It is not, however, like the temporary article sold everywhere for carpeting, which is laid down and taken up at pleasure, and lasting but a few months or years at most. But it is a permanent, new, ornamental hard wood floor, on top of the old one, fitted carefully and snug around all projections and into all offsets of the room, and will, with proper finish and care, retain with heightened vigor its colors and figures and will endure the tramp of an entire generation unscathed.

The  $\frac{3}{4}$  or thin parquets, are firmly nailed down with small barbed-wire brads, and when finished, as described elsewhere, are much more beautiful and perfect in their effects than the far-famed thick European Parquet Floors.

Among the most permanent and pleasing impressions made upon the minds of American housekeepers who travel in Europe, are those produced by the handsome, clean, tidy wood floors they meet with there in all genteel houses. And the rapidly increasing demand for such floors in this country is greatly owing to the fact that so large a number of Americans travel abroad; where they enjoy the opportunity of observing the remarkable advantages to cleanliness, health and beauty such floors possess over the modern dusty yarn carpet. Dr. William H. Ford, A. M., M. D., under the head of "Healthy Dwelling Houses," in the article in which he is discussing "Floors and Floor Coverings," writes as follows: "Until within a few years it has been the custom to cover the entire floors of a dwelling with carpets made to fit into all the angles and recesses, and tightly nailed to the wood-work."

"When carpets are adjusted in this manner it is troublesome and expensive to remove them as often as is required for the necessary cleaning; consequently, they are suffered to remain for an undue length of time, seldom being taken up more than once a year, or oftener than required for the usual Spring and Fall house-cleaning."

"Dust and dirt accumulate in and under the carpets and around the borders, and is only partially removed by the ordinary sweeping of the surface, most of the dust and fluff raised by the ordinary sweeping, settling down again on the carpet and upon every article of furniture or ornament in the room, and requiring constant labor to remove it. "A room thus closely fitted with carpet, which is a mere dust container, cannot be otherwise than unhealthy." "The present fashion of abandoning the closely fitting carpet and substituting in its place parquetry, with rugs or square carpets, is an important step toward effecting an improvement in the sanitary condition of the dwelling."

"The floor covering, if any be used, should never be laid over the entire surface." "Rugs, square carpets and matting answer the purposes of comfort and decoration, and possess the advantage of being removed without labor and of allowing the floor to be frequently cleaned. It is therefore important that the floors of a house should be laid in a very careful manner." "Hard-wood Parquetry makes an impervious, durable and beautiful flooring."

People for whom we laid thin Parquetry floors years ago, continue yearly to cover the floors of room after room, as their carpets wear out, and a large proportion of our increasing trade comes from those who have given the floors a thorough trial for years, and there are acquaintances who have seen them in use.

We would be glad to have the fullest investigation on this subject and can give hundreds of references that will satisfy the most skeptical person of the durability and wearing qualities of the thin Parquet wood carpet.

If you want to know more than the above reveals, kindly send stamp for our large Catalogue and be entertained a week.
