Anti-Iran protesters rally downtown

Demonstrators oppose U.S. embassy takeover

By BOB ENGLER
Staff Writer for The Cougar

Chants of "Death to Khomeini" and "Iranians go home" echoed through downtown Houston noon Thursday when some 700 marchers demonstrated in protest to the Iranian occupation of the U.S. embassy in Tehran.

The demonstration, organized by a group calling itself Americans Against Iran, was staged in front of Dresser Tower, 601 Jefferson St. The marchers said the office of the Iranian Consulate General is in the building.

However, a Dresser Tower security guard said the office has not been staffed for "quite some time now." A representative of the building's leasing office would neither confirm nor deny whether any of the office space there is now rented by the Iranian government.

The mood of the crowd turned ugly when a woman began to argue with some of the demonstrators, saying "the U.S. should get the shah out of this country."

The woman said she was an American married to an Iranian who is now a naturalized U.S. citizen. She was quickly surrounded by a mob of blue-janed, placard-waving marchers. Overwhelmed by the crush of angry people around her, she brandished a soda bottle in an effort to defend herself.

One of the demonstrators disarmed her, and a flurry of punches were thrown at the woman and a man, presumably her husband. Plainsclothes HPD officers moved in from their posts at the Jefferson Street entrance to Dresser Tower and rescued the pair from the mob, taking them into the building.

The mob, led by a heavily bearded man dressed in a camouflaged fatigue jacket, crowded into the doorway, screaming, "Get the son of a bitch." The officers kept the crowd out of the building and held the man and woman there until the march began to break up around 1 p.m.

The marchers gave various reasons for participating. Some said they were protesting the violation of diplomatic immunity when Iranian students swarmed the U.S. embassy in Tehran last week. Others said they were showing the American government that the people want something done. One said, "We were going to show them (the government) that the silent majority is tired of all this shit."

Most of the demonstrators offered plans to solve the problem in Tehran. One man, carrying a charcoal sketch of John Wayne, chanted, "Ask a marine" as he circled the building. He said Sgt. Striker (the Wayne character in "The Sands of Iwo Jima") and a division of marines would have the American hostages in Tehran back home in short order.

Some said they "wanted to bomb Iran back into the stone ages" while others advocated detaining 100 Iranians in this country for every American being held in Iran.

At the height of the protest, a pair of Iranian flags were

Maxson says wider range of students needed

By BRIAN FORD
Staff Writer for The Cougar

The UH Central Campus needs to attract more students, state and nationwide, to increase the prestige of the university, UH Acting Systems President Robert Maxson said Thursday.

"I think we have the potential of becoming a well known university nationally. One of the things that would help our reputation would be to draw more students statewide and nationally," Maxson said.

At least six departments at UH are the best in the state and rank among the best nationwide, Maxson said. He declined to name the departments, saying he did not wish to be accused of favoritism.

"I'd like to see students from places such as El Paso and Oklahoma attracted to the university," Maxson said. UH would compete more with universities such as Texas A&M and the University of Texas for state and nationwide students, he said.

"We're already getting some students from throughout the nation and state, but I'd like to see more attracted," he said.

Maxson said as UH graduates return home throughout the state and nation they will help perpetuate the reputation of UH. A larger enrollment of nonlocal students will help to increase the influence UH has with the state legislature, he added. He said some of the graduates will become involved with the state legislature and thus influence it in favor of UH. "There is nothing more valuable than having well trained graduates serving in important positions," he said.

Maxson said the influence of graduates also helps UH in receiving grants, private funds and programs. "That's been the key to many great universities in the past," he said.

UH is still a relatively new system wide university and has not had time to accumulate a nationwide reputation. However, at the last meeting of the UH Board of Regents, Chairman of the Board Leonard Rauch said all of the UH presidential candidates were attracted to UH through its reputation.

UH Provost George Magner said, "We would like to see more students attracted state and nationwide but realistically we will still be mainly serving the people in Harris County." UH is currently attracting more non-local students, he said.

Maxson said UH officials are currently working to define the role and scope of the university. The Academic Affairs Advisory Committee will report to the president and the Board of Regents on that subject in January.

"We are trying to create a relatively brief and broad role statement," Magner said.

Magner said the role of the UH Central Campus is relatively broad, so that its role statement should be correspondingly broad.

However, Maxson said if the statement is too vague he will ask for a revision in the statement. Magner described the scope statement as "an inventory of UH departments."

Enrollment decline no cause for alarm

The provost's office is to be congratulated for not losing its head over the recent 4.2 percent drop in student enrollment.

The drop in this fall's enrollment continues a trend that began in 1975 and 1976, when enrollment peaked at more than 30,000 students on the Central Campus. Since then, enrollment has fluctuated very little until this fall, when the figure dropped to 28,400.

Declining enrollment can spell trouble for a university, especially a state-supported one. The bulk of this university's funding comes from the Texas Legislature according to a statewide formula established by the Coordinating Board, College and University System. One of the variables in that formula is enrollment; therefore a drop in enrollment will correspond with a parallel decrease in state funds.

One easy way to get more students to come to UH is to lower admission standards. This inevitably would be accompanied by a decline in academic quality.

We commend Associate Provost Anthony Colson for avoiding this course of action. Rather, he has opted for more active recruiting of promising high school students, streamlining the registration process, improving the class schedule and providing more academic counseling.

Instead of lowering academic standards, this plan is geared toward improving the academic environment at UH. By making the university educationally more attractive, this should help boost enrollment without sacrificing quality.

It's about time the university started looking at itself and its problems in terms of academic quality.

Quantity is important to this school for financial success, but quality is necessary for survival.

Kennedy should keep quiet

As could be expected, there are some politicians who are trying to make mileage out of the Iranian takeover of the U.S. embassy in Tehran, and at the forefront is Sen. Edward Kennedy, who blamed President Carter for not having any "contingency plans."

Whether Kennedy likes it or not, Carter has responsibility for the lives of the hostages in Tehran. Kennedy's drivel will only make the situation more difficult.

Letters:

Fed up with Iranian actions

To the Editor:

I'm fed up and not going to take it anymore. The recent abduction of American citizens in Iran has got to be the straw that broke the camel's back. The United States can no longer sit back and face further humiliation in the world. It is time that we took a stand (and a firm one) with Iran to let the Ayatollah, the Iranian people and Russia know that the United States is fed up with being blackmailed, insulted and treated as the threat to the world. Khomeini and Russia are the greatest threats to this planet.

