Coogs break Bearhug

Cougar running back Robert Newhouse ambles into the endzone to score six points against the Baylor Bears in Saturday night's game at the Astrodome. In a battle of defenses, the Coogs outscored the Bears 13-10. For details, see Page 4.

To cost $1 billion

Census updates information

By BRIAN FORD
Staff Writer for The Cougar

In March, 1980, each household in the United States will receive a questionnaire asking for such diverse information as how many bathrooms there are in each house, the income of the household head and how their living quarters are entered. The information will be sent back to the Census Bureau as part of the 20th Census.

The 1980 Census will cost one billion dollars and 275,000 people will be employed by the Bureau as temporary help for the massive project, said Celeste Dorsey, census bureau community service specialist.

Questionnaires will be sent to 86 million households. Four out of five will be asked to answer 19 questions and the remaining households will answer a longer version of the questionnaire with 46 additional questions.

A massive media campaign will be launched next year by the Census Bureau to inform the populace on the benefits of the Census and the confidentiality of personal information, said Jane Summer, census bureau public information coordinator. She said the campaign will include television and radio commercials from the National Advertising Council.

Dorsey said in the 1970 Census there was nearly an eight percent undercount of the black population, especially in the South while the white undercount was 1.3 percent. Many blacks were not counted "mainly because they are suspicious of the government and are difficult to find," she said.

Pontiff renews morality plea at capital mass

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pope John Paul II, completing his triumphant pilgrimage to America with an awesome Mass on the grassy mall of the capital, called again Sunday for an end to abortion, the strengthening of marriage and love, and justice for the weak.

Renewing themes sounded earlier in his week-long tour of prayer and pastoral teaching, the pope urged hundreds of thousands of listeners who crowded onto the parkland to reflect on the "nature of marriage, on the family, and on the value of life."

In this farewell Mass here, televised to a global audience, John Paul raised his strong voice on a touchy issue that divides his Roman Catholic flock in the United States: abortion and birth control.

"When the sacredness of life before birth is attacked, we will stand up and proclaim that no one ever has the authority to destroy unborn life," the pontiff said in his worldwide-televised homily.

"When the institution of marriage is abandoned to human selfishness or reduced to a temporary, conditional arrangement that can easily be terminated, we will stand up and affirm the indissolubility of the marriage bond," he said.

"When freedom is used to dominate the weak, to squander natural resources and energy, and to deny basic necessities to people, we will stand up and reaffirm the demands of justice and social love."

"When the sick, the aged or the dying are abandoned in loneliness, we will stand up and proclaim that they are worthy of love, care, and respect."

The three themes of family, abortion, and marriage — called "so closely interconnected" by the pope — were sounded time and again as he toured America, from its largest cities to the heartland of Iowa.

The Mass of the Mall was one of the most spectacular of all the large ceremonies the pope convened.

Thousands upon thousands of chrysanthemums — golden, white, and purple — encircled the oaken altar erected for the occasion.

As he began the last day of his arduous tour, John Paul was challenged by a Roman Catholic nun to consider a greater role for women in the church.

In remarks as gentle in tone as was his voice, the pontiff never responded directly to the challenge. Thus, he re-emphasized a declaration made in Philadelphia last week that the church never has and never shall ordain women into the priesthood.

Referring to a prepared speech, John Paul urged the church's religious women to emulate the Virgin Mary, "the woman who speaks to us of femininity, human dignity and love."

TRIMS treating people addicted to dilaudid

By FRIEDA BEATY

Abuse of prescription drugs has become so wide spread in the United States that a congressional committee has been assigned to investigate the problem. The Texas Rehabilitation Institute for Mental Health (TRIMS) is treating people addicted to one of these prescription drugs called dilaudid.

Dilaudid is a semi-synthetic narcotic used to relieve extreme pain in the later stages of cancer, said a spokesman for the U.S. Drug Enforcement Agency. The drug comes in pill, liquid, and suppository form.

Dilaudid gives the same effects as heroin, but is considered safer by abusers because it is not available on the streets or 'cut' with other drugs.

Abusers acquire dilaudid by getting valid prescriptions from doctors, staging illnesses to receive a prescription, or buying the prescriptions illegally from doctors.

