Communists in the United Nations Throw United States a Fast Curve

Rosenberg Mantle Of Treason Dropped On Shoulders Of Fellow-Conspirators

If the spine-chilling disclosure that Communist spies are operating within the very core of our national defense doesn't blast the American people out of their complacency, nothing will.

We now have convincing evidence that the evil of the Rosenbergs lives after them and that their vile legacy to the country they betrayed is a carefully-planned espionage ring leading through underground channels from Washington to Moscow.

We have learned, too, that the black mantle of treason was dropped on the shoulders of their fellow-conspirators who succeeded them in sensitive agencies of government, pledged to carry out their mission and provide Russia with information to enable her to construct the deadly weapons necessary to our destruction.

This is not the first time in the nation's rugged history when the people of the Republic have walked with heavy hearts in the Valley of Gethsemane and faced grave threats to their security imposed by alien foes.

But it is the first time on record that widespread disloyalty among our own citizens has inspired in the hearts of American patriots the same measure of fear and distrust of many of their countrymen which they feel toward their enemies in a foreign land.

Tough On Those Who Are Too Poor To Live And Can't Afford To Die

Tax-burdened Pennsylvanians who may have hoped to some day escape to the peace and security of the grave, have just come in for an awful shock.

Tax authorities of the Quaker State, having apparently run out of live victims, are now taxing the dead.

The sales tax, which is one of the numerous forms of legalized gyp by which august representatives of a Commonwealth may pick your pocket without fear of arrest, has just gone into effect there.

Tucked away in this statute enacted by the bright boys in the Pennsylvania legislature is a cunning little provision which says that fifty per cent of the lump sum charged by the funeral director when a citizen is buried, is subject to the sales tax levy.

If a vault is involved, the sky is the limit and tribute can be exacted on the whole works.

We are not familiar with all details of the law and are not sure whether or not, in the event the tax is not paid, the tax collector can confiscate the coffin and hold it as security until all claims are settled.

The tax racket continues to grow and thrive and it is beginning to look like there is no way to beat the rap, living or dead.

Heretofore, tax chiselers have given up and called off the dogs at the gates of the cemetery but now they are beginning to chase the corpse right down into the grave.

The Nobel Peace Prize has been given to General George C. Marshall and we are glad to have that matter cleared up. We have been wondering who was responsible for all the peace and unity existing throughout the world.

At a meeting of the General Assembly in London in 1946, a rule was slipped by which de-horned this country of all authority in the matter of firing its own employes. This action was apparently taken while all American representatives, except Alger Hiss, were either touring the town in a rubber-neck bus, taking a boat ride on the Thames or feeding the pigeons in Hyde Park.

Seven years later, Americans are learning that in a sort of sneak preview of the General Assembly in London in 1946 where they tried out the show before taking it to New York for a permanent run, the Russians slipped in a new act in the form of a rule which constituted a hoax without parallel, on a gullible people of a sovereign nation.

The sucker, of course, was the United States.

It was only when an attempt was made to fire subversives working for the United States in the United Nations in 1953 that American representatives in that body seemed to realize that they had nothing to say about it and that final authority in the matter rested with the United Nations itself.

Meantime, an alert and intelligent woman in New York, Alice Widener, had ferreted out this information, documented it with official records of the United Nations, published it in a twenty-seven page pamphlet and released it.

We would think that it was, primarily, the responsibility of the State Department to first inform itself and then the American people of the manner in which the United States has been tricked in this matter at the London meeting but they were evidently so busy at whatever it is that State Departments do, that they didn't seem to get around to it. Mrs. Widener had to pinch hit for that agency and give the American people the information to which they are entitled.

It will be remembered that eleven employes presumably working for the United States in the United Nations were re-instated or given cash compensation recently, after having been suspended for refusing to tell an investigating committee of Congress whether or not they were Communists.

These employes had been suspended by Secretary General Trygve Lie following their refusal to answer these questions pending further investigation by a Commission of Jurists composed of three lawyers chosen by Lie from among member States of the United Nations.

The conclusion of this Commission was that no employe of the United States working in the United Nations had the right to refuse to answer questions of a Committee of Congress and recommended that these employes be fired.

At first Secretary General Lie announced that he would abide by their decision but, later, reversed himself like a switch engine after members of the staff of the legal department of the United Nations whispered in his pink ear.

It is presumed that they told him that a member nation was powerless to fire its employes in the United Nations because of the neat little trick pulled at the London meeting in 1946 when the matter of employment, qualifications and firing of United Nations personnel was being thrashed out.

At that meeting, according to United Nations Document PC-

Millions of Americans Think It-The Southern Conservative Says It

Move To Cut Strong Tentacles Of Giant Business Octopus In Federal Government

Americanism With A Southern Accent

By profession, Thurman Sensing is a publicist for the Southern States Industrial Council at Nashville, Tennessee.

By preference, he is an American patriot who takes time out from his professional duties to address civic clubs and other groups throughout the country on the State of the Union and those who are scheduled to hear him in future, have a treat in store.

We have enjoyed a sort of "correspondence friendship" with him for years in which we have traded insults to politicians who have led this country down to the brink of ruin, but we had never met.

Recently, we had the privilege of hearing him talk to a Fort Worth civic group and we find that he is a speaker after our own heart and if we were capable of making a public address, we would wish for no greater accomplishment than to be able to put them in the aisles, as Mr. Sensing repeatedly does.

He is that rare specimen of individual who can make people think by making them laugh and we are sure that the points he drove home through ridicule will linger longer in the minds and memory of his listeners than the most forceful illustrations based on logic, could have possibly done.

Such, for instance, as his brief reference to the contemptible custom currently prevalent in which politicians agitate the subjects of "segregation" and "discrimination" for the advancement of their own interests. He reminded his audience that every time he got on a Pullman he saw one little room in one end of the car marked "women" and another at the other end marked "men."

"That is 'segregation,'" he pointed out and added: "But you couldn't by any stretch of the imagination call it 'discrimination'."

Any group of Americans desiring to be thoroughly instructed, and at the same time, highly entertained, could do no better than to get this great American with a Southern accent to do the job.

"A Rose By Any Other Name"

Mary Cain of Summit, Mississippi, tells how Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby pondered long and earnestly over a proper title for her new department of the Federal Government.

She says the lady cabinet member had about decided to call it "Public Health, Education and Welfare" when all of a sudden it dawned on her that it would be called by its initials "PHEW" and she hastily lopped off the word "Public".

Possibly because the experience is currently rare, we react to good old-fashioned discussions on Americanism and sacred American tradition in the public forum, much as others do to a compelling drama on the stage.

Recently, all in one day, our emotions ran the whole gamut from laughter to tears as we listened to two great Americans from widely separated sections of the country relate the bewildering story of the nation's gradual descent from its honorable station as a Constitutional Republic to the degenerate rank of a Socialist State.

At a noon luncheon we heard a Tennessean paint the picture of our national decay in terms of ridicule which inspired side-splitting laughter on the part of his listeners at the stupidity and ineptness of lilliputian leaders, as related elsewhere in this edition.

That night in one of the city's large auditoriums we heard a Californian talk on the same theme but his words inspired no laughter and there was only heartbreak in his telling of the tragic story of a nation's betrayal at the hands of those pledged to keep it inviolate from profane hands.

That speaker was Willis E. Stone of Los Angeles and we imagine that his zealous concern for his country's survival, his obvious devotion to American principles and his extraordinary capacity for impelling the citizen to action, must have been drawn from the same divine source which inspired Patrick Henry to rally his countrymen to the defense of American institutions in the early days of the Republic.

