Iranian students march on consulate

by ron foster

About 500 Iranians and sympathizers marched and chanted in front of the Iranian Consulate in downtown Houston yesterday after walking there from UH.

An unknown Iranian using an electric bullhorn bellowed verses from a parked car while a large chorus carried the refrain, "Shah is a murderer, down with the Shah. Shah is a U.S. puppet, down with the Shah."

Coupled with shouts of "Down with the Shah," was heard the accompanying demand "Down with U.S. imperialism."

A spokesman for the group said most of the demonstrators were protesting the Shah's reaction to a huge demonstration in Iran's capital city, Tehran, on September 8 in which troops fired into a crowd, killing a reported 250 civilians.

One Iranian student said, "We have heard from relatives in Tehran who said they went to the top of their roofs during the uprising and could see smoke all over the city. We believe it was a mass demonstration involving close to a million demonstrators and we also believe that many more than 250 were killed."

The Iranian students also expressed dismay at a news story that appeared in The Los Angeles Times last month which said that 100,000 U.S. troops are being trained for possible intervention in the Persian gulf.

Many Iranians said they are reluctant to speak openly with Americans individually or to be photographed for fear their identities may be found out by SAVAK, the Iranian secret police. There is always the fear that the Shah may retaliate against their families.

"We heard from relatives in Tehran who went to their rooftops during the uprising. They could see smoke all over the city."

anonymous Iranian student

The Iranians expressed a belief that the trouble in Iran really started with American intervention in a coup de tat in 1953. They say the coup was American CIA engineered and came about indirectly as a result of the red scare associated with the McCarthy era.

A leaflet passed out by the students complained vehemently of the use by the Shah's troops of American made M-16 rifles to quell the September 8 demonstration. The leaflet also mentioned a report which appeared in The Washington Post this month that the Shah had brought in Israeli troops to put down demonstrations because he "could no longer count on his own army."

The Shah himself apparently feels he can contain the uprising, however, and has recently been reported to boast, "Nobody can overthrow me. I have the support of 700,000 troops, all the workers and most of the people...I have the power."

The report in The Los Angeles Times said many well-informed Iranians in Washington, others in Iran and a number of Americans familiar with the internal situation there think the Shah may just be thinking wishfully. If he is wrong, the report said, and an uprising should prove too much for his 700,000 troops, there is a possibility that U.S. troops may be sent to Iran to keep him in power. President Carter has recently been heard to speak of "quickly deployable forces--air, land and sea," available for this and other contingencies.

In the wake of Carter's call for "basic human rights for people of all nations," the Shah has been accused of a long assortment of human abuses. Among them are torture, imprisonment without benefit of trial or counsel, declaration of martial law in most major cities and, most recently, ordering troops to fire into crowds of civilians.

Morbid curiosity draws students to show

In a scene reminiscent of Ingmar Bergman's "The Seventh Seal," the UH campus was invaded Monday by a group from the UH chapter of Campus Crusade for Christ, dressed in black robes and white face, complete with a mock coffin.

The students took to the bizarre costumes to promote the showing of their multi media production, "If I Should Die. . ." The 45-minute film and light show will feature music by Bloodrock, Black Sabbath and other rock greats.

According to the religious organization, "If I Should Die. . ." portrays "a love relationship between a guy and a girl whose lives are irreparably altered as they are propelled into sudden disaster."

The film has appeared on college campuses throughout the United States. The UH screenings will be at 11:30 a.m. and 1 p.m. today and noon and 1 p.m. Wednesday in Ezekiel Cullen Auditorium.

consumer alert — by john hill

Joggers — taken for a ride?

AUSTIN—If you haven't at least thought about taking up jogging to get in, or stay in, shape, you are one of the few Americans who hasn't. A recent Gallup poll revealed that more than 18 million people nationwide are actively engaged in jogging.

Many sporting goods and department stores are capitalizing on this popularity by offering various specialized kinds of jogging equipment and attire.

Much of this may be useful or desirable to the dedicated jogger, but our Consumer Protection Division attorneys say beginners who purchase such gear are putting the cart before the horse. First and foremost, before any such activity, it makes good sense to get a medical check-up to find out if you are in good enough shape to start getting in shape.

Next, novices should determine if jogging is an activity they enjoy before making an investment in often-expensive special gear. Experts say the only requisite is a properly fitted pair of shoes for jogging. You can put off buying even these for a couple of weeks, though, in order to see if jogging is for you.

Reports have reached our office of high-pressure sales tactics aimed at convincing the beginning jogger that a designer warm-up suit, which can cost close to $100, a "signature" sweat band, or similar items are needed.