Recently three doctors from the Houston area were arrested for selling illegal prescriptions. One of these doctors was writing prescriptions for dilaudid. If convicted, a doctor can receive up to 15 years in prison for writing one illegal prescription. Two doctors recently convicted for issuing illegal prescriptions were sentenced to five years in prison.

TRIMS helps people who are addicted to dilaudid or heroin. The clinic substitutes methadone for these drugs, and then stabilizes the patient. TRIMS has approximately 365 patients on the methadone program.

"Most of the people come in off the streets, or are referred to the clinic," said Julia Hogg of TRIMS. It takes two weeks to be accepted into the program. A documented paper stating that the abuser has been addicted to the drug for at least two years is also required.

After the applicant has been accepted into the program, he is examined by a doctor who oversees his case until withdrawal signs cease, Hogg said.

Every participant in the program has a prescription card stating the dosage he is to receive. "We start each client on the smallest dose of methadone possible, commensurate to the amount of heroin they were on. We give them enough so they won't have withdrawal pain, but not enough to feel the effects," Hogg said. The clinic has regular urine surveillance to make sure patients are not taking any other drugs, Hogg added.

To receive a dosage of methadone, the client has to show photograph identification. "They have to swallow their dose at the dispensary and say something, because some patients will keep it in their mouth, go out of the clinic, spit it out and sell it," said

Hogg.

While on the methadone program, clients also receive counseling from TRIMS. According to Hogg, they help the clients with social adjustments, or emotional problems, and normal counseling.

"If they are on drugs, something is missing in their life," Hogg said. "Sometimes they are hooked because of physical problems, and sometimes it is because of emotional problems."

"We try to counsel once a week. When they first start the program, maybe once a day, depending on their need. Ideally, we would like to counsel them (patients) once or twice a week," Hogg said.

U.S. must strive for peaceful goals

It appears that there are some in Congress who are coming around to the idea that President Carter is not as inept at foreign policy as some of his Republican (and Democratic) opponents would have us believe.

The Senate Intelligence Committee concluded last week that the arms limitation agreements reached by the Carter administration and the Soviet Union would be better than continuing with no treaty.

Although the unclassified report stopped far short of an outright endorsement of SALT II, the panel of seven Democrats and six Republicans unanimously believed that "in the absence of the SALT II treaty, however, the Soviets would be free to take ... measures, such as unrestrained concealment and deception, which could make monitoring (Soviet) strategic forces still more difficult."

So SALT II wasn't such a bomb after all, according to the Senate Intelligence Committee. Neither was Carter's handling of the controversy surrounding Soviet troops in Cuba.

That's something else Carter should be commended for: not panicking over 5,000 Soviet troops which really can do little harm. Although there were some hard-core hawks who were ready to go to war over the forces in Cuba, Carter realized that the situation really wasn't as dangerous as it first seemed.

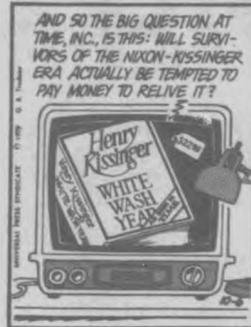

After all, how long have U.S. forces been stationed along Soviet borders in Europe and Asia?

There is a lesson to be learned from the events of the past two weeks. The Soviet troops in Cuba stirred a controversy in the United States because we still regard Russia as a military adversary, so any change in the military status quo is seen with a tinge of fear.

What the United States must pursue is a policy similar to that now being followed with the People's Republic of China, via cultural and economic exchanges and a commitment toward peaceful relations. So far, U.S. and Soviet diplomats have given lip service to such a notion, but in order to calm the paranoia over Soviet activity, this approach must be taken in earnest by both sides ("us" and "them").

Instead of trying to gain the upper hand in the control of strategic weapons, the United States should work toward an agreement for the development of peace. In the context of our role in world affairs, this is where our true commitment lies.

Commuters pass up opportunity

To the Editor:

I was expecting great things of the new UH bus service along the Gulf Freeway. The transportation office had worked hard at organizing the service so it could be convenient to as many students and UH employees as possible.