As president of the American Progress Foundation, Mr. Stone is devoting his efforts toward the submission of a proposed Constitutional amendment which would cut the strong tentacles of the giant business octopus which has fastened itself on the Federal government and return the operation of business and industry to private interests.

Mr. Stone will find it hard going because grasshopper brains in this country who are committed to government operation of business and the nationalization of industry will fight the movement at every turn.

Although the record is clear that every time Washington politicians have engaged in the operation of business the only thing they were able to do was to sink it in a big pool of red ink, they won't surrender the idea that they are capable business executives until they are knocked loose from it by a Constitutional Amendment.

Their ability along this line has been forcefully demonstrated in their operation of the Postal Service which is going deeper in the hole by the hour.

Although the Constitution delegated this job to the Federal government and it must remain there, private enterprise could have done a far better job and kept it on a paying basis.

We can only explain this one

COMMUNISTS—

AB-14, the position was taken that while it was common sense that the United Nations staff should be acceptable to the member governments, and that the Secretary General should require information about applicants, it "would be extremely undesirable to write into the text anything that would give national governments particular rights in this respect".

And so it was that four of the eleven suspended employees were re-instated in their jobs and seven others who preferred cash to re-employment, were awarded sums ranging from $6,000 to $40,000, amounting to a total of $135,000. Incidentally the man receiving a $40,000 award was in charge of a branch of American Intelligence during World War II, yet refused to tell a Senate Committee recently whether or not he was a Communist.

In this connection, perhaps the following rule adopted unanimously at the London meeting explains why these employees were acceptable to the United Nations and could not be fired:

"No persons who have discredited themselves by their activities in connection with Fascism or Nazism should be appointed by the staff of the United Nations Organization". Period.

A point that stands out in this resolution like a Presbyterian Movie Producer in Hollywood, is the omission of "Communism" from the list for disqualification of even those working for a member nation which might be opposed to having Communists on its payroll.

Obviously, no American representative at the meeting noticed, or saw fit to protest, this clever little trap in which the United States is now caught when it seeks to fire its own employees in the great world body, for refusing to confess their Communist affiliation.

Since Communism was left off the list and since Nazism is as dead as the dodo bird, that leaves only those who "have discredited themselves by their activities in connection with Fascism" who are barred from employment at the United Nations.

According to the dictionary Fascism is "a patriotic society animated by a strong national spirit . . . directed against Socialists and Communists and the disturbances excited by them" (New Century Dictionary).

All Americans, except subversives, are "animated by a strong national spirit" which, according to a strict interpretation of the rule, leaves only Communists and Socialists eligible for employment in the United Nations.

All of which clears up the mystery of why the Secretary General of the United Nations made a quick switch and decided to re-instate all the accused employees who wanted to stay on and to pay off those who didn't.

For years we have tossed brickbats at the United Nations and expect to continue to do so and on occasion we have employed ridicule and satire to point up its objectives but we now urge with all the sincerity and earnestness of which we are capable that every American who is concerned in the maintenance of this country's independence and its preservation as a Constitutional Republic, plead with their two senators to vote us out of it before it is too late.

If they didn't know it before, surely it is now plain to all responsible Americans, including members of the United States Senate, that the current type of diplomat and spokesmen delegated to represent us in world councils can no longer continue to play ball with international cut-throats without losing the shirts off the American taxpayers' back.

Those who have appeared in our behalf in the United Nations were possessed of hearts which were too soft—to say nothing of their heads—to cope with the Kremlin bandits who dominate it.

In the international game of intrigue, conspiracy and treason—let's face it—we are sand-lot amateurs and we strike out every time we go to bat.

In the final analysis, there is no more forceful, eloquent and accurate expression of mounting American sentiment than that embodied in the simple slogan: "Take the United States out of the United Nations and the United Nations out of the United States".

instance of defective planning by the giant minds who founded the Republic, on the ground that—from the vantage point of their own vast understanding—they couldn't visualize the pigmy intellects who would succeed them in the centuries ahead.

All competitive business and industry should and must be taken out of the hands of the government if we are to eventually avoid total Socialism.

This could be accomplished very simply if two-thirds of the members of Congress would submit the amendment for ratification by three-fourths of the State Legislatures.

But politicians don't act simply and according to the rules of common sense and the national good. They have to be hit in the head with the pickaxe of public opinion before they get the point.

So the American Progress Foundation is taking the alternate provision for amending the Constitution by securing passage of a resolution by thirty-two legislatures which will compel Congress to submit the amendment for ratification by thirty-six States.

What the citizen can do to help is to urge his State lawmakers to pass the resolution demanding the submission of this amendment at the next session of his State Legislature.

Reports Explain Why Government Agencies Have Been Crawling With Communist Spies

Americans who may be horror-stricken at the prevalence of Communist spies in various agencies and who wonder how these vermin have operated so long without detection, should read some of the old reports—almost any report—of investigating Committees during the past fifteen years.

For instance, in the Second Report of the Un-American Activities Committee of the State of Washington, 1948, pages 145-157, appears the sworn testimony of Howard Rushmore, admitted Communist Party member for five years and who did a stretch as reporter for the Daily Worker.

Rushmore told the committee of various Communist spies who operated in the early Forties and how atom bomb information was passed from hand to hand and finally on to Russian agents.

He told of a college professor working on the Manhattan Project who was observed by FBI agents as he handed a package to a man in a Chicago park. FBI agents trailed both parties. The professor was identified as a Professor Clarence Hiskey, prominent atomic scientist and the man to whom he gave the package was known as Arthur Adams who had come to this country from Moscow in 1939 to set up a spy ring.

The FBI also found, according to Rushmore's testimony, that the spy ring included other professors and Army and Navy personnel and that its headquarters was in a Madison Avenue jewelry store in New York owned by a woman named Victoria Stone. Hiskey's wife was operating a "mail drop" in which a Los Alamos scientist would mail certain material to another member of the ring in a large city who would, in turn, mail it to the Hiskey woman in New York. The Hiskey female would mail it to Victoria Stone who relayed it to Arthur Adams.

The FBI had Adams' room wired, installed a microphone in the next room and collected evidence on him for a year and a half.

Rushmore told how J. Edgar Hoover went to the White House with this evidence and begged permission to arrest the whole nest of spies but was turned down on the ground that they didn't want to offend Stalin. As late as 1945 his request to make the arrest was still turned down.

Some of the FBI agents working on the assignment were so disgusted at not being allowed to close in on the ring after assembling the evidence, that they quit their jobs.

This is only a small part of the testimony of one individual and there are hundreds of thousands of pages relating the sordid story of betrayal as told by former Communists to investigating committees, State and National.

A perusal of these reports is an education in itself on treason as practiced on a wholesale scale during two national administrations.

It is the humiliating and degrading story of two presidents who were willing to let their country be betrayed rather than offend "good old Joe."

And we didn't have any Joe McCarthy then to defy them and put the security of his country first; if there had been one, it would be a different story now.

Mercy Asked For Those Who Do Not Know Its Meaning

A New York radio commentator announced in a recent broadcast that Eleanor Roosevelt had expressed opposition to capital punishment for the kidnapers and murderers of the little Greenleaf boy.

Much as it pains us to disagree with this eminent authority on human behavior, we do not think it is possible to devise any form of punishment which would be adequate to deal with these beasts in human guise.

Of course this attitude on our part probably indicates our complete lack of social consciousness and sympathy for the under-privileged members of the society.

In bestowing our sympathy only on the parents and family of the little boy who was brutally murdered, we are admitting our adherence to an old-fashioned conception of morality which is all out of line with the advanced thinking of enlightened world citizens like Eleanor Roosevelt.