The responsibility of a foreign government is to protect the embassy and its employees from acts of violence, not to provoke those acts. In truth, the Ayatollah can not unify his country and must reactivate the hatred towards the shah to bring his discontented masses together before he is deposed himself. Why did he not demand the extradition of the shah from Mexico? Probably because it would not be in the true anti-American form, which is so popular throughout the world.

This sentiment is due in great part to the Russians and their role in world politics. But then Iran, if not now, then later, will be a part of the communist bloc countries, so they are on the right bandwagon.

As for the Iranian students who condemn the United States and its imperialist, oppressor ways, I say to pack your bags and leave us to our demonic ways. Go back to your wonderful homeland that you have fought so bravely for. Or are you afraid of your holy (murderous) leader, or possibly the communists? Whatever may be—the case, don't slander the country that gives you the right to speak out, nor should you burn the flag of the country that made you a world economic power. Simply leave and live in your country that is so free. P. Yates

U.S. should return shah to own country

To The Editor:

What should we demand that the U.S. government do about the situation in Iran? In my opinion, I think the shah ought to be returned to Iran. We shouldn't have admitted him in the first place, just as we should never have supported him. The United States was mainly responsible for the oppression of the Iranians by backing him with weapons, and it's only natural that they rebelled and stood up to the United States. True, the tactic of holding human lives hostage is wrong and inhumane, but what does the U.S. government want to do? They would like to send in troops. They would like to start oppressing them again. This is also wrong. And I don't want to go to war to oppress other people.

I'd also like to say something about Khomeini's rule. He's lost a lot of support since taking power.

People in Iran have protested his undemocratic policies, his inability to deal with many of the economic problems, and his continued oppression against non-Persian nationalities. U.S. attacks on Iran, or threats of attacks will only stifle dissent within the country, as it will pressure Iranians to join behind the government in a defense against the United States. Cougar fans sold out by former director

To The Editor:

Now come the students of UH, the university's nominal reason for existence, hoodwinked again by their servants, the administration.

By virtue of some cynical deal made by the outgoing athletic director, the home-field advantage has been given (sold?) to UT. The students' already carefully rationed tickets are in Austin! Usually when we present our ration books at the window at Hofheinz we have the option to buy one more previous ticket at 1/2 price, but the athletic department capriciously denied us this option in pursuit of the Almighty Austin Dollar.

This is yet another sordid example of our nominal servants admitting by official sleight of hand that some of UH's institutions are no longer for the students' benefit, if indeed they ever were.

That's the last nickel No. 413003 ever spends on UH athletic events, as a student or as an alumnus.

Deposed shah wouldn't help us

To the Editor:

As I watched in disgust the latest report from Iran, I decided it was the straw to break the camel's back. Let's face it people, not only are the Americans who are being held hostage in danger, we are all in trouble if action is not taken. Why should we protect the shah? He can't help us now, and if he could I for one don't think he would!

I think most of the people have been sitting back paying little attention to the problems in Iran which our government has helped create by helping the shah. Maybe the lives of those people being held doesn't mean much to you, but if one of them happened to be a relative or close friend would you care? The shah is guilty on every charge brought against him. I for one would be happy to see him sent back to pay for his wrong-doings.

Cafeteria soda blamed

Student complains of illness

By RICHARD CONNELLY
Staff Writer for The Cougar

A diabetic dorm student said she got sick Monday when a soda labeled "sugar-free" in the Moody Towers cafeteria turned out to be a regular soda, containing sugar.

Diabetics must severely limit their intake of sugar. Because their bodies cannot break down sugar, the ingestion of it can cause sickness or possibly death.

Margaret Sultenfuss, manager of Moody Towers cafeteria, said she stopped serving the soda around noon Thursday. She said a representative from the distributing company was coming out to check the problem.

The student, who asked not to be named, said she drank a number of sodas from the fountain labeled "Sugar-Free Dr. Pepper" Monday. After noticing a difference in taste from other sugar-free drinks, she took some back to her room and tested it with a sugar detection kit.

She said the test, which is similar to a litmus stick, showed the drink to be loaded with sugar. The stick changes color according to the degree of sugar in a drink. A high amount of sugar will turn the stick brown, and the student said the stick was almost completely brown.

"If a diabetic drank too much of this, it could lead to a diabetic coma," she said. She became slightly sick that night, she said.

She said the manager of the cafeteria did not believe her, telling her the test worked only for urine. Thursday afternoon, she tested a can of sugar-free Dr. Pepper with Sultenfuss. The can did not change the color of the stick noticeably.

Sultenfuss said that is when she cut off the sugar-free Dr. Pepper and called the distributor. She said the distributor "seemed greatly unglued about the situation" and sent a man out to check. The distributor was not available for comment.

"That's all I can do," she said. "I've stopped serving it until the situation is cleared up."

The soda is sent to the cafeteria in large cans of syrup that are hooked up to the fountain. The cans are labeled according to their contents.

"I think this is a worse infringement than any sanitary violation," the student said. "You don't always get sick from a sanitary violation, but this is something that can directly cause you to get sick. It just irritates the heck out of me."

Sultenfuss said personel from Dr. Pepper will come and do a lab test on the soda to determine the sugar content. It will be replaced if it contains too much sugar.

A dispatcher at the Pepsi-Cola company, which distributes the large cans of Dr. Pepper used in the cafeteria, did not know about the cause of the problem but said he could not remember ever having to send someone out to check on a situation similar to this.

UH officials believe enrollment to start increasing within year

By RICK SMITH
Staff Writer for The Cougar

UH officials are confident the drop in enrollment will be reversed in time for determining 1981 state appropriations.

Associate Provost Anthony Colson said he is "very confident" that current programs to boost enrollment will soon show results.

UH officials have been taking an in-depth look at reasons for the decline. Dr. Donald Norris, director of Institutional Studies, said.

"Let me make it clear that this institution is moving ahead," Norris said. "People don't understand that the situation an urban university is in is different (from college-town schools). Travel and commuting problems are more severe in a city the size of Houston."