I imagined hundreds of people swamping the transportation office for passes so they could enjoy riding the bus and meeting new people. Yet on the day of the first run, when I arrived at the bus stop at Almeda Mall 10 minutes early, there was only one other person there, and by a quarter past eight, the scheduled time of departure, there were three of us.

We rationalized that the bus must have filled at Baybrook Mall, near Clear Lake City. Just seconds before the scheduled time, the bus was there, carrying one passenger — the director of the Transportation Office. All of the way in to school on the freeway we were surrounded by UH students, all driving singly into school. I wondered at the seeming complacency of my fellow students — passing up the second alternative offered them this semester, as I sat shivering slightly in our well-air-conditioned bus with ample leg room and seats conducive to sleep.

Why aren't we able to give up a few small freedoms to save energy, frustration, traffic congestion and a friendly bump or two from our fellow bleary-eyed drivers? I relish the thought of avoiding the insane parking problems here at the university, and I say only that we ourselves are the ones contributing to the problems around us — not just here at the university, but in this city. So when an opportunity is presented to us as a method to help ease some of our difficulties we laugh at it and make excuses?

British troops make Ireland strife worse

To the Editor:

While your editorial of Sept. 25, concerning Irish terrorism, was generally well considered, it does fail to mention one of the principal reasons for the violence in Ireland: the continuing presence of the English in the north of Ireland. Surely some recognition must be given to the fact that despite over 400 years of colonial rule in Ireland, the English refuse to leave the country. While this presence does not justify the tactics of the I.R.A., it helps to explain the sympathy which many Irish and Irish-Americans hold for this group's aims.

It is time for an end to the violence in Ireland, but this will happen only when the English recognize the legitimate sovereignty of the Irish government over the whole island of Eire. Until then, the I.R.A. will continue to capitalize on the English presence to justify their actions. Return Ireland to the Irish and you will destroy the roots of Irish violence, but failure to do so may condemn this island to more years of bloodshed.

Bell's satire 'tactless'

To the Editor:

Perhaps T. Edward Bell was real stoned when he composed his eloquent satire, "An Interview with Governor Brown" and found it to be witty and humorous. How anyone else thought it deserving of the top column, editorial page is a mystery. He was rude and unduly insulting in the most blatant manner to Gov. Brown and Linda Ronstadt. Subtlety is quite often the key to political humor. So this tactless relic of the revolution goes on to downgrade the handicapped and women. (Does anyone still think amputees and yeast infections are funny?) The graffiti on this campus is, from my experience, the most boring of any major campus in the United States. Your top graffiti artists must be too busy writing editorials to concentrate on the walls. Hey Eddie, heard any good fag jokes lately?

UH energy center conducting free home audits, workshops

By FRIEDA BEATY

Free home audits, energy workshops and an answer to almost any question concerning energy, can be obtained through the UH Energy Extension Center.

EEC's primary objective is to inform, teach and assist small energy users such as homeowners, small businesses, local government and private institutions, according to Barry Worthington of the UH center. "Up to now, we have been basically home oriented, but starting in January, we will expand to help small businesses," he said.

The center provides home energy audits, where an auditor goes to the homeowner's residence and makes a visual examination of the outside and inside of the house. The auditor measures the insulation in the attic and in the walls. "We visit the house and discuss the amount of energy that is consumed," said Joseph Moravek, auditor for the center.

"We also discuss the behavior usages of the homeowner. This includes turning off the lights, the stereo, taking a shower instead of a bath, and leaving the doors and windows open," Moravek said.

The auditor sits down with the homeowner and writes up the recommendations that he thinks will make the home more efficient. The auditor brings along a display of energy products that homeowners can buy from a company of their choice.

According to Moravek recommendations usually include additional insulation, weather stripping, or caulking. "Sometimes we recommend equipment changing, which includes buying more efficient appliances, lights and air conditioning when they are no longer useful." The audit takes approximately three hours.

The EEC can handle any energy related question, according to Worthington. "If we can't handle the question, we will research it, or refer the caller to someone who can. We have answered questions concerning what type of insulation to buy, to what type of battery to buy for an electric car. We have working relations with the utility companies, other universities, government agencies and the Department of Energy. So far we have handled almost everything," he said.