We think the president is to be highly commended for his refusal to go out in the various States and campaign for the re-election or defeat of Congressional candidates. The executive department of the government is entirely separate from the legislative branch and it is the responsibility of the people to elect both without suggestions from either.

We Will Go The New York Banker One Better

A New York banker, Eugene W. Castle, points out that the government has on hand enough films in its stockpiles to last the United States Information Agency's foreign propaganda service three years.

He asserts that three-fourths of the personnel overhead in the film department should be eliminated and says he could show the U.S. Information Agency how it could slash the $75,000,000 annual budget for global propaganda to $20,000,000.

We could show them how they could slash it to zero with no loss to American prestige abroad and great gain to American taxpayers at home.

Our plan would be to immediately stop spending one thin dime trying to prevent foreign countries from embracing Communism and use whatever funds are available for fighting Communism here in the United States.

The brother of Janet Rosenberg, the Chicago woman who tried to start a Communist revolution in British Guiana, came to the defense of his sister by saying publicly that she was "no more a Communist than George Washington was a Communist". We would remind the young man that George Washington was never a member of the Young Communist League.

Gordon Dean, head of the Atomic Energy Commission, said in a speech in Los Angeles recently that the time has come to deal firmly with Russia. The time has been here for twenty years, brother, and we didn't have sense enough to know it.

People Who Screamed For The Reduction of Surplus Employes Howl When It's Attempted

Old-Time Religion Has Gone Way Of Bustles, Hoop Skirts

Almost since the time when civilization first began to enjoy the blessing of organized religion, the Evangelist has been a recognized factor in Christian service, and men like Dwight Moody, T. DeWitt Talmadge, Billy Sunday, Sam Jones and other noted preachers of an earlier period devoted practically their entire adult life to this phase of the ministry.

Perhaps they were somewhat dramatic and emotional in their appeals for converts to the cause of Christ and overly vehement in their denunciation of sin and the Devil, but their sincerity was beyond suspicion, their belief in the Bible unquestioned and their loyalty to their country and its institutions, unchallenged.

We still have Evangelists who go about the country supplementing the efforts of local ministers by conducting revival services for church congregations, but any resemblance between some of them and the old-style variety is purely imaginary.

Instead of pointing the way to the Promised Land through the Pearly Gates of Heaven, they are likely to offer the United Nations as the road to Paradise on Earth.

Instead of urging obedience to the Ten Commandments, they may claim that in the abolishment of Segregation and the observance of Civil Rights lies the way to Salvation and Light.

As a substitute for a Heavenly Kingdom in the hereafter, they are as liable as not to hold out for Union Now and instead of committing weak mortals to the tender mercies of a Celestial Bar of Judgement, they are more likely to advocate trial by a Court of International Justice.

Modern Type Evangelist Holds Meeting in Texas

Dr. E. Stanley Jones, who was for many years connected with the Federal Council of Churches before it changed its name to the National Council of Churches, held a series of meetings at the First Methodist Church of Fort Worth recently.

Dr. Jones will be remembered as having been listed as a member of the American League for Peace and Democracy and as a signer of the "World Tomorrow" Poll.

The American League for Peace and Democracy was the recipient of some unkind treatment at the hands of the Committee on Un-American Activities of the Congress of the United States, having been described by that committee in these rather uncomplimentary words:

"The largest of the Communist Front movements in the United States is the American League for Peace and Democracy. . . . The League contends publicly that it is not a Communist Front movement, yet at the very beginning Communists dominated it. Earl Browder was its vice president. An examination of the Program of the League will show that the organ-

For years the air has been rent with justified shrieks of protest against so many Federal employes and the demand was almost universal for a reduction in the number of leeches fattening on taxpayers' money.

Just as soon, however, as the new administration tried to whittle down the personnel of some of the agencies and thin out surplus job-holders so that they wouldn't fall over each other's feet, an equally strong protest went up against it.

This was especially true in the case of the soil conservation division when Secretary Benson tried to re-organize it so as to eliminate some of its personnel.

It seems that this particular agency had multiplied and reproduced itself to such an extent as to make guinea pigs seem sterile and unproductive.

At the proposed re-organization and reduction in force, the soil conservation experts in 2500 regional offices throughout the country set up a howl that would rival that of a similar number of hungry hyenas in the African jungle.

Evidently they could not face the possibility that they might have to quit "experting" and start plowing.

The incident also pointed up the hypocrisy in some sources for the demand for State's Rights. The re-organization plan proposes to gradually put the responsibility for soil conservation up to the States where it properly should be and leave the Federal Department of Agriculture in the role of an advisor, but the regional offices answered right back that the agricultural colleges in the States didn't want the responsibility.

How weak, flabby and inept can the citizens get?

We Love It And Admit It

If our readers have gotten the impression that we are exceedingly elated over the complimentary references to us and to the Southern Conservative reproduced elsewhere in these columns, we want to assure them that they are dead right. We are.

And if they don't think that such commendation by good Americans is sweet music to the ear of one whose favorite indoor sport is taking cracks at Communist skunks and their American defenders, they have another guess coming.

We don't mind what subversives say or think of us so long as American patriots are on our team.

For some reason not clear to us, William O. Douglas of the Supreme Court was invited to address students of the University of Texas recently. In a press interview while in Texas he said hunger is the strong ally of Communists and implied that poverty was the reason most persons became converts to the Communist cause. Apparently none of the reporters asked him to reconcile this statement with the actions of Frederick Vanderbilt Field, the hundreds of Park Avenue Pinks, the Spies in government and defense plants. They were not hungry.

ization was nothing more nor less than a bold advocate of treason."

The "World Tomorrow" Poll voted in favor of Socialism, a drastic increase in inheritance and income taxes, and a "cooperative commonwealth" to replace Capitalism.

THE TENTH AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES:

The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people.

A Reflection On The Memory Of The Great John Marshall

The appointment of Earl Warren of California as Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States can only be explained on the assumption that his selection was decided upon by White House advisers while the president's mind was on vacation.

With Frank Holman, Clarence Manion and scores of other renowned and brilliant exponents of American jurisprudence available, the choice of the Californian who is regarded by some as a Republican, by others as a Democrat and by most as a Socialist, can only mean that the low standard of judicial performance among members of our highest tribunal is not to be lifted.

It insures that this once great and incorruptible body set up solely for the administration of justice in accordance with the provisions of the Constitution, and of American tradition, will continue to bypass Congress and enact social legislation for the benefit of the nation's minority groups.

It is, in brief, a warning to the citizens of the United States that they must agree to the unconditional surrender of all hope for the restoration of ability, impartiality and judicial integrity as requisites for appointment to the American Court of Last Resort.

If the appointment of Martin Durkin to a Cabinet post was "incredible", the selection of Earl Warren as Chief Justice is little short of an American tragedy.

"Let's get out of the House that Hiss Built before it is too late," says Mrs. E. M. Foley of New York.

From a Savannah, Georgia, business man: "Your editorials are often quoted in our local pro-American papers, this city being one of the few in the United States that has a pro-American press"

In Government There Is No Substitute For Statesmanship

One of the most heartening events in recent political history was the disinterment of the Monroe Doctrine by administration leaders in Washington.

With our finger in every pie in every nation of the world and our troops and money scattered over practically every section of the earth, recourse to this policy may appear inconsistent, if not downright ridiculous, but if it indicates a trend back to sanity, we can afford to repress our cynical smiles.

It was invoked in the case of the attempted Communist coup in British Guiana and the world was informed that efforts to establish any Communist government in the Western Hemisphere would be regarded as an act of aggression.

Do-Gooder's Paradise Where Talking When He Should Theorists Have A Field Day Have Been Listening Words, some spoken and some written, were bandied about by the millions at the recent Fourth National Conference of UNESCO at the University of Minnesota, according to Don Raihle, weekly columnist in THE WANDERER, published in St. Paul.