Indeed other Southwest Conference schools such as the University of Texas, Texas A & M and Texas Tech have seen slight upswings in enrollment while UH and crosstown Rice both suffered losses.

Students attending the other schools don't face the same commuter problems UH students do, Norris said.

"We are also facing some competition for students from our satellite campuses at Clear Lake and downtown," Norris said.

Colson indicated the enrollments are nothing to get discouraged about. "Interpretation of enrollment figures is like handicapping horses," Colson said, "because there are so many variables to consider."

Enrollment figures indicate the greatest loss occurred in the number of incoming freshmen. In the fall of '78, 5093 students entered UH as compared to 4,534 for fall '79. Sophomore enrollment dropped 3.1 percent, juniors were down 5 percent and seniors had the least amount of loss with 1 percent.

Colson said active enrollment and retention of current students are the main objectives of plans to bolster enrollment.

"We need to upgrade some image problems at UH also," Colson said. "Houston high school students have told me they don't know where UH is located."

David Kennerly

Pulitzer winner in Houston

Kennerly promotes writings

By FRAN RICE
Features Writer for The Cougar

David Kennerly, winner of the 1972 Pulitzer Prize for photojournalism, is looking forward to writing a novel and directing a movie.

Kennerly was in Houston Tuesday promoting his autobiography, "Shooter." Looking tired after almost a full day of interviewing (with two more interviews to go), Kennerly said he has been offered the job of directing a movie based on his book.

Who would play David Kennerly?

"I don't think the world is ready for two David Kennerlys," he said. "Redford, maybe. That's a profession, acting. People work very hard to become actors. The ultimate presumption would be to think that I could do it. It's a real act, getting up and playing a dramatic role of some kind, portraying some character would be very hard," he said.

Kennerly did not keep a diary during his trips to exotic places such as the mideast and Australia, nor during mind-shattering experiences such as recording the carnage in Guyana.

"I just sat down and wrote it (the book) off the top of my head. I just put my mind on replay and started clacking away," Kennerly said.

Kennerly's interest in photography came while taking a journalism class at age 15. One day the school photographer was sick. "A camera was thrust into my hands and I was told to photograph a baseball game. The picture ran in the school paper and I was hooked," Kennerly said.

His career includes being UPI White House reporter at age 22, UPI Bureau Chief for photos in Southeast Asia and receiving the Pulitzer Prize for his coverage of Vietnam, India and Cambodia at age 24.

After returning to the United States, Kennerly was assigned to cover Gerald Ford, then House Minority Leader. As Ford was being considered by Nixon as Spiro Agnew's replacement as vice-president, Kennerly went to Ford's office, snapped his picture, and sent the film to New York. When Nixon announced that Ford would be his vice-president, the picture was his first to appear on Time magazine.

After Ford became President he asked Kennerly to be the official White House photographer, giving free reign to photograph anything happening there.

He occasionally offered suggestions to the President on various matters. One such incident was the time the U.S. cargo ship, Mayaguez, was captured by Cambodians. Kennerly spoke up during a meeting of the National Security Council and asked, "Has it occurred to anyone that the whole thing may have been the act of one local commander taking matters into his own hands and seizing the ship?"

Sometimes, he acknowledged, he offered suggestions to the President in private conversations. "I don't feel obliged to talk about them. They were made in confidence," he said.

Kennerly had a fish tank in his office at the White House which contained an oscar named Zarkov. Zarkov, Kennerly's favorite, ate only live goldfish. There was such a barrage of protest when the National Inquirer ran a story about the Zarkov, that Kennerly had to give him to a pet shop. "I guess he's still eating goldfish," Kennerly said. "He probably weighs three tons now."

AFTER Ford left the White House, Kennerly began working for Life magazine. "It was something I had always wanted to do. A dream of mine. A month-and-a-half after I got there, the magazine folded."

He wasn't out of job though. "I was lucky," Kennerly said, "I had a split contract between Life and Time, so I started working for Time," he said.

Kennerly is now free-lancing, taking pictures for Time and other magazines. He would not mind being sent to cover another war, but would refuse another White House job offer. "I've done it. I want to go on to something else," he said.

Kennerly's wit (and perhaps his signal to end the interview) is displayed in revealing his next project: "To be a nuclear physicist."

First lady guarantees support for refugees

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — First lady Rosalynn Carter on Thursday pledged America's full support for efforts to help hundreds of thousands of starving refugees from Cambodia and Laos.

"We are filled with alarm when we contemplate the possibility that the Cambodian people are facing extinction as a result of war and famine," she told the high-powered delegation of Thai dignitaries that greeted her at the airport.

"We owe Thailand not only our admiration but also our full support," she added. "I pledge that to you here tonight."

Thai Crown Prince Vajiralongkorn, Prime Minister Kriangsak Chomanan, Defense

Minister Prem Tinsulanond and other cabinet ministers and diplomats welcomed Mrs. Carter, who arrived for a three-day visit officially labeled a "fact-finding tour."

The government mobilized thousands of troops and police to protect Mrs. Carter and her party, which includes Assistant Secretary of State Richard Holbrooke, Surgeon-General Julius B. Richmond, former U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young's wife, Jean, and former Sen. Harold Hughes of Iowa.

Prime Minister Kriangsak, in an emotion-charged welcoming statement, said the world "must act with determination, compassion and perseverance to avert the Cambodian holocaust."

Iranian students reject PLO's bid for negotiations

Protesters unfurl Iranian flag

(AP) The Iranian students holding the U.S. Embassy in Tehran rejected a bid by the Palestine Liberation Organization on Thursday to negotiate freedom for their 60 or more American hostages, Tehran radio reported.

In a grisly display of their anti-American zeal, a student protester set himself afire outside the embassy Thursday, Iran's Pars news agency said. He was later reported near death in a Tehran hospital.

The students, meanwhile, released what they said was embassy correspondence showing that U.S. officials had planned last summer to allow Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi into the United States permanently.

The rejection of the PLO mission seemed to kill one of the best hopes for ending the explosive situation quickly and peacefully.

The students said Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, supreme leader of Iran's Islamic republic, and his secretive Revolutionary Council backed them in rebuffing the two-man PLO mediation team, Tehran radio reported in a broadcast monitored in Kuwait.