The EEC has a library that contains information on all types of energy, from wood burning stoves to solar power. Most of the information in the EEC's library is not available in the M.D. Anderson Memorial Library, he said. The EEC library is not open to all students, but will be open to everyone in approximately a month, Worthington added.

Lectures are available for small organizations such as church groups or schools. "We go to almost any group with a tailor-made session," Worthington said. The center also sponsors several seminars.

The center also provides an energy conscious design service. The design can cut utility bills up to 50 percent, Worthington said. A home which has a large window on the south side of the house is more energy efficient because in the winter the sun sets near the south and provides heat. In the summer the sun does not come into the window because the eaves are built a little larger than average, he said. "We don't draw up the design. We are not competing with the architect," he added.

The center has a telephone hotline that anyone can for information concerning energy. "The caller calls in, we answer their question and mail them printed information," Worthington said. The EEC's number is 749-1756.

Census information widely used

was created due to the undercount. The program consists of nearly 200 specialists nation-wide trying to inform minorities of the value of the census.

The Census provides a basis for the re-apportionment of seats in the House of Representatives. Recent population estimates by the Census suggest that Texas and other states in the South and West may each gain one or more seats, while states mostly in the Northeast may lose seats. More than 100 Federal programs now guide their spending of an estimated $50 billion annually with census statistics.

UH Director of Statistics Dr. Donald Norris said he is looking forward to the results of the 1980 Census. Much of the information from the 1970 Census is now inaccurate, he said, and explained that UH uses Census statistics "to get an idea of what our pool of prospective students is." The pool of possible students in Houston is increasing, yet the number of people attending UH Central Campus has gone down. He said this drop may be due to UH not marketing itself to the right segments of the Houston population.

Norris said the drop may be partly due to competition with other UH System campuses. He said UH now uses more statistical information than ever.

UH Associate Professor of Political Science Dr. Richard Murray said the results of the 1980 Census will help solve the current controversy surrounding the redistricting of Houston. "The Census will be an enormous help. It will resolve all legal questions over how large each minority group is in Houston." He said the actual count of each minority will resolve any doubts concerning current minority sizes in Houston.

Murray said he still uses data from the 1970 census. He said the data can be used to find the relative wealths of each neighborhood.

People who do not send back the questionnaire will be visited by census takers, who will pick up the forms. Those refusing to return the questionnaire can be subject to a fine and up to one year imprisonment under federal law, Dorsey said. The confidentiality of each questionnaire is protected for 72 years under federal law. After 72 years, the records are turned over to the National Archives for permanent storage.

According to Title 13 of the United States Code, information furnished to the Census Bureau can be used for statistical purposes only and cannot be released in any manner which could identify any person or business firm. The name and address of anyone on a Census Bureau questionnaire do not go into any government computer, and Social Security numbers are not requested on the questionnaires.

Among some of the more interesting statistics recently compiled by the Census Bureau are that blacks with a college degree are 25 percent more likely to be "overqualified" than whites with the same education, and that women and minority males are more likely to exceed the educational requirements of their jobs than white males.

Census figures also show that the inflation of the 1970s has completely wiped out the family income gains of the 1960s, and that the fastest growing segment of the population is the 25-to-34 age group, which increased 35 percent between 1970 and 1978.

Dorsey said the 10-year period between each census will be cut to a five-year period, beginning in 1985. She said the frequency of each census taking period will be increased because much of the information gained in each census is inaccurate by the time it is released. Information from the 1980 census will be available to the public in 1982.

Dorsey said the increased frequency of the census will help fill the need for more statistical information in the United States. She said the greater mobility of the U.S. population is another factor involved in the increased frequency.

new Summary

From The Associated Press

ROME — About 10,000 persons, most of them young people, jammed rallies in Rome and other cities in support of a campaign by Italy's Radical Party to legalize the sale and use of marijuana.

MOSCOW — A fire early Sunday gutted part of an apartment building from which the Soviet Union beams low-level microwave radiation at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow, witnesses said.

WASHINGTON — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen has written to President Carter to emphasize a point made in the president's televised speech on Soviet troops in Cuba. Bentsen, D-Texas, made a case for his bill designed to protect CIA agents from exposure.