Some sales persons have pushed intricate pedometers for measuring miles covered, stop watches to time speed sprints, or costly stationary exercise bicycles for preliminary warm-ups before jogging. Others may press the unwary to buy a "jogging treadmill" to get exercise indoors when the weather is bad.

Our attorneys suggest that you resist any such pressure until you have jogged long enough to know your own needs. After you have decided that you are likely to stick with a jogging program, invest in proper shoes and buy them at a reputable store where trained sales personnel can assist you with fit, which is critical, and with selection. Your choice should be based on what you intend to use the shoe for and on what surfaces you expect to use it. If you are a serious runner planning to compete in track events, you will need a different and more specialized shoe than a person who jogs a little, walks the dog a little, and strolls a little on a variety of surfaces.

After you buy a sport shoe, you will probably begin thinking about special clothes. There is a bewildering array of gear endorsed by sports stars, and it is difficult for the beginner to know what is needed. You should remember that the basic items are really only loose, comfortable clothes—for many persons that means shorts, T-shirt, and socks. Others add absorbent headbands, sweat suits, warm-up suits, visored caps, and so on.

If you decide to invest in clothing, check the fabric's fiber content and care instructions. All clothes are required by law to have such labels. Some consumers who have bought expensive items in fashion colors found later when they washed them that they shrank and faded.

If you have a consumer complaint about unscrupulous sales tactics or misrepresentations, contact our Consumer Protection Division in Austin, Houston, Dallas, San Antonio, El Paso, Lubbock, or McAllen. Outside those areas, call this toll-free number: 1-800-252-9236.

Nuclear power is a dying issue

To the Editor:

Nuclear power will soon be obsolete. Except in isolated cases, alternatives will economically replace it. The fools that are protesting new plants will claim that they have killed nuclear power. But nuclear power would have died anyway.

Why do these protestors kick a dying creature in its last years? Ask them, they know. Also ask them when they will call on God, to have Him replace the one out of every 1,000 violently radioactive postassium atoms that are happily shooting holes in our bodies.

another opinion — by burt purvis

Sudden deaths bring life to light

Over the past six weeks I have been continually bombarded with the prospects of death. One of my closest friends was killed in an automobile accident. My boss was incarcerated in one of those institutions of higher malpractice and told he had cancer. One of the fine folks that shares the work around my office received one of those highly impersonal, almost intelligible electric communications that told of the death of her grandfather. Sprinkled in between these experiences has been the deaths of the Pope, our letter carrier and our own professor, Dr. McCary.

My mother raised one son that is a little crazy, but he is not completely out of his tree. I believe the Father is trying to teach us something about life. This has been worse than a whole week of overexposure to the idiot box and it has brought the reality of death very close to me. Perhaps in a brief few moments I can bring into focus my thoughts about the fact.

Death is a reality of life. It is the price we pay for the entrance into this world. The difficult part about it arises from the fact that we never know when, or how, or where. In the course of these last six weeks, I have caught myself reading the obituaries. . . No, I'm not completely crazy, just more aware.

Each article speaks of the finality of that personality. It did not matter if the reporter wrote concerning an elder woman or young child. Whatever they were, they are no more. After the death of Howard Hughes, we were reminded that it does not matter who we are, how rich we are, or how much power we have; we all must die and leave the rewards of the earth behind.

As I stood in the church only four weeks ago and observed the body of a great friend, I learned something about our response to death. First, his life and death caused me to be very aware of his influences on my life. I've evaluated my life in light of his. It was very easy to see where I needed to change and improve. His example was a clear illustration of the kind of life I wanted to live.

Secondly, I realized that our personal relationship would now live in my memory. And I was very grateful for the privilege of those memories. They would not have been possible if we had not shared the very small details of our lives. Finally, the important part of death is the life that has gone before. Personal relationships and the time spent with people and their needs melt two lives into a meaningful existence. When we get into such a schedule that we are too busy to help the people around us, we are too busy, and we are adding meaninglessness to our own existence.

Somehow in the Great American Dream, we have concluded that death can, will or has happened to someone else, but. . . "It will never happen to me." We drive like it, party like it, act like it, and yet, the fact continues. . . and death comes even to us.

We find ourselves staggering onto the freeway wondering what the day holds before us. We are caught up in the traffic and our minds are struggling with each tense moment as we travel. The prospects of the morning classes fill our anticipations. Halfway through each class we are already racing to the next hour of intellectual exercise. At noon we gallop to the car and once again we jockey our steed through the steeple-chase of Houston freeways to the place of our occupation (not vocation).