They would not "open talks with anybody or accept any mediation," the students said, until the United States met their main demand - sending the exiled shah back to Iran for trial.

Talk cannot deliver Iran "from the claws of the USA," they declared.

Despite this latest blow to their efforts, diplomats around the world continued to work feverishly to try to defuse the explosive situation.

Algerian sources said that hard-line Arab country had joined in the efforts, presumably through its embassy in Tehran. The sources refused to elaborate, saying, "Secrecy is essential if the efforts are to succeed."

At U.N. headquarters in New York, a spokesman said Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim had obtained the help of Pakistan and was seeking the intercession of other Islamic and Arab countries to save lives in Tehran.

French officials said the nine-nation European Common Market was in contact with Iranian authorities.

Before the PLO mission was rebuffed, U.S. officials reported that former Attorney General Ramsey Clark, President Carter's special envoy, was meeting with a PLO representative in Istanbul.

produced, and the crowd cheered and whistled when the flags were doused with lighter fluid and set ablaze.

As the second flag burned, about a dozen marchers fought with each other as they tried to tear the flag to pieces. Those who were able to grab a remnant of the flag tied the shred to their belts or triumphantly waved them overhead as the march continued around the building. "It is scary," one woman was heard to say.

The almost all white crowd was an odd mixture of downtown business executives, blue collar workers in hard hats with American flags, and students. All vented their anger and frustration with Iranians, both here and in Iran, with equal vigor.

The youngest protesters were a pair of five-year-olds who hung from the back window of a car chanting "Down with Khomeini." Their mother said their grandmother had been in Iran up until the time of the Islamic revolution that brought Khomeini to power.

Another protestor, who said he was a UH graduate, carried a placard that read "Khomeini Sucks" on one side and "Beat Texas" on the other. "Hey, you've got to keep this whole thing in perspective," he said.

Dozens of drivers in pickup trucks, luxury cars and beat-up compact cars jammed the streets around Dresser Tower. Blowing their car horns and shouting encouragement to the marchers, they added to the audio melee of marchers' chants and cheers.

At least 10 Houston police officers were on hand to direct traffic, and there were no scenes between the officers and the drivers or protestors. Most of the drivers kept driving around the block, blowing their horns and waving to the line of marchers.

HPD Capt. W.T. Higgins said there were no forces being held in reserve in case of violence at the demonstration. Aside from the brief incident involving the woman, the march was peaceful.

COORS asks the question:

WHAT IF...?

What if our first explorers and pioneers had been subjected to an earlier version of today's sensational weekly tabloids? Imagine the effect on history if would-be settlers back east had been treated to headlines like these:

- "Killer Moths Savage Sheep Ranch."
- "See it All! Intimate Sketches of Reckless Abandon in Dodge City."
- "Psychic with Custer's Army Predicts Fame for All at Little Big Horn!"
- Reputations would live and die on the front page every week:
- "I Kissed a Man with Wooden Teeth." — Martha Washington
- "General Sherman: Pyromaniac or Poor Sport?"
- "Sitting Bull says, 'No More Mr. Nice Guy'."

What's so bad about splinters?

I see you wearing an arrow shirt.

- "500 Conestoga Wagons Recalled by Factory."
- "The Shocking Story of Why They Call Roy Bean the Hanging Judge."

With reporting like that, there might have been no gold rush. No homesteaders. No civilization west of the Rockies. No Coors Beer. After all, it took a lot of dedication for Adolph Coors to locate up in the Colorado high country just to build the future of his product on pure spring water and mountain-grown barley. Or, as one of those papers might have put it:

- "Man Climbs 5,000 Feet for a Beer."

Taste the High Country.

Horns quarterback situation is no worry to Akers

By DON BRUBAKER
Sports Writer for The Cougar

THE UNIVERSITY OF TEXAS

1977: Fred Akers, in his first year as head coach at Texas, took his undefeated and top-ranked Longhorns into Rice Stadium to face the injury-plagued, probation-troubled Houston Cougars. Texas remained unscathed by winning 35-21.

1979: Akers brings his third Longhorn team into the smaller, more unfriendly confines of the Astrodome to play a relatively healthy Cougar squad Saturday night. This time, Houston has the higher ranking.

But, any similarity between the Horns of two years ago and this year is limited to a few players. Gone are many of the stars of that juggernauts: tackle David Studdard, end Alfred Jackson, guard Rick Ingraham, defensive tackle Brad Shearer, kicker Russell Erxleben, and, oh yes, halfback Earl Campbell.

One thing is very similar about these two games: they're both for high stakes. "It's our biggest game of the season," Akers said. "They're undefeated, and we have one loss. It's very important for both of us, and it usually is."

It is so big, both UT and UH were accused of looking ahead to the game and looking past their respective opponents last week. Houston had a tough time with TCU, while the Horns had a dogfight with Texas Tech. "We played hard," Akers said, "but we didn't play particularly well. Texas Tech just played a great ball game."

In that game, Akers employed three quarterbacks in an attempt to get his offense working. That is the contrary of the "Bum Phillips-one quarterback" theory. "I don't believe that you have to stay with one quarterback," Akers said, "just as much as you would stay with one running back or one guard. There are times when all of us, whether you're a player, coach or anyone, will not have a particularly good day. If that player happens to be a quarterback, I don't think it's fair to your team to keep him in there."

Akers pulled Donnie Little from the Tech game because "he wasn't ready to play." Otherwise, Akers has no complaints about his sophomore from Dickinson. "Donnie has played very well this fall," Akers said.

"He's improved in many ways. He's improved his passing. He's gotten over the injury bug to where he can run better than he was early in the season. I think he's done quite well. I pulled him because he was highly emotional at that point. He was a little bit rattled, and I thought it would help him if we took him out of there. Thank goodness we had people we could put in three and compete."

Here's what the Coogs are saying about the Longhorns

Here are quotes from Cougar Country as UH continues preparations for Saturday's key battle with the Texas Longhorns in the Astrodome:

SPLIT END HUBERT MILLER—"We have a good shot at the national title. This game should just about tell the story. Texas has a good secondary. They play a good, tight man-on-man. We need to go out and find the wrinkles."