SEABROOK, N.H. — Hundreds of anti-nuclear protesters repeatedly assaulted the Seabrook atomic powerplant Sunday but were repulsed by state troopers and National Guardsmen using fire hoses, Mace and a smoke-spewing generator.

AURORA, N.Y. — Citing a need to devote more time to family business, but leaving the door open for political adventure, Frances "Sissy" Farenthold has announced her resignation as president of Wells College in New York State.

Coogs squeeze by upset-minded Baylor a

By GREGG STENDEL
Sports Writer for The Cougar

The fans got their money's worth Saturday night in the Astrodome.

Linebacker David Hodge, defensive end Sam Proctor and tackle Hosea Taylor combined with a host of teammates to limit the Baylor Bears to only 2 second half first downs as the Coogs took a heart-stopping victory over the charged up green and gold, 13-10.

In this see-saw contest, which saw the Coogs have two one-hundred yard runners (Terald Clark with 135, John Newhouse with 104), the Bears and UH played their respective hearts out to the delight of the 37,000 in attendance.

Houston turnovers hurt throughout the game as on Houston's first play from scrimmage, quarterback Delrick Brown fumbled a pitch-out intended for Clark as Baylor's Lester Ward pounced on the elusive pigskin.

Nervousness keyed both sides as Houston started its first SWC game. But the UH defense was magnificent on this night as the Coogs held on three downs after the fumble. Robert Bledsoe's 40-yard field goal put the Bears up 3-0.

Houston bounced back driving from their own 36 with the big gainer an 18-yard pass from Brown to Garrett Jurgajtis putting the ball in BU territory. At the Baylor five, a curious reception — no, interception — by Ken Griffen of the Bears halted UH's scoring opportunity. The ball caught by Newhouse was flipped into the air while the running back was on the ground after being tackled by a host of BU players.

Leonard Mitchell (70) wraps up Elam

The Coog defense held the Bears on four-downs as UH drove for their first score of the night. Two Clark runs, a Newhouse 16-yard burst put Bill Yeoman's crew at the Baylor 7. Then the elusive Delrick Brown, under extreme pressure from Baylor's Andrew Melontree, hit Newhouse at the right corner of the end zone for a 17-yard touchdown reception and a 7-3 Houston lead.

After a change of possessions, the Bears pulled a play from Bill Yeoman's book as BU running back Walter Abercrombie was left wide open down the mid-section of the UH defense and raced 78-yards with quarterback Mickey Elam's pass for Baylor's go-ahead touchdown in the second quarter.

The Bears Abercrombie looked like he was on a Sunday afternoon waltz. "We were just plain too deep, and Elam made the right call and caught us perfectly for six points," Yeoman said.

The touchdown inspired the already fired-up Bear defense which stopped the Coogs cold on their next two possessions as the teams retired at the half with Baylor up 10-7.

With neither offense able to penetrate deep into good field position, the turning point in the game occurred on a third down and 13-yard for a first. On a key turnaround, David Hodge intercepted an Elam pass intended for Mike Fisher as Houston took over on the Bears 12. After a quarterback sack by Andrew Melontree of the Bears, an almost minute long scramble by quarterback Brown resulted in Houston losing fourteen yards.

The loss by Brown hurt the Coogs as Kenny Hatfield's field goal attempt sailed wide to the right. Yet even though the Houston offense didn't score, the interception awoke the Astrodome crowd and quieted down the most ardent Baylor hopeful.

The Coog defense responded to the challenge as two consecutive sacks on Elam by Sam Proctor helped the Houston offense gain good field position after a short BU punt. At this point in the game, the Cougar fans must have been wondering if this was UH's night.

Houston tied the game though as Kenny Hatfield redeemed his earlier miss. This time the senior from LaGrange hit a 29-yard field goal, giving Houston a hard-earned tie going into the fourth stanza.

Once more, the defense rose to stop BU's Abercrombie on a third and five situation. After a dangerous punt return by Lonell Phea put the ball on the UH 48, a Newhouse electrifying 32-yard run through a Dennis Greenawalt block gave the Coogs a first down on the Baylor 19.