Representatives of heterogeneous groups, classes, creeds and kinds were present to contribute their suggestions for improving the world's cultural standards, one gathers from Mr. Raihle's report.

"Perhaps never before in any seminar or discussion group has so much wordiness been concentrated in such a short period of time," says the Minnesota columnist, who added that it proved to be a talkathon with plenty of opportunities for those with glib tongues to express their pet theories.

Describing UNESCO as a Do-Gooder's Paradise where theorists have a field day, and where so many ramifications of what makes the world tick are involved that they may easily hurt any opportunity they possess for good, Mr. Raihle sums up the situation in this philosophical observation:

"What happens when efforts of students are spread so thin is that they learn less and less about more and more until eventually they know practically nothing about everything."

Mr. Raihle's observations on the "unbiased" Salomon report on UNESCO which absolved it of all charges leveled by its critics is priceless.

The Salomon Report resulted when President Eisenhower named three UNESCO delegates to investigate UNESCO. Mr. Raihle likened the procedure to members of "Murder, Inc." being put on a grand jury to investigate "Murder, Inc."

The Salomon Report, naturally, whitewashed UNESCO and gave it a "clean bill of health," but Mr. Raihle intimates that the Jenner Committee may finally do a job on it with different results.

"The United Nations flag in the presence of the flag of the United States is a gross insult to George Washington, the founders of our nation, and to every American patriot who consciously fought for American freedom and independence"—Senator Jack Tenney of California.

The observance of this immortal policy by the United States for more than a hundred years sustained and protected this nation against all threats of foreign peril and kept our ship of state anchored in safe waters until Woodrow Wilson buried it by barging into England's war with Germany and Roosevelt sang its requiem with a repeat performance in 1941.

If, by some chance, a time-tested policy of government formulated in the days when statesmanship was in flower and the best brains of the country were conscripted to serve the national interest, is to be revived by the present administration, a grateful and long-suffering citizenship will rise up and call them blessed.

They Didn't Ask Him So He Didn't Tell Them

Here's another neat little item calculated to instill us with still stronger faith in the great world organization "without whose protection and assistance, we could not survive."

Alexander Svenchansky is a Russian-born naturalized American who was working for this country in the United Nations and who was discharged when it was found that he was still a Communist. After he was fired, a United Nations tribunal awarded him damages of $20,000 and several months back pay on his $10,500 salary. (Later it was charged he was involved in an espionage ring spying for Russia.)

Counsel for the Jenner Committee, in trying to find out how the United Nations tribunal happened to give him this large award called him to testify and asked him this question:

"Did you tell the United Nations tribunal which awarded you $20,000 that you were a Communist?" to which this imported patriot replied:

"They never asked me if I was a Communist."

This reminded us of the old story about the snake charmer.

A man and his wife who had been married twenty-five years were sitting in a carnival tent one night watching an Indian snake charmer do his stuff with a six-foot python. Suddenly the performer became ill and was taken off the stage. The manager came out and asked if there was a snake charmer in the audience, whereupon the man's wife got up, went up to the stage, put the python through his paces and finished the act.

Meantime her husband had fainted dead away but when she returned to her seat he revived and asked her: "Why in the name of all that's holy, didn't you tell me you were a snake charmer," to which she calmly replied:

"You didn't ask me."

South American Morals Should Get A Big Lift

A movie actress with red hair, a sultry voice and an overblown bosom will soon be sent out to South American Countries as an Ambassador of Good Will from Hollywood in an effort to bolster the movie capital's prestige and win friends for film performers, according to a press dispatch.

In the same edition carrying the story was a write-up of a divorce contest in a Los Angeles superior court involving one of filmdom's brightest stars in which his wife threw the book at him.

She charged that he would not only leave her at home at night, go to call on a female movie charmer and forget to leave, but also claimed that his favorite stunt at a party was to knock her down, grab her by the foot and drag her across the living room floor.

So she decided to just up and leave him and get a divorce before he got rough with her.

Pondering on both articles, we had the thought that there might possibly be some public relations and missionary work the attractive red-head could do right in her own home town in helping to protect the fair name of Hollywood.

This would not only prevent the necessity for a long trip involving inconvenience and expense but would also save wear and tear on her curves.

Senator Joseph R. McCarthy told a group in Chicago that he is now in the middle of his greatest hunt for Communist skunks and said that "he doesn't give a tinker's dam what his critics say about him." That's telling them.

It has been reported in the press that Chairman Velde, of the House Un-American Activities Committee, has been corresponding with some so-called religious groups including the National Council of Churches in connection with the work of his committee in investigating Communist activities, and especially as it relates to the churches. It is to be hoped that this report is incorrect.

Big Politicians Beat A Path To The Door Of A Sing Sing Prison Cell

Fair Dealers In Both Parties Are Out After Benson's Scalp

In our opinion, Ezra Benson has tried with every means at his disposal to live up to Republican campaign promises by endeavoring to abolish paternalism in his agency of the government.

Benson, head of the Department of Agriculture, is a Mormon from Utah, a type of American holding tenaciously to the unique belief that every citizen should stand on his own two feet.

Even during the Thirties when Roosevelt was capitalizing on the depression and utilizing human misfortune as an instrument for converting the Federal government to Socialism, the Mormons refused to accept what was erroneously referred to as Federal aid, and worked out their own problems.

But twenty years of government dole finally resulted in converting many honest citizens into chiseling bums, even in Utah.

Many of them joined in the modern version of Coxey's Army which converged on Washington in October where they appeared before Department of Agriculture officials, admitted that they couldn't make a living and demanded that the government do it for them.

This trek to Washington by a horde of glorified drugstore cowboys was under the sponsorship of James Patton, president of the National Farmers Union, whose experience in farming has been largely confined to planting the seeds of Socialism in the fertile soil along the banks of the Potomac.

Following their appearance Fair Deal politicians in both parties who always tremble when confronted with group action and stampede in the face of pressure started yelling for Benson's head.

Unless the president stands firmly behind his Secretary of Agriculture and maintains the same political stamina he displayed on the stump, the first politically honest man to head that agency in two decades may have to either hold his nose and administer his department in accordance with the policies of Wallace and Brannen or throw in the sponge and quit.

Regardless of what course is decided on, it will still be just as immoral and unconstitutional for Washington politicians to confiscate the money of all taxpayers and use it to subsidize farmers and ranchmen as it would be for them to underwrite the expenses of pigeon fanciers, street sweepers or baby sitters.

Don't be ashamed to be called a flag-waver so long as the banner you hold aloft is the emblem of your own country and not the mongrel badge of conglomerate nations whose ideals have nothing in common with the glorious aims and traditions of the American Republic.

We have always pointed out as forcefully as we could the domination of labor racketeers over politicians, state and national, but we now find we had only a smattering of knowledge on the subject.

We always thought, for instance, that the influence of Labor Czars ended at the prison gate and that when a union gorilla landed behind the bars, his authority automatically reverted to his trusty lieutenants on the outside.

The power of Joe Fay, however, has remained intact as he languished behind the walls of Sing Sing and thoughtfully contemplated labor's gains during two administrations in Washington.

Politicians all over the East, including New York's lieutenant governor and other high public officials from surrounding States, have beaten a path to the door of his prison cell in order to continue to receive the benefit of his counsel and advice which apparently has guided them throughout the years of their public service.

This is only one small facet of government by remote control and if the invisible forces who exert supreme power over the heads of nations and shape world policies could only be run down and put in prison, we might eventually be able to recognize, combat, and stamp out government by invisible rulers.