In the moment of release we are on our way again with the many things we convince ourselves are important. When we finally find ourselves once again in the place we call home, we wonder why we were in such a hurry. A popular song of several years ago keeps running through my mind: "If that's all there is my friend, Then let's keep dancing. . . Break out the booze and have a ball. . . If that's all there is."

But there is more to life. . . and you must find it in the lives of people around you. If I should die today, I want to have invested my life wisely and in meaningful personal relationships. This is my opinion and it is just. . . another opinion.

Coalition attempts to educate UH

by janet wells

Amid opposition to their cause, some 40 UH students met last week to organize the UH Coalition Against University Investments in South Africa. Their efforts resulted in a press conference on Monday.

Both the organizational meeting and the press conference were to educate the UH community on the practice of apartheid in South Africa and to allow the founding members of the coalition to express their outrage at the beginning of the trial of 11 student dissidents which also began on Monday.

Yvonne Williams, founder of the coalition, said she was pleased with the response so far, but acknowledged that the coalition had "a lot of work to do before we can go before the Board of Regents again."

The coalition, which was formed late last spring, went before the board in April, demanding that the regents take some action on the matter. Due to the Harwell scandal, the board tabled the matter until some later date.

Tom Tyler, a member of the Young Americans for Freedom (YAF), said his group objected to the stance the coalition was taking and that they felt the coalition's methods were designed to be confrontation-type tactics to force the board to act. "There are a lot of members of the coalition who would like to see the economy of South Africa collapse. And, they intend to force the issue on this campus," Tyler said.

Tyler continued that, while his group was in fact supportive of the plight of the blacks in South Africa, they did not feel that stock divestment was the answer to their problems. "There is no link, direct or indirect, between money invested by UH in these companies, and apartheid in South Africa," he said.

YAF members stated that there was a direct link, though, between the jobs of black workers in South Africa and the continued efforts of such companies as General Motors, Ford, IBM and General Electric.

Larry Gonzalez, student representative to the board, indicated at the meeting that Chancellor Barry Munitz had pledged to support their efforts before the board.

Munitz said that he had not said he would support the coalition's efforts. "I would like to work with them to get this matter clarified, but I never said that I would back them. I really haven't made a decision as to what my position on the matter would be,"

Munitz said.

Munitz also said that he would like to organize a committee made up of regents, students, and faculty to discuss the alternatives and to make a recommendation to the full board of regents. "I'm strongly in support of getting this clarified, and maybe Larry misunderstood my meaning," Munitz said.

Regent Benjamin Woodson, a new appointment to the board and a suggested member for an Ad Hoc committee, said that he would have to study the matter further.

"Quite possibly, it (divestment) would be economically disadvantageous. Perhaps the social aims might overbalance the economic considerations, but I think, right now, that the divestment of funds would serve to hurt the university's financial position, he said.

An investment counselor for the firm of Merrill, Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith, who asked to remain anonymous, said that the impact of such an action is a wide open question. "If a lot of shares of stock are outstanding, then there might not be a very great effect. On the other hand, if the company is relatively small, the effect could be very traumatic," he said. "It depends on a case-by-case investigation. On very short notice, it could be very damaging to the university or to any large investor."

Munitz said he did not feel that the sale of stock would serve to lessen the services given to students. The money comes from an endowment fund that is managed by the investment committee of the board of regents and an outside expert.

"One important thing to think about," Munitz said, "is that we must be sure that whatever action we take, it is legal." Munitz cited the case of an Indiana university that acted on the matter of divestment. A dissenting board member asked for a clarification of the law by the attorney general and the attorney general ruled the action to be illegal.

Coalition leaders contend that the most important consideration is a moral one. "These injustices are social as well as criminal. This kind of social treatment cannot be tolerated," Ayo Martins, vice president of the Black Student Union, said. He contradicted Tyler's statement that the country would become communistic if the blacks were given their freedom. "I don't know of any country in South Africa that has gone communistic only because they have been given their freedom. They are being given aid by Russia, because the U.S. will not give it," he said.

Hearing postponed

A public hearing investigating short-term investment problems at UH was postponed Monday, apparently to give the university time to make public the amount of a bookkeeping adjustment.

State Rep. Frank Hartung, chairman of the House of Representatives Cash Management Committee, said he had been assured the adjustment necessary in balancing the university's books, would be available for public disclosure. The hearing was postponed approximately two weeks.