LEFT TACKLE ROBERT JONES—"UT plays well-disciplined football. Mc Micheal and Acker are really good. I think we can put things all together on Saturday. Their defensive backs have a lot of speed. Churchman, Hatchett and Johnnie Johnson look like world-class sprinters."

SPECIAL TEAM LEADER DINKY EDWARDS—"Our special units must play well against Texas. We broke down some against TCU, but Coach Elam (special team coach Jim Elam) will have us ready to go. He does a real good job. The special teams will play a crucial part in the contest. This is what college ball is all about. We'll be ready. We're at home and we always seem to play well in the Dome."

PLACEMENTS HOLDER
FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 9, 1979

MARK JERMSTAD—"I really can't give an edge to either school as far as PATs and field goals go. Texas is always good in that department, and I feel we are much improved over last year. If it comes down to a field goal or PAT, we'll just have to go out and do it. We have had some close ones this year. We should be prepared."

PUNTER MARK FORD—"If Johnnie Johnson gets loose, I'll be in trouble. I don't want to make any saving tackles. Texas has real good return units. Our punt coverage this year has been really great. It will be a classic contest."

CENTER RANDY SWISHER—"It won't be fun blocking on those tackles. We feel like we did a good job against the Baylor 4-3. The key is going to be how well we block Mc Michael, Acker and Shankle. Our concentration last week against TCU was not that good. This week, we have to be ready."

RIGHT GUARD DENNIS GREENAWALT—"I feel that this game, by far is the biggest game in UH football history. So much is at stake. Scott Huntington (UT deep snapper) and I are close friends. We lifted weights together this summer.

Texas has two great defensive tackles who have had a great amount of publicity. Believe me, it is not unjustified. They are just super players."

RIGHT TACKLE MELVIN JONES—"Being in the position we are in, this is a very crucial contest. If we lose, everything we've worked for goes down the drain. We'll be ready to play."

TIGHT END GARRETT JURGAJTIS—"This is the biggest one of the year. They have big, strong people on defense. We have to be sharp offensively to accomplish what we need to. Texas has a better team than they had last year, but so do we. They have a really fine secondary—the best we'll see all year. Texas is loaded defensively with strength, speed and experience. It will be a darn good game."

UH-UT rivalry

Past games close

The series record stands at 2-2-1. Texas is actually 1-0 in Houston having won over UH in 1977 at the Coogs home away from home, Rice Stadium. In that game, Earl Campbell put on a one-man show in the second half to help the Horns overcome an early 7-0 deficit.

Yet in 1976, the Cougars blanked the Horns and gave then coach Darrel Royal his worst personal defeat. The Cougars so dominated the offensive and defensive categories that Texas was held to its lowest offensive output ever.

In 1968, the Cougars and Horns opened the season that marked the establishment of the famed Texas Wishbone. With All-America's Paul Gibson in the backfield for Houston, and Chris Gilbert (Houston-Spring Branch) in the Texas backfield, both teams traded touchdowns in the see-saw contest. Both Gibson and Gilbert rushed for over 100-yards each. Gibson was caught on a key fourth down-and-one deep in Texas territory to preserve the tie.

Yet not until 1976 when the Coogs played their first conference game was Houston actually playing for something other than pride.

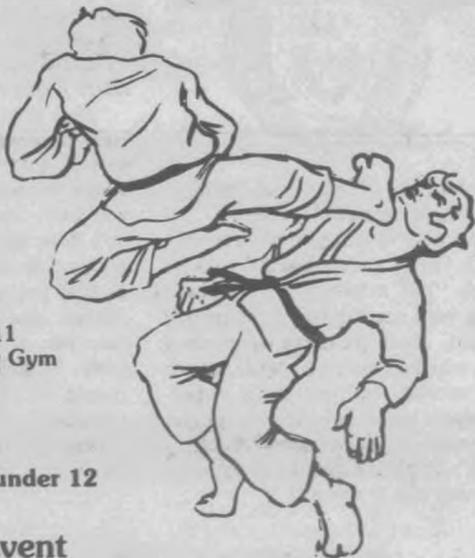

Last year was an important event for Houston's respectability as the Coogs beat a Texas team that went 9-3 including a Sun Bowl thrashing of Maryland.

In front of the largest ever Memorial Stadium crowd in Austin (83,050), the Cougars not only beat the Horns 10-7, they clinched a Cotton Bowl berth for the second time in three years. The Cougars clinched the win with a time-consuming six-minute drive in the fourth quarter after the Longhorns had pulled within a field goal of Houston.

QB Danny Davis took the Coogs to two third quarter scoring drives after a scoreless first half. Kenny Hatfield's 33-yard field goal was the game winner.

The rubber match of the even series comes tomorrow night in the Astrodome as the Coogs and Longhorns meet for the sixth time.

LOOK: IT'S NATIONAL LAMPOON'S NOVEMBER LOVE ISSUE

This issue of National Lampoon contains some pretty spicy material. Some people unused to such spicy humor had to drink glass after glass of water while reading the love issue.

You can learn a lot about all kinds of love from the November issue. If you're really ignorant, you can learn one hell of a lot.

But don't take our word for it. Pick up a copy at your bookstore or newsstand today. And if you get some kind of a disease, don't blame us. You picked up the magazine. It's your fault.

Hosea Taylor: Confidence is his game for UH

By DEBBIE KELLEY
Sports Writer for The Cougar

A win against the Longhorns is like finding a pot of gold at the end of a rainbow.

It's an important task for Houston to maintain its standing in the conference coming down the home stretch. With an attitude like that of defensive tackle Hosea Taylor, the homestretch for the Cougars will end up at the Cotton Bowl.

The 6-foot-5, 270-pound defensive tackle has taken his life step-by-step, which he has proved by stepping on the grounds of UH.

"One day I had a dream that I was playing for Houston and wearing number 77," said Taylor, who wears number 90. "I was doing well. To me a dream, more than anything, is the dream that will come true."

So far, Taylor is right. This is his third season with the Cougars. The unique thing is, he was recruited his sophomore year in high school when he received a letter from the Cougars.

During high school Taylor was a four-sport letterman participating in baseball, basketball, football and throwing the discus and putting the shot in track, where he set a national record. But football was chosen to be the sport in which he would excel.

A certain aspect of football Taylor enjoys is the aggressiveness and the making of a big play. "Not everyone can play football," said Taylor, "it's like a challenge. It's a hard sport to excel in."