Two Names Which Will Go Down in History

Regardless of their position on any other issue, the names of two members of the United States Senate will be written on the nation's imperishable Roll of Honor for their vote on the adoption of the Charter of the United Nations.

In 1945 when this matter was before that body for consideration, the only two men who had the courage, foresight and wisdom to vote against adoption of this subversive document were Senator William Langer of North Dakota and Senator Henrik Shipstead of Minnesota who represented his state in the Upper House at that time.

Unfolding events of history are proving how right they were in registering their opposition to a world organization designed to destroy the sovereignty of the American government and reduce the nation to slave status in a World State.

Unbelievable but true: As Senator Joseph R. McCarthy fought almost single-handed and alone in turning up the spy ring in defense and radar plants, the Attorney General's department was investigating him to see if he had violated any fraud statute or the election laws in the handling of his finances. Later, they announced that the Wisconsin Senator had a "clean bill of health". It seems he is guilty of nothing more than practicing Americanism without a license.

New York Columnist Says We Scooped Him

John O'Donnell, Washington correspondent of the New York Daily News claims that we beat him to the draw in the matter of suggesting that Alger Hiss be sprung from the jug on United Nations Day.

This is his version of the matter as it appeared in his column in the News on October 16:

We don't like to bore the cash customers of this column with our pet peeves, but we have two projects for which we intend to pound the drum.

One is this United Nations Day solemnly proclaimed for celebration come October 24. Good, says this reporter. And we intend to use all our energy to spring Alger Hiss from the Federal hoosegow on this date so that he can preside at the ceremonies.

For too many lazy days we had merely toyed with the idea of getting into print in re this United Nations whoop-de-doo on October 24 (expenses paid by the American taxpayer). And so we got scooped and it served us right because, after all, a United Nations celebration is our particular pet peeve.

We were just about to say what we thought on this, and honestly had the idea in our mind, when a smart gal from Texas whom we'd long admired from a distance comes up with the same idea and does it better.

The lady is Ida M. Darden down in Fort Worth, who many times gave us big belly laughs with her deadpan parodies of Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt in a column called "My Night".

Now Editor Darden is printing a monthly called the Southern Conservative and comes up with this high grade bit of political satire:

On October 24 many groups throughout the country are going to put the little pot in the big pot and whoop it up.

The occasion will be United Nations Day proclaimed to honor the founding of the great international organization set up to end war, restore peace and insure unity among all peoples of the earth.

As a fitting tribute to that great American patriot, Alger Hiss, in whose brilliant mind this superb instrument for universal goodwill was born, a movement should be launched to get him sprung from the jug during that one day in order that he, too, may share in the honor to be accorded the child of his fertile brain.

Petitions should be sent to prison officials demanding that he be released to the temporary custody of some outstanding group of patriots such as the Americans for Democratic Action, for example, who will guarantee his safe return to the institution after he has delivered a stirring address on loyalty as his contribution to the day's program.

In the event an unsympathetic warden refuses to cooperate by giving him a twenty-four hour parole, perhaps it could be arranged to decorate his cell with the flag of the United Nations while his friends and admirers conduct ap-

Republicans Still Have A Chance to Make Good

The repudiation of the Republicans in Wisconsin, New Jersey and other places recently can be turned to good advantage if it is intelligently evaluated and accepted by the White House as a fair warning.

To be brutally frank, voters demanded a complete change last November and now—a year later—they don't think they have gotten it. Any other explanation is stupid.

It is not too late for the president to quit consulting left-wing Liberals who did everything within their power to defeat him and start taking the advice of Conservative Americans who elected him.

There is still time to clean out Fair Dealers, both Republicans and Democrats, in the State Department, in the White House and on his list of possible future appointments.

A majority of Americans voted for a total, prompt and unqualified discontinuance of Truman policies all down the line and they didn't mean maybe.

They were sickened unto death of exorbitant taxes, Socialism, World Government, foreign aid, Communists in government, Federal interference in private affairs of the citizen, price supports, partiality to minority groups, labor union domination, and reckless spending. Period.

If they must continue to have a Socialist government, they apparently will return to the custom of selecting experienced and seasoned Socialists to administer it.

All decent Americans concede that no greater tragedy could befall the nation than for the American people to again be subjected to Fair Deal leadership in Washington.

But they also seem to feel that it is not so hot to have Republicans in power who act like Fair Dealers.

Texas Supreme Court Debunks Truman's Police Action Claim

The Texas Supreme Court in an opinion written by Justice Graham B. Smedley, says it was, too, a war and not a "Police Action" that went on for more than two years in Korea.

A case involving double indemnity in an insurance policy carried by a soldier was brought to the State's high court for decision whose members refused to shut their eyes and contribute to the fantastic delusion that a conflict with more than hundred thousand casualties wasn't war.

It was an illegal war, it is true, because it was not declared by Congress but those who gave their lives in it are just as dead as if it had received full Congressional sanction.

It has always been recognized as a war by every American except a little mule-headed Missourian who had no part in it except to declare it.

appropriate ceremonies on the ground beneath his window.

To carry out this program a committee on arrangements should be selected from among his staunch supporters which would include, among others, Felix Frankfurter, Harry Truman, Dean Acheson and Eleanor Roosevelt.

Top Level Russian Communist Directed Movement Of American Troops In Korea

It will come as a horrible shock to many Americans, as it did to us, to learn that in Truman's Police Action in Korea a Communist in the United Nations was largely responsible for directing American troop movements in that undeclared war.

This information is contained in a pamphlet released by the American Heritage Protective Committee of San Antonio which goes fully into efforts of United Nations to save Red armies from defeat in the recent conflict in Asia.

Throughout the Korean War, or Police Action, Arkady A. Sobolev, a Moscow Communist, held the powerful post of Minister of War, Communications and Information in the United Nations.

In this position, all movements of troops and war materials had to be reported to him in advance and other confidential information passed through his hands. Presumably, he knew beforehand of the death marches, the planned massacres and organized torture of Americans and South Koreans.

Of course this Communist from Moscow didn't relay any of this information to Red China!

Anyway, we continue not only to allow this international nest of spies to remain here and compel American taxpayers to support them, but we have to stand helplessly by and listen to Americans who should know better prattle about this traitorous outfit being "our only hope of peace."

Book By Sworn Communist Collaborator Endorsed By Large Protestant Church

In one of the largest Protestant churches in Fort Worth, and presumably in many others of this and other denominations, there is a table on which there are leaflets and pamphlets for distribution to those who come to worship.

On the back of one of these pamphlets is the printed endorsement of a book containing "62 devotional statements you will want to read and use."

The book is listed as "Living With Peace of Mind."

According to this printed endorsement "Living With Peace of Mind" is "excellent for use in worship services and group study; articles in church bulletins and papers; articles in local or school publications; but most of all for your own personal enrichment."

The author of this book "Living With Peace of Mind" is Kirby Page.

On July 17 of this year, the Committee on Un-American Activities of the House of Representatives of the Eighty-Third Congress, issued a report on its investigation of Communist activities in the United States.

Appearing before that Committee was Benjamin Gitlow, the first man in the United States to be convicted and sent to prison for his part in the Communist conspiracy.

During the 1920's he held many influential posts in the Communist Party and in 1924 and 1928, he was a candidate for vice president on the Communist Party ticket.

In 1929 he was expelled from the

Roosevelt And Truman Poisoned The Water Hole

The removal of more than fourteen hundred small-fry subversives from government positions by the Eisenhower administration will not only give Americans a greater feeling of security but will probably make them more tolerant of slow motion performance in the White House.

All but five of the subversives were hangovers from the two previous administrations for it was, of course, Roosevelt and Truman who poisoned the water hole and contaminated practically every agency of government with the deadly virus of treason.