With the Baylor defense rising to the UH threat, Kenny Hatfield again responded. With 10:07 remaining on the Astrodome clock, Hatfield booted a 32-yard field goal, his second of the game giving UH the lead for good, 13-10.

Baylor struggled to fight back in the waning minutes of the contest. But Joe Redmon put an end to the Bears comeback hopes as the a fake punt was snuffed out by the senior from Grapevine.

Houston drove for a first down into BU territory, eating up the last seconds of the game clock. With only 1:06 remaining, Baylor put the ball up in the air, but Elvis Bradley made a leaping interception of an Elam pass intended for Baylor's 6-foot, 6-inch flanker Robert Mitchell. The game-ending play by Bradley increased Houston's overall record to 4-0 and 1-0 in SWC play. The Bears dropped to 2-1 in the conference.

"It was a tough and hard fought game all the way," lamented Baylor's All-America linebacker Mike Singletary. "Both teams played well and executed well also, but in the end, they (Houston) had more points, and that's what counts," Singletary continued.

As for Houston's Bill Yeoman: "The defense played super and it's a good thing they did it tonight, because they had to. We have never played a sounder defensive game."

The leader on the night for Houston had to be linebacker David Hodge, the senior from Clute. Hodge finished the night with 15 tackles and the key interception of the game. "Hodge was super and come up with big critical tackles. I wouldn't trade him for Singletary," Yeoman said.

With the Baylor victory, Houston takes to the road next Saturday as they face the Texas Aggies in College Station. "I think the Aggies will remember 33-0 last year. I bet they've already got it up in their locker room," Hodge said. "We're looking forward to A&M," Leonard Mitchell commented.

For the Coogs, it's one down, seven to go.

Dorm cafeterias pass inspection

Both dormitory cafeterias passed a surprise inspection by the City Health Department Friday.

Inspector Victor Pappas said "there was an extremely big improvement. They were in very good shape."

Earlier in the semester, the Moody Towers cafeteria was inspected and found to have four minor violations.

services will be offered. Kappa Psi members will screen for high blood pressure and members of the Optometry Student Association will be there to give free vision screening.

According to Steve Duke, president of Kappa Psi Pharmacy Fraternity, the drive will also go to benefit the family of deceased Kappa Psi member Paul Fontenot who died last spring of a brain tumor.

For every pint of blood collected the Methodist Hospital has agreed to deduct $10 from his bills.

An additional benefit to those who donate is a free unlimited supply of blood for their family for one year.

Last year, the blood drive collected 600 pints of blood from UH donors.

NATIONAL LAMPOON'S

OCTOBER COMEDY ISSUE

It's October and the leaves are turning brown. It is a season of change — the clear, cold death of winter shines ahead of us. Soon we will be able to see our breath, frisk with small dogs in the snow, and roll our cars over on patches of black ice. With winter approaching and good jokes sure to be as scarce as summer birds, now is the time to lay in a winter's supply of jokes in the new October comedy issue of National Lampoon; and as for summer birds, you can probably mail away for them to Florida. Yes, the National Lampoon Comedy issue has enough rich, plump guffaws to keep you chortling right into spring. So go buy one now at your local newsstand or bookstore before David Frost starts nipping people's noses, making it a pain to go outside.

Beach bozos slide down more

This band really should give up the ghost.

The Beach Boys had an impressive string of singles in the '60s, most of which were penned by Brian Wilson. Now it seems that the only person capable of doing anything very well in the band is Carl Wilson. Brian sat lethargically behind a white grand piano throughout the set dragging on foot long cigs.

As far as the material went, what else could it be? "In My Room," "Surfer Girl," "Hawaii," "God Only Knows," "Good Timin'," and a host of other stuff old and new got the once-over-lightly.

Brian Johnston was also with the band on keyboard and did his "I Write the Songs," solo. Big deal. Dennis Wilson did not show, but nobody walked out so it was okay.

The highlight of the concert was some guy picking his nose in slow motion over the house closed circuit TV. This he did with much more elan than the Beach Boys did their harmonies.

Shades of Pete Townsend! The Clash performed Saturday evening in Cullen Auditorium to a goodly-sized crowd of New Wave devotees. This picture proves the movement's debt to the Who's Townsend once again.