He has played football since the sixth grade but says, "I really didn't get interested in football until my sophomore year in high school when my coach emphasized the potential I had and what I could do if I put my mind to it."

Taylor was one of the biggest players on his high school team at 6-foot-3, 220-pounds.

Taylor feels good about being rated fourth in the national polls. He also wants the Cougars to be number one before the season ends. "I've got this good feeling again like when I was playing high school football," said Taylor. "When you're winning, everything else takes care of itself."

His greatest achievement was when he was voted the National Collegiate Top Defensive Player by Parade magazine. In Taylor's other efforts with the Coogs, he received "Mad Dog" honors at the Memphis State, Texas A&M and Texas games along with the Associated Press National Defensive Player of the Week after the UH win over the Aggies last season.

This is the second time the conference race has come down to the Cougars and Longhorns. The last time Houston won by a field goal, 10-7. "I thought we let them off," Taylor said, thinking back on that game. "We didn't play up to our potential."

The Texas game this week is one conference game Taylor has longed for as he reads over the Longhorn offensive linemen and notes how he will pursue to the ball in controlling the line of scrimmage.

"This is probably the biggest game in UH's history," said Taylor. "It is definitely going to be a physical game and the turnout will be a question of which team wants it more. But, the best team will win."

Akers plans to use three QB's against potent Cougar defense

Garland. "he has been a surprise," Akers said. "A pleasant surprise, I might add. We felt that he was capable of doing great things, and he is."

If the speedy Walls has one weakness, it's his passing. That's why Rick McIvor, another freshman from Fort Stockton, got an opportunity to play against the Red Raiders.

There is some question who will be starting behind Little. "A.J. (Jam) Jones will be ready to play against Houston," Akers said. "He has a hurt shoulder, but it's something he's been playing with the last three weeks. He'll likely start with either Leroy King or Brad Beck. Brad is doing very well, and I'd say he's a little ahead."

Everyone else, however, does not have a Steve McMichael. Big no. 99 from the little town of Freer is once again the anchor of a tough defensive front. "He's played very well," Akers said. "Just extremely well all year. You can count on good performances from Steve. He enjoys the game, and is awfully consistent in his effort."

If you do that at the start of the season," Akers said, "you're far too premature. We have several big games, and we try to approach it week by week. The success that Houston has had, and the success we've had make it a top game. But, you can't predict those things."

"All I know is this. When Texas and Houston get together, it's a well-played football game between two fine football teams. And, it's highly competitive."

Delrick Brown on SI's cover

Sports Illustrated's cover issue will feature Houston's Delrick Brown, Alabama's Steadman Shealy, Nebraska's Jarvis Redwine, Ohio State's Art Schuster, and Florida State's Jimmy Jordan with the caption "Who's really No. 1?"

The story entitled "There's a Red Alert" notes that the six football teams, including USC, can lay claim to No. 1 and they all have two common traits. They are all unbeaten and they all wear red.

Texas the slim pick

The fans are ready, the players are ready, and the tickets are long sold. Will the Texas tower burn orange late Saturday night. Or will many of the Cougar seniors make their third visit to Dallas in four years on New Years Day. Hopefully to face the unbeaten Alabama Crimson Tide. Everything hinges on who wins the game tomorrow evening in the Astrodome. Texas will have approximately half of the seats in the stadium, so Cougar fans, come to cheer.

For the Season I stand 17-5 with my picks going 4-0 last week.

Let's take a look into the crystal ball for this week's SWC games!

Texas at Houston. Houston has a chance at a national championship, unbeaten season, and a return trip to the Cotton bowl, a fete many teams never have the chance to do.

The Longhorns undoubtedly have one the hardest hitting defensive units in the country. The Cougars do also. It might come down to the battle of minds, or maybe even toes as former Houston Spring Woods kicker John Goodson, or Kenny Hatfield of LaGrange, might decide the contest.

Yet the Horns must win the opportunity and avenge their loss last year which knocked them out of title contention. They will be playing in front on just as many Texas—alumni than UH.

Look for Texas to upset the Coogs by 7, especially if the Texas quarterbacks, who ever it is, is allowed passing time and outside running room.

Baylor at Arkansas: Tough one to pick since both teams have bowl possibilities. Arkansas always tough at home. Baylor had two weeks to prepare. Razorbacks by 3.

SMU at Wichita State: A weird matchup this late in the season, but Ponies should handle the Shockers by 14.

TCU at Texas Tech: If TCU's offense was up to their defense, they might be challenging for the Cotton Bowl. Look for Tech to bounce back from their Texas defeat. Tech by 7.

Texas A & M and Rice are idle.

Robert Jones (66) ready to pounce on a fumble

Robert Jones keeps faith

By BRENDA ALVARADO
Sports Writer for The Cougar

Some people would call total self confidence a form of "positive thinking," but offensive tackle, Robert Jones prefers to call it faith. It is a faith in himself, his teammates and the belief that dedication and effort will bring the Cougars victory. "I depend on my faith. At times when you're tired and you can't get your breath back, you think of faith," said Jones.

This faith will be put to the test Saturday when Houston and the University of Texas meet head-on in the Astrodome. Offensive coach Billy Willingham is confident that his team will play well since they'll be going up against the toughest defense they have faced this year. "The Longhorns have one of the finest defenses in the country," said Willingham.

Jones standing at 6'3 (255 pounds) will be facing linebacker Robert Sendlein at 6'4 (225 pounds), and will occasionally step over Ron Bones who plays defensive end. The area Jones will be playing is the same as last year, but Willingham won't be satisfied unless Robert and the team pull together. "We're going to run our basic attack," commented Willingham. "It's going to be hard; our guys will have to block hard like they have done all year in order to win."

Willingham was impressed with Jones when he joined the Cougar football team. "Jones came from a good high school program and was well grounded in fundamentals when he got here," said Willingham. "He is getting better all the time and has really matured with experience."

Jones began playing football in the seventh grade and wanted to attend UH. "I figured there would be a good chance of starting if I came here," said Jones.

As far as the muscle-bound Jones is concerned, he feels that he has always been on the winning team. "I like being able to do something and know that I'm good at it," he said.