Practically all unemployed Communists, Soviet sympathizers, and crackpot Liberals who couldn't get a job anywhere else were given positions in some branch of the Federal service, where they had a free rein to plan and plot against the United States.

Compared With Current Type of Traitor Benedict Arnold Was American Patriot

For almost two centuries the name of Benedict Arnold stood out on the nation's roll of dishonor as the one and only traitor to his country.

Today this roster of infamy is so crowded with the list of betrayers who have fallen all over each other in the rush to sell us out, that the memory of the original conspirator against the safety and security of the United States has been shoved clear out of the picture.

Also, it is getting more and more difficult to break down this swelling list of conspirators into groups and decide where "liberalism" leaves off and treason begins.

Candidates for the national Hall of Shame no longer include only such proved traitors as the Rosenbergs, Alger Hiss, Judy Coplon, Greenglass, Sobel, Gold and the small-fry subversives kicked out of government agencies recently. They take in such high-bracket personalities in all walks of life that uncoupled thousands of confused Americans are gradually drifting across the line which marks the difference between loyalty and treason, without consciousness of their contribution to the nation's betrayal.

After all, Benedict Arnold merely sought to advance the interests of England, as opposed to those of the United States, and since this later came to be our national policy of government and in view of more dastardly acts committed by our modern, streamlined type of traitor, perhaps we should re-write a chapter of American history and portray Arnold as a devoted patriot.

Americans More Concerned About Communism Than Sex

There is one encouraging piece of news out of Washington which indicates that decency still holds precedence over degeneracy among the people of the United States.

The report of the Senate Judiciary sub-committee headed by Senator William Jenner of Indiana called "Interlocking Subversion in Government Departments" is selling in greater volume than the Kinsey Report.

The Jenner Report gives a clear and convincing picture of the Communist plot within the Federal government and shows how far the conspiracy against the United States has advanced in that quarter.

The Kinsey Report is a collection of obscene statistical data on sex gathered through interviews with a few thousand prostitutes and female extroverts.

An Eastern newspaper quotes Mrs. Mamie Eisenhower as having given her public endorsement to the United Nations and as having referred to it as our only instrument of peace. Oh no? We can't go through that again!

Youth Group Urged To Oppose Senator Who Exposes Communist Spies In Radar Plants

For too many years, the American people have been tolerant of the inane bleatings of Eleanor Roosevelt on the charitable theory that she was totally without understanding of the potential harm to her country implied in the expressions of her cockeyed philosophy.

We have always maintained that she knew exactly what she was doing and saying and that her partiality to anti-American proposals, movements and individuals was deliberate and was indicative of her real sentiments.

Whether we are right in our assumption or not, no one can dispute that she knew what she was saying when she went on the air in New York recently and advised a "Youth Group" to "have the courage to oppose McCarthyism" and added that they should not be afraid to voice their disapproval of his methods.

This statement followed by a few hours the disclosure by Senator McCarthy that Communist spies were operating inside radar plants and that a network of espionage extending throughout our defense system had been indicated by sworn testimony of one witness after another.

This implied defense of those who are trying to destroy the American government from the inside, keeps her record along that line intact. In all the years she has been bouncing around over the globe, we have never yet known her to utter one word against subversives or in defense of Americanism.

If her latest performance does not turn the stomach of every American who is alarmed for the safety and security of his country, that organ must be made of cast iron.

Lynn Landrum of the Dallas Morning News suggests that ministers should do something more about Communist infiltration of the churches than getting purple in the face.

Communism In Education Traced To Its Source

Those who have watched the dry-rot of Communism and Socialist attack the public school systems in many parts of the country and couldn't understand the source of contamination, should read a new book put out by the Meador Press of Boston.

The author is Verne P. Kaub of Madison, Wisconsin, who is one of the nation's highest authorities on the subject of the infiltration of this deadly economic and social disease and an expert in tracing its slimy course from Moscow on down into the core of American schools and churches.

The name of the book is "Communist-Socialist Propaganda in American Schools" and it tells Americans many things they need to know about the National Education Association which directs the thinking of American school teachers.

party on orders from Joseph Stalin, following Gitlow's refusal to go along with policies which he had finally come to recognize as being aimed at the total destruction of the American form of government.

Since that time he has tried to make amends by giving information on the inside workings of the Communist organization to investigating committees and through his writings exposing the Soviet conspiracy.

In his sworn statements before the Committee on Un-American Activities Mr. Gitlow, in answer to questions, gave this testimony as shown on page 2075 of Part 6 of the Committee report:

Mr. Kunzig (Committee Counsel): "Do you mean to say that even though the Communist Party was an atheistic organization, it nevertheless adopted a policy for the infiltration of religious organizations?"

Mr. Gitlow: "The policy in those days was framed in such a way that the members of the Communist Party could infiltrate church organizations for the purpose of conducting their propaganda among them, for enlisting their support for Soviet Russia and for the various campaigns in which the Communists were interested."

Mr. Kunzig: "Mr. Gitlow the House Committee on Un-American Activities is interested, of course, in the valuable background of material which you are giving, but they are also interested in specific examples. Can you cite any specific examples of these tactics to which you are referring?"

Mr. Gitlow: "Certainly. The Russian Communists were the first to exploit ministers of the United States and through them, the church organizations, for the purpose of spreading propaganda in favor of Communist Russia and for the building up of a pro-Soviet sentiment among church people in America and among Americans generally.

"I will, if I may, make mention of a few of the prominent American religious leaders who were used for that purpose in the early 1920's: Dr. Kirby Page, Dr. Sherwood Eddy, Jerome Davis, Dr. Harry F. Ward, the Rev. Albert Rhys Williams and others . . ."

It is this same Kirby Page who is author of "Living With Peace of Mind" which church people are urged to read "for your own personal enrichment."

We respectfully submit this as one in innumerable cases which prove that the overall Communist conspiracy to infiltrate American churches is not exactly a failure.

Oscar Ewing Is Out But His Dream of Socialized Medicine Is Coming True

Communist or Socialist policies, which are one and the same, do not become fastened on a nation suddenly, but worm their way in by a gradual process, always under the guise of a necessary service.

That is what is happening in this country right now regarding Socialized Medicine.

Although the Constitution of the United States makes no provision for it and although the Congress has refused to enact legislation providing for mass medication, it looks like we are going to have it forced on us any way.

Dr. Walter B. Martin, president-elect of the American Medical Association warned of it in an address to the Southern Medical Association at Atlanta, Georgia, recently.

Speaking of Federal medical services in general, Dr. Martin said:

"Already a large number of people have a vested interest in Federal medical care. Other groups may be added such as Federal government employes, their dependents, the indigent and medically indigent in our general population . . .

"Of this we may be sure. The present situation will not remain as it is. Federal medicine will continue to expand as it has expanded during the last fifteen years unless the trend is reversed by the informed voting population of this country."

Of course the "informed voting population" of this country thought they had "reversed the trend" last November, only to find that the man they selected to lead them out of Socialism and away from such things as Socialized Medicine had, somehow, become obligated to set up a whole new department at a time when the American people were demanding a reduction, rather than an increase, in Federal agencies.

It is this new department which is gradually bringing Socialized Medicine to Americans who, only a year ago, thought they were taking proper action to stamp it out.

This new department was brought into being as a result of one individual's whim, but probably could not be abolished through the combined efforts and opposition of millions of Americans which seems to us a perversion of the theory of a "government of the people, for the people and by the people."

Any way, Socialized Medicine is gradually creeping up on us according to the AMA head, who should certainly be the highest available authority on the subject in this country.

Oscar Ewing has gone from government but it is obvious that his blueprint for Socialized Medicine was retained in the files.