Hartung also said, "In addition, this delay will provide time to ensure that the hearings held by this committee will not prejudice the law enforcement efforts of the various agencies involved in this matter."

These agencies are investigating the activities of former UH financial analyst Samuel Harwell and his half-brother, Patrick Sullivan.

Harwell and Sullivan have pleaded guilty in federal court to charges of fraud that grew from their handling of UH short-term investment money.

Hartung said he would recommend legislation at the next session of the legislature that would prevent financial situations such as the one at UH.

Egotism: a part of the sporting life

Ego gratification runs rampant in sports, as well as the rest of society. Everybody strives for it to some degree. I know I do in my job. Some folks have it from the start, due to ability, or through their own perseverance. ABC Sports' Frank Gifford requires less of it than one might think. When here in town to open the Touchdown Club's schedule of meetings, the man in the middle between Howard Cosell and Don Meredith showed his traditional low-profile. That's characteristic of his work Monday Night Football, as part of the renowned triumvirate.

"It takes a subordination of your own ego, in many respects," figured Gifford. "I think I qualify for that because I happen to like what I'm doing. I've had all the adulation, if you will, growing up really in the limelight because of my football."

Making the switch from the gridiron to the broadcast booth is often a chore for the ex-athlete, comparable to a quarterback being blind-sided on a blitz on third-and-long. Frank Gifford has taken his licks since joining ABC in 1971, but he's known what to expect.

"It took three or four years to really gain the confidence that it takes to be there," he said, "and to relax, go in, and thoroughly enjoy the job you're doing. I'm one who feels that you have to enjoy what you're doing, in order for the people who are watching you to enjoy it."

No doubt that people get off to it. Monday nights find Americans parked in front of television sets for weekly doses of what Gifford termed, "a variety show." Even to a guy who faced the likes of Alex Karras and Gino Marchetti in his 12-year pro career, the impact of this telecast is frightening.

View from Level Five

dave barrett guest columnist

"I say frightening, when any media can have the impact that it has. It's changed PTA meetings. You have restaurants that put up TV sets, and Colonel Sanders in Los Angeles giving Monday Night Football Specials," said Gifford. "In this respect, I think it's good. It's kind of a family thing that we do."

His own family provided him the ability to cope with success. Starring at USC and then with the New York Giants (with four years of All-NFL recognition) is quite a head trip. But Gifford could handle it due to his upbringing, which included plenty of ego-gratification as a ball player.

"Coaches, parents, my wife . . . they all had a great deal to do with it, keeping the whole thing in proper perspective," he said, as smooth as the Dry Sack he's peddled on the side. "It's an interesting trip to have 'em go '5-4-3-2-1' and all of a sudden you have forty or fifty million people listening to what you have to say. You can go kinky with it."

But Gifford hasn't taken that route. (Never did impress me as being the kinky sort.) Once again, it all reverts back to the game that's been his life, when trying to comprehend his state of mind.

"Part of it has been because I've had the background of people saying, 'Boy, great game' when deep inside you knew it wasn't necessarily a great game," reflected Gifford.

All this seems to have built up an immunity to the big head, a commonplace occurrence in media, be it the local level as well as the network pinnacle. However, criticism goes hand in hand with success.

The NFL itself has made great strides since Frank toted a football. Maybe too many, because the game itself concerns him.

"What we're televising maybe is getting out of hand," he said, "I really don't know about that. I am concerned about the injuries, the increasing number of them."

Coogs preparing for Utah game

by paul marcus

Monday saw the UH football team return to the practice field following its upset loss to Memphis State University Saturday. The loss showed many of the team's weaknesses, but also showed where the team is strong.

"I was very pleased with the play of the left side of the offensive line," Bill Yeoman, coach of the Cougars, said.

"We'll have to get back to the bare essentials though in preparing for Utah this Saturday," Yeoman added.

According to Yeoman, Utah plays a varied defense. "Last year when we played them they threw every kind of defense and blitz possible at us. With these young kids, we'll just have to play the basics in order to keep Utah away," he said.

The defense played a strong game against Memphis. However, one major lapse cost UH a touchdown. "In a close game it usually turns into a matter of one or two plays. When this happens, you can't afford any mistakes like we had Saturday," Yeoman said.

"I was pleased though with the overall play of the defense, particularly Hosea Taylor and David Hodge," Yeoman said.

Hosea Taylor. . . Tackle

Sam Proctor. . . Right linebacker

Taylor played an outstanding game with four individual tackles and two assists. "He was all over the field, in the middle of every play," Yeoman said.