Jones and Willingham have a "fair" player-coach relationship. Jones described the coach as being the best offensive line coach in the nation. "He's not going to let you get beat, he comes up with the scheme that will put you on top," said Jones.

Jones has several goals in life. He would like to live comfortably and hopefully play professional football. His ultimate goal is to be happy in life and be one with God.

It is this one-on-one faith that will be observed when the Longhorns meet the Coogs. "I think we're going to do real good, the talent is there and the emotion is good. We have something to prove at the UT game. Once again let UT know that they're not the only ones capable of being winners," said Jones.

'Red' Oglesby gets no respect

By DON BRUBAKER
Sports Writer for The Cougar

The Texas Longhorns are known throughout the country, thanks to their numerous appearances on national TV. The Houston Cougars aren't as well known, and are still fighting their Rodney Dangerfield "I don't get no respect" complex.

Robert Oglesby understands that position. As the noseguard in the UH 5-2 defensive alignment, Oglesby is situated between two massive tackles, Hosea Taylor (6-5, 270) and Leonard Mitchell (6-7, 270). At 5-foot-11 and 230-pounds, the man they call 'Red' doesn't even come close in size.

Oglesby just goes about his work in a business-like fashion, without the fanfare that is being heaped on the two tackles. Which sometimes make Cougar fans wonder if the fifth-year senior is really playing well, just because his name is not often seen in the newspapers.

"Sometimes, I feel that I don't get my just reward," Oglesby said. "But, Leonard and Hosea are doing a real good job. They hustle, and they're good pass rushers. In certain situations, they'll go one-on-one, which leaves the noseguard in a position to be double-teamed."

Double-teaming is known as the ultimate compliment in football. "On certain plays, they have to double-team," Oglesby said. "On the pass rush, offenses will try to set me up with the center and then bring the guard down and hit me low."

"Even on running plays, they will try to double-team me, too. I'm getting more double-teams this year than I ever have. I really don't know, I guess people are trying to take me more inside."

Oglesby's name can be found near the top in team tackles, but not in quarterback sacks. "I have certain responsibilities," 'Red' said. "I have to take the draw, watch for the screen, etc. Because of that, I sit back more, instead of rushing the passer."

Missing the 1977 season was a good thing, 'Red' feels. "I was hurt that season," Oglesby said, "and my leg didn't get well until the end of the season. So I red-shirted and I'm really glad I did. I lifted weights a lot because I couldn't run much with the bad leg."

The Fort Worth native was the season-long starter at noseguard for the 1976 Southwest Conference champs. After missing 1977, he had to earn his first-team position back from Harry Wright.

How about Texas? Johnny 'Lam' Jones is a definite deep threat, but Donnie Little is not known for his arm. "I really feel, though, that they're going to throw on us," Oglesby said. "We have to stop their running game, and then they'll have to pass. The pass rush then can try and force an interception."

"Even the coaches in the UPI poll don't respect us enough. Every game, we have to prove ourselves to keep our ranking. If we lose, we might just drop out of the polls."

Robert Oglesby personally understands the feeling. "I used to feel slighted because of all the attention Hosea and Leonard were getting," Oglesby said, "but not now. I have learned to accept that. They play well, and I play well, too."

Pre-game party planned for UH-UT fans at Rodeo bar

KPRC-TV Sports Director, Bill Worrell, will host a gigantic pre-game party before the University of Houston vs. University of Texas football game Saturday, from 12 noon to 6 p.m. at Rodeo, a country-western disco located at the corner of Westheimer and Hillcroft.

The Cougar Brass and the Longhorn Band will be on hand, along with cheerleaders and ex-players from both schools, to cheer on their respective teams.

TV personalities, pro celebrities and other special guests will also join the celebration prior to the Big Game.

A free buffet will be served from 12 noon to 2 p.m., and a cash bar will be open beginning at noon.

Open to the public, fans are encouraged to wear their school colors.

Free beer, food offered at pep rally

UH cheerleaders and the Interfraternity Council will stage the First Annual Bevo Bar-B-Q and Pep Rally today as a prelude to the Cougar-Longhorn game in the Astrodome tomorrow.

The party is the culmination of the "Eat-em-up-Cougars-Bevo-Bar-B-Q-and-Spirit-Week." The Barbecue and beer will be free.

According to Susan Fairweather, coordinator of the event, it is intended to capitalize on the growing rivalry between UH and UT. Tomorrow night's game will almost certainly have a bearing on the Southwest Conference championship race.

A 780 lb. steer has been privately donated and will be prepared and served by the Sigma Chi Fraternity. Free beer has been donated by Budweiser.

Local television stations, including Channel 13's Live-at-Five, will cover the rally, Fairweather said.

"I'm sure it will be a success," she said. "Everything is free and everyone is excited about it."

The event will begin at 3:30 p.m. in Little Robertson Stadium (the soccer field), Fairweather said.

Greeks, AKA 'stomp' together

Greeks representing several campuses around the state will compete in the Alpha Kappa Alpha sorority "stomp competition" tonight in Agnes Arnold Auditorium II at 7.

A stomp competition is a term loosely applied to a specific type of talent show involving dancing without music among other things, said Angel Upshaw, Alpha Kappa Alpha representative.

Sorority and fraternity groups from North Texas State, Texas Southern, UH, Lamar, Prairie View A&M and East Texas State will be judged on group coordination, humor, perfection of performance and dress.

Admission is free to the stomp competition and $1.50 will be charged for the disco dance in the UC Houston Room afterward.

Comedy to open in Wortham

"Merton of the Movies," written by George S. Kaufman and Marc Connelly, giants of the American theater, will open at 8:30 p.m. Friday in Wortham Theater.

The play will also play Nov. 10, 16, 17 and 18. Curtain is at 8:30 each performance.

Kaufman and Connelly were two of America's greatest wits. Their impact on American humor, theater and taste is difficult to calculate.

The play is reminiscent of all the images of famous screen heroes and heroines from the days of the silent movies. The satire is fast and furious in this comedy about the days of actors and actresses of the roaring '20s.

The play concerns a young, innocent boy, Merton Gill, from the Midwest, whose desire is to be a famous star. He ventures into the phony world of Hollywood. His dilemma is to go with flow of phoniness or remain true to his Midwestern origins.