NEXT EDITION WILL BE OUT IN JANUARY

Every year, we put out the November and December issues of the Southern Conservative in one edition. This is to allow us time to try to finance the paper for the coming year.

Since the Southern Conservative opposes Communism, Socialism, and all other Un-American ideologies, we do not receive financial assistance from large Foundations and other wealthy groups who sponsor only such movements, activities and publications whose objectives are to eventually destroy the American form of government and set up a totalitarian State.

Those who want to help make this distasteful financial chore easier for us may make check payable to the Southern Conservative Foundation, Inc., (chartered by the State of Texas as a non-profit, tax-exempt activity.) Address 703 Flatiron Building, Fort Worth, Texas.

Commentator Pays Tribute To Southern Conservative

We are very much indebted to Don Bell, political commentator on Radio Station KOMA at Tulsa, for some complimentary references to the Southern Conservative.

Preceding one of his recent broadcasts on the United Nations, Mr. Bell took time to hand us this nice bouquet:

Before beginning our special report this evening, I should like to take time to pay tribute once again to a patriotic and brilliant editor, Ida M. Darden of Fort Worth, Texas, whose newspaper, the Southern Conservative, should be in the home of every patriot in the United States.

Her writings are always brilliant but there are times when her special gift of sarcasm and wit get the job done better than all the serious word-wranglings of all the rest of us put together. In her last edition, she's done it again.

I am going to assume that permission is granted to broadcast it and take the chance, because her article concerning the United Nations and October 24-officially proclaimed eighth birthday of this atheistic order of One-Worlders, Internationalists, Socialists, Communists, ADA'ers and what have you—is too precious to pass unnoticed by a single person within hearing distance of this or any other radio station.

Under the headline "It Seems Unfair to Observe United Nations Day While Its Founder is Still in Stir" Editor Darden writes this:

"On October 24 many groups throughout the United States will put the little pot in the big pot and whoop it up.

The occasion will be United Nations Day proclaimed to honor the founding of the great international organization set up to end war, restore peace and insure unity among all peoples of the earth.

As a fitting tribute to that great American patriot, Alger Hiss, in whose brilliant mind this superb instrument for good will was born, a movement should be launched to get him sprung from the jug during that one day in order that he, too, may share in the honor to be accorded the child of his fertile brain.

Petitions should be sent to prison officials demanding that he be released to the temporary custody of some outstanding group of patriots, such as the Americans For Democratic Action, for example, who will guarantee his safe return to the institution after he has delivered a stirring address on loyalty as his contribution to the day's program.

In the event an unsympathetic warden refuses to cooperate by giving him a twenty-four hour parole, perhaps it could be arranged to decorate his cell with the flag of the United Nations while his friends and admirers conduct appropriate ceremonies on the ground beneath his window.

"We owe to posterity as much security and freedom as the Founding Fathers provided for our forebears to pass on to us and we will regret the day we fail this obligation"—Edward W. Focke, Dayton, Ohio.

We suppose we can breathe easier now that Eric Johnston has been sent to the Far East to ease tension. Mr. Johnston who once visited Russia and came back with words of praise for that country, was also a tension easer for Truman. We hope he has better luck easing tension in India than he did in Texas one time when he made one of his rip-snorting speeches in defense of an anti-Southern motion picture. In that case no tension was eased and censors went right ahead and banned the picture as if he had not spoken.

Walter Reuther has won a thumping victory. Senator Irving M. Ives of New York has been named chairman of a Senate labor sub-committee to make recommendations to the next Congress on amendments to the Taft-Hartley law. What a tribute to the late author of that measure.

Maybe it's the result of Progressive Education which makes modern children so much more advanced than those of another day but anyway Police Departments of many cities had to call out reserves and extra squads this year to keep the kiddies from shooting up the town in what were once simple and harmless Halloween pranks.

Even though our national indebtedness is somewhere around $270,000,000,000, the American people have just been informed that we gave away in Foreign Aid $7,000,000,000 in the year ending July 30. What we can't understand is how an individual, or a nation, can give away something they don't have.

appropriate ceremonies on the ground beneath his window.

To carry out this program a committee on arrangements should be selected from among his staunch supporters which would include, among others, Felix Frankfurter, Harry Truman, Dean Acheson and Eleanor Roosevelt."

That was written, as I said before, by Ida M. Darden. While this article may seem exceptional because of its timeliness and biting humor, it's just part of one column of eight pages of newspaper which is crammed full of authentic information, edited so you can understand the importance of the news.

Send her five dollars, your name and the name of a friend whom you'd like to read the paper, too, and then get prepared for twelve monthly editions containing articles which live up to her editorial slogan—"Millions of Americans think it—the Southern Conservative says it."

The Houston Post, owned partly by a member of President Eisenhower's Cabinet, was strongly denounced in a recent resolution passed by the Executive Board of the Women's Republican Club of Harris County, with headquarters in Houston.

The ire of the Republican women was directed against the Post as a result of a recent series of articles by one Ralph O'Leary attacking various unrelated groups and individuals because they opposed the practice of tax-supported institutions being turned over to subversive speakers who come to that city to promote Communism, Socialism and other New Deal and Fair Deal objectives.

"We are gravely concerned about the future prospects of the Republican Party, especially in Texas," says the preamble of the resolution.

"We appreciated and approved the recent effort of Mr. Leonard Hall, the chairman of the national executive committee, on his recent visit to Texas to solidify and inspire the groups who united their efforts in the last presidential campaign. His efforts, however, we fear, have been nullified by recent events to which we shall now refer:

"We deprecate and deplore the unfounded and unfair attack the Houston Post is making upon the civic, religious and political actions of the large groups of vigilant, conservative-minded citizens in such patriotic, civic and religious organizations as the Minute Women, the Committee for the Preservation of Methodism, the Circuit Riders and the Citizens Conservative League.

"To this group of patriotic and conservative citizens, the nation and the Republican Party are largely indebted for the election of President Eisenhower and the turning of the tide against Communism, Socialism and One-Worldism which had all but destroyed our constitutional republican form of government.

"Especially do we deplore such an attack by the Houston Post in view of the fact that it may be reasonably considered an organ of the present administration in view of its ownership and control by a member of the President's cabinet.

"The fact that some of the individuals being attacked may have opposed, by letters to their senators or representatives or to the President, making the Secretary of Education, Health and Welfare a Cabinet post, is no justification, in our minds, for such an unfair attack, yet is reasonably suspected to be one, if not the principal, motive for it . . ."

Copies of the resolution were furnished newspapers, local, state and national leaders of the Republican Party, and the Speaker of the national House of Representatives.

Evidently Alger Hiss hasn't changed since being put behind bars. His New York attorney said recently that his client didn't want any publicity when he makes his next attempt to get a parole and added: "publicity never helps this kind of thing". Hiss didn't want any publicity either when he was doing the things that landed him in prison and he was protected from it by two men in the White House.

Working with Alger Hiss in drawing the first draft of the United Nations Charter was Russian-born Leo Pavolsky who was an official of the American State Department at the time. At San Francisco, these two worked side by side. And look what we got!

Texas Man Must Prove He Was Born Or Lose His Job

A Mr. John Rice of Houston, employed in a branch of the Federal government, is in serious difficulties which may result in the loss of his job.

It seems he is unable to prove that he was born and the government won't take his word for it.

There is a federal rule that all employes must have documented evidence in the form of a birth certificate proving that, at some time in the past, they were born and are not just trying to pull a fast one in claiming they were.

Mr. Rice knows that he was born in Lubbock, Texas, thirty-eight years ago but his superiors take a dim view of the whole thing and seem to feel that he has entered some sort of collusion with unknown conspirators to prove that he is here on earth when, as a matter of fact, he is still dwelling in Never-Never land.