Hodge, playing in his first game after sitting last season out, came up with eight tackles and five assists. "What can you say about the best linebacker around," Yeoman said. "He played one whale of a game. It was excellent," Yeoman added.

Other defensive players who had good games were Steve Bradham and Ken Proctor, who had seven tackles apiece. Proctor also recovered the Memphis fumble.

Offensively, Yeoman said he felt that the young backs played extremely well. "It was a matter of just not executing on all the plays and making needless mistakes," he said.

UH quarterback Danny Davis also returned to the starting line up, coming back from last year's shoulder separation. "I have confidence in Danny," Yeoman said. "When he saw the game film, he couldn't believe some of the things he was doing. I know he'll work them out," Yeoman added.

Preparation for Saturday's 7:30 p.m. kickoff will continue throughout the week.

Assistant director quits international post

Gerald Naylor... bids farewell to UH

by tai leung

Gerald Naylor resigned last month after serving at UH as Assistant Director of International Student Services for 10 years and he says he is ready to plunge into the business world with a marketing firm in Seattle, Wash., serving the West Coast.

Marian Merriman, formerly an international student adviser, succeeded his position on Sept. 15.

Leaving his job, he felt that he would miss the international students and the friendship developed with the ISS staffs over the years. On the other hand, he would also "miss" the insurmountable amount of paperwork generated by the enrollment of a large number of international students.

When asked if the UH administration should increase the ISS staff to handle the increasing number of international students, he replied affirmatively.

According to the National Association for Foreign Student Affairs, the recommended ratio of advisers to foreign students is one to 350 to adequately care for the needs of the international students. UH currently has only one international student adviser, Margie Escalera, serving 2,600 international students. The replacement of Merriman's former position is expected to be announced within the next two weeks.

Naylor said that the special problems the international students brought to the attention of the ISS staffs were off-campus housing, legal problems stemming from cross-cultural communication, immigration problems and problems relating to internal change of the country where the student had come from, for instance, disaster and internal strife.

"I encourage American citizens to become more involved in the lives of the international students because of the benefits derived from knowing them," he said. "I treasure the personal friendships that I have developed with the international students over the last 10 years."

The president of the International Student Organization, Martha Malacara, said the ISO will hold a farewell reception at 7 p.m. Sept. 21 in the Baptist Student Union in honor of Naylor's dedicated service to the international student community at UH.

No-nuke activists condemn HL&P

by robert cahill

The continuing expansion of nuclear energy "may pose one of the greatest dangers that's ever threatened our planet," a Texas Mobilization for Survival (TMS) member said Saturday at UH.

Ginger Lindsay of TMS was among approximately 50 No-Nuke activists, who participated in Saturday's "Teach-In on Nuclear Power." This workshop was sponsored by TexPIRG.

The TMS is a coalition of individuals and organizations, which was formed last year to protest the construction of nuclear power plants in Texas. There are currently two such plants under construction, one near Bay City, and the other by Glen Rose.

Houston Lighting and Power is building the Bay City nuclear plant, which will house two nuclear reactors. These two reactors are one-third completed, and scheduled to be in operation by the early 1980s.

"We haven't had any major problems with our nuclear power plant down at Bay City," said Steve Gonzalez, HL&P supervisor of corporate communications. He said that there has been some opposition to the plant, "but nothing compared to other parts of the country, such as Seabrook, N.H."

"In normal operation, nuclear power plants... permit a certain amount of radioactive material to be emitted," said John Mopre, Mockingbird Alliance member, "it is questionable as to whether these standards are sufficient."

The Mockingbird Alliance is a local anti-nuke group with about 20 members "who are concerned with the health hazards of nuclear energy," he said. They were most recently involved in a "No-Nuke balloon release" near the Bay City plant.

Lindsay said in a study conducted on low level radiation, two researchers concluded that "radiation being emitted from nuclear power plants today can cause cancer," and that today's acceptable levels are in fact 10 times greater than what they consider to be a safe level.

Don Harrison of TMS, said there are 60 nuclear power plants in operation in the U.S.; however, there are currently none in Texas.

In addition to the health hazard, Lindsay said, "The average plant is being built at double the cost of the original plant estimate."

"We have no way of knowing how much nuclear energy will cost us... or whether we'll get burned through radiation or through higher electricity bills," she said.

Pat Green of TMS said, any amount of radiation is harmful, and that a certain amount of radiation occurs naturally. Background radiation occurs in the atmosphere naturally.

"There are 10,000 to 20,000 deaths in the world annually through background radiation, which is in the environment," Green said.
