is to work within the Democratic party in order to take advantage of an existing political base.

See July 20 calendar listing for more information about the next scheduled meeting of this new dynamic effort.

REPORT ON TEXAS LESBIAN CONFERENCE by Deborah Bell

The Second Annual Texas Lesbian Conference held in Houston the weekend of June 2 through 4 was a tremendous success, reports Deborah Bell of WOMYNSPACE, one of the sponsoring organizations. "Turnout was not as high as we had expected, but I understand many women had to choose between the conference and the March on Austin," Bell said. The workshops were powerful in line with the conference theme of "Celebrating Our Diversity." Both AMIGA, the other sponsoring organization and WOMYNSPACE were very proud to welcome our sisters to Houston for this event. We had over 70 volunteers, whose work made all the difference and to whom we heartily express our appreciation.

Highlights included the presentations by AMIGA and WOMYNSPACE that opened the conference, and the "$1 a dance" fundraiser for The Texas Human Rights Fund. Linda Morales of AMIGA is the lead plaintiff in the lawsuit against the state of Texas that challenges Article 21.06 of the Penal code, which makes certain same sex practices illegal. Attendees had a chance to dance with Linda (an excellent dancer by the way) for $1 a piece -- over $75 was collected this way! The Saturday night dance with over 350 attending and the Sunday afternoon concert emceed by Nancy Ford with an array of local talent such as Heartsong (the Houston Women's Chorus), Maryanne Pendino, Edna Garcia, Rawslyn Ruffin and Compenaras donating their talents also proved to be outstanding events.