At the date of his birth no records were kept in Lubbock, his family moved away from there when he was five years old and he can locate no one in that city who is willing to testify to his birth.

The incident reminds us of the late Will Rogers who, on applying for a visa to visit some foreign country was asked for his birth certificate. He told the immigration official he didn't have any. He was then asked if he could produce a witness who would testify to his birth and the noted humorist replied: "No, I can't even do that. Out in Claremore, Oklahoma, where I was born, we didn't have any witnesses. It was a sort of private matter."

He got his visa.

All Honor To The Governor Of Utah

For one of the most outstanding examples of courage, wisdom and sheer Americanism, we pay tribute to the Honorable J. Bracken Lee, governor of the sovereign State of Utah.

Not only did he stand alone and unashamed at the Conference of Governors at Seattle in demanding the passage of a resolution calling for an investigation of the United Nations and its possible infringement on the American Constitution, but he also proved his undivided loyalty to the United States by refusing to call on the citizens of Utah to observe United Nations Day.

"I do not wish to give the United Nations my support until I am fully convinced that it is in the best interests of the American citizens" Governor Lee said in explaining why he would have no part in promoting ceremonies honoring this world group.

In an era marked by knee-bending subservience on the part of high officials to subversive propaganda movements, the action of the Utah governor is as refreshing and reviving to lagging spirits as a gentle shower of rain on the parched sands of the desert.

We wonder who started the fad of making ex-Army Generals presidents of universities and on what did they base their conclusions that they are qualified for such posts?

Overall Security of Republic Is Paramount to Political Fortunes of Any Man or Set of Men

The destinies of the human race have always been moulded by leaders who recognized and grasped opportunity when it knocked at the door.

A hill at Toulon gave Napoleon his opportunity and he beat back the British and established a republican form of government in Europe. An arm of the ocean gave Nelson his opportunity and he destroyed the Spanish fleet and made England mistress of the sea.

One of the most tragic examples of lost opportunity in history was recorded when the Eisenhower administration failed to obey the directive of American voters and line up immediately, openly and solidly behind a concentrated drive to halt treason and smoke Communists out of government.

One valiant member of the Republican Party had already risked his personal reputation and imperiled his political future by pointing the way toward exposure and elimination of top-flight Communist traitors in far-flung agencies of the Federal government.

Friendly support, public encouragement and cordial cooperation by the President with a Wisconsin senator, instead of confidential consultations with a New York governor, would not only have imbued the American people with a greater feeling of security, but would, also, have permitted the White House to share in the reflected glory which now shines on the lone and resplendent figure of Joe McCarthy who doggedly followed the slimy Communist trail right into the heart of American defense.

The American people are not primarily interested in inter-party bickering, jealous factions or petty disagreements over "methods" but they are vitally concerned in the safety and security of their country which is faced with the greatest threat to its survival since a bleak winter at Valley Forge in those desolate days of the long ago.

What We Don't Need Is More Reformers

A meeting of career ladies was held in Houston sometime ago which, according to press reports, was attended by "a group of successful women who aren't content to sit back until certain reforms have been accomplished both in their own localities and throughout the world."

One of their aims, it was stated, is to secure universal jury service for women and another is "to improve the condition of women in countries where the female is still confined to home, child and husband care."

In our opinion, these good ladies could find many things more worthwhile to get worked up over.

Personally, we thank them for trying to get us a job serving on a jury but we don't want it. We just don't care to be locked up over night with a hung jury, male or female, and we are willing to get juicy morsels of scandal in divorce cases and the gory details of murder trials from some other source.

Also, we can see nothing grievously wrong in a situation which compels women to stay home with their husband and children, attend to their own knitting and let outside activities go hang.

Energetic and nose groups of women who are knocking themselves out trying to institute both domestic and international reforms need to be reminded that the world is staggering now from well-intentioned interference by meddlers trying to work out their destiny.

What we need is fewer, and not more, reformers to save the people of the various countries around the globe. We have a sneaking suspicion that if we will just let them alone, they will save themselves. Any way, most of them don't want to be saved.

If the good ladies want to render a real service to mankind, they should initiate a movement whose objective is to reform the reformers and give humanity a good long rest from the bores who want to make people over.

Meantime, far from advocating changes and reforms in everything and everybody, we are firmly of the conviction that the private and political morals of the nation would be greatly improved if we could only get back where we used to be.

We'd gladly settle for that.

Who remembers when the National Farmers Union was composed of farmers?

Only The Guilty Invoke The Fifth Amendment

One of the most disgusting spectacles Americans have witnessed in recent years is the constant parade of suspected subversives before Congressional investigating committees demanding protection of an instrument which they seek to dishonor.

There are those who feel that some of these Fifth Amendment Americans who refuse to say whether or not they are Communists, are merely taking this position as a matter of principle and may not necessarily be Communists.

We want to go on record that we think every man and woman who has hidden behind the Fifth Amendment in order to keep from incriminating themselves, are, or have been, Communists, and that they don't know what principle is.

Accompanied by a slick lawyer, they almost invariably refuse honest answers to any question and spend all their time before the committee in concocting evasive, misleading and equivocal replies. Nobody can convince us that every last one of them, male and female are not, or have not been, Communist skunks.

The natural impulse of any American who is completely innocent of subversive connections would be not only to deny such affiliations emphatically but they would be so insulted at the implication of such affiliation that they would express their resentment in no uncertain terms.

For that matter, they are not called before the Committee in the first place unless there is convincing evidence that they have engaged in subversive activities.

Americans are getting tired of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution being employed in the protection of our internal enemies and it is possible that action may be taken at the next session of Congress which will make it impossible for this provision to be used as a shield for traitors.

Petrilla's Gorillas Put The Bite On Dick Haymes

Like Tennyson's brook, the troubles of Dick Haymes, the Hollywood crooner, seem to run on forever.

As if divorces, lawsuits, alimony, blondes, income taxes and bouts with immigration authorities were not enough, Petrilla's gorillas in the American Federation of Musicians were reported to have put the bite on him for hundreds of dollars before they would "permit" him to sing in a night club.

Before this Musical Maffia gets through with him, Haymes will probably withdraw all objections to deportation proceedings and be willing and glad to go back to Argentina where only one racket is permitted to be operated and that is the one run by Peron himself.

It Could Have Been Worse But Not Much

For twenty years presidents of the United States have made appointments which have offended the American conception of qualified material for high office and there is no particular reason why we should have been so upset over the selection of Earl Warren as Chief Justice of the Supreme Court.

After all, we were around when the other members of that body were named.

It was just that the vacancy on the court offered an occasion beyond compare for the new administration to retrieve the high tribunal from mediocrity, and begin to build it back toward the place in public confidence it once enjoyed, and we couldn't believe this opportunity would be passed up.

There is no question of the personal honesty and integrity of the New Chief Justice but there is serious doubt of his ability to keep his left-wing political views from creeping into his judicial decisions.

The world is full of men who are able to draw a fine line between their impeccable personal behavior and their deplorable political action.

As private citizens, they meticulously obey the Ten Commandments but as public officials, they totally ignore the Constitution.

Perhaps we are too pessimistic and are magnifying the potential harm to our institutions and traditions out of all proportion to the actual danger.

Maybe a miracle will happen and Warren will turn out to be an able and impartial jurist who will reflect glory and credit on his exalted position. Stranger things have happened, although we can't think when.

In the meantime, we will try to remember that we should be thankful for many things.

We should probably be grateful that we don't have a Federal Bureau of Spiritual Service called the Department of Religion with Father Divine as its head.