Greg Baldwin plays Merton Gill and Richard Morgan, a professional actor from the Alley

Pam Donahue and Greg Baldwin

Theatre, plays the director.

The play is one of the most difficult technical productions that has been staged at UH in several years, and work was still active on sets late Thursday afternoon.

According to Dr. Pickett of the drama department, the play has been undergoing a revival throughout repertory theaters across the U.S.

John Atkinson

They just had to be there

I never knew what Joni Mitchell meant in "Free Man in Paris" until I, too, walked down the Champs Elysee last summer.

Didn't know a soul, had nothing pressing to do there, didn't have to pump one out for this or any other paper. It was great.

Great. Beautiful. The Seine. Montmartre. The Louvre. It was all still there just like I sort of maybe figured it would be. Ah, yes, Notre Dame, Parc Vendome, McDonald's.

McDonald's! How in the hell did that get in here. Better question, how in the hell did it get on the Champs Elysee. Well, one can still get a fix of that stuff on the Champs Elysee or, all over London where the native hamburger joints, Wimpy, compete with American chains for the bucks.

My fellow traveller and I had been to see a new Tom Stoppard play somewhere off the Strand (London), I believe. A fine little number called "Night and Day," all about what slimeballs newspapermen are. Maggie Smith (Prime of Miss Jean Brodie," "California Suite" etc.) played lead, delivering the snottiest of quips to the hapless Patrick Mower, a clot of a newsman for a London daily.

Quite a stunning evening of theater, and we were famished on leaving (you've got to get into the mood of London, and syntax and usage are about the only way if one is in Houston) but we were short. Of funds, that is. Only about enough to ride the tube out of town and get a snack.

Down from the Phoenix (the theater) was a typical London steak house in which a person can get fleeced at about the same rate as in one of the franchise jobs around here. Nix. That left, open anyway, only one alternative in the vicinity of the tube station. That alternative, deep in the heart of this sprawling, exciting city, this ancient and historic monument to man's civilization — Colonel Sanders Kentucky Fried Chicken.

I believe that it takes a big man to admit that he ate a most ill-prepared chicken dinner (there must have been Comet in the gravy) in fabulous London, which, well, let's just say that if the Colonel had eaten (and I have it from a reliable source that he doesn't touch the stuff) it he probably would have thrown up or worse.

It's a riot watching staid, civilized Londoners in bowlers quaffing a chocolate shake and choking down a Whopper, but they seemed to flock to the fast-food places. In Paris, after a late film, the McDonald's across the street was literally stuffed with Parisians demanding hot apple turnovers and all the rest.

It seems strange that the sophisticated French who would just as soon blow their noses on your face could take to the fast food stuff. I would think it would be a matter of pride to avoid the stuff, much like they avoid Americans. As for myself, quite thankfully, I can walk into McDonald's and think of Paris. Sort of.

All that jazz

The Houston Jazz Festival rolls into Rockefeller's tonight. Pictured is sax great Sonny Rollins who will play at 8:30 and 10:30 p.m. Sunday evening. The Persuasions open with shows at 8:30 and 10:30 Friday and Saturday. Also coming on Nov. 17 is saxophonist Phil Woods. There will be a full slate of local jazz artists throughout the next week. Rockefeller's is located at 3620 Washington Avenue.

UH athletic events to receive spotlight in new magazine

By FRIEDA BEATY
Staff Writer for The Cougar

cheerleaders, the band, and anything that has to do with athletics.

There will be 30 publications in all, consisting of ten monthly magazines and 20 weekly newsletters. The magazine will be sold by subscription only for $25 per year. "We will be mailing out subscription brochures to UH alumni, and handing out the brochures at the remaining football games, excluding the UH-Texas game," Nance said, "We will also distribute the brochures at some of the basketball games."

Nance said LeDuc also publishes the same type of magazine for Texas A&M and Texas Tech in the Southwest Conference, and for Michigan, Nebraska, Penn State, Florida, Alabama and practically all the top rated schools in college football.

The magazine will be the official publication of the UH Athletic Department and is fully endorsed by the university.

Nance said the publication will be published in Houston and will probably use material from student writers and photographers at UH. "This will depend on the editor that is hired," he said.

An official publication of the UH athletic department, featuring stories on all athletics, will be published beginning in February.

The magazine, entitled "Go Cougars, Houston Sports" is a 36 page slick magazine with a four-color cover and several four-color feature pictures inside. The magazine will have a lot of action photos, according to Ted Nance, of LeDuc Enterprises, Inc., publisher of the magazine. Nance is the former UH Sports News Director.

"The magazine is entirely about UH Cougar athletics, both men's and women's," Nance said. "The purpose is to provide readers with an inside look at Cougar sports. It will consist of human interest stories about the players, coaches, and UH recruiting," he said.

"We are really going to get into human interest stories in order to let the readers know about the feelings, emotions and goals of the players," Nance said, "I think it is something the fans will really enjoy."

Nance said the magazine will include stories on the

Cougar photo contest extended to include UH-UT game

Due to many requests, we have postponed the deadline for The Daily Cougar's football photo contest, with $100 gift certificate grand prize! But photographers will still have to hurry — the new deadline is noon, Thursday, Nov. 15.

This competition is open to all UH students, faculty and staff to promote the No. 4 ranked Cougars as they make a run at their third Cotton Bowl berth in four years. Winning entries will be published, with photo credits, in the Nov. 16 edition of the Cougar. Prizes will be awarded in the following three categories:

Best Action Shot — Considered for the best representation of football action; photo may be from any game or practice; caption must be provided by the contestant but the Cougar retains the right to provide its own.

Best Unusual Crowd Shot — Must not be posed, but of a candid nature; considered on merits of unusual interest as depictions of fans at the Astrodome or other game site before, during or immediately after game; caption must be provided with all people identified if possible.

Best Overall — This may be an entry from either of the above categories, or submitted as an independent entry related to the above categories; photo must be accompanied by caption.

Prizes for Best Unusual Crowd and Best Action include a $50 gift package from Boots Camera, courtesy of Jim Boots. That package consists of a Coast SLR hard-shell carrying case and lens care kit. Southside Camera is providing the other prize, a "mystery prize package" valued at over $50. Other prizes include autographed UH team jerseys.
