

SA loses fifth vice-prez

SERENE

By CAROL SCHLUETER

Students' Association (SA) has a new vice-president for the fifth time this year when Kathy McFarland submitted her resignation at the Student Senate meeting Monday night.

Jan Serene, senator (A&S) and chairman of the Rules and Judiciary Committee, ascended to the vice-presidency by the SA line of succession. Sen. Linda Kirby (A&S) will fill his post on the Rules and Judiciary Committee.

In her letter, McFarland said she had to resign to finish the thesis portion of her master's degree. Paul Rogers, SA president, said McFarland planned to get a job because of financial difficulties.

"I hoped she would be able to work things out. I'm sorry to see her go," Rogers said.

This is Serene's second year in SA. He served as sergeant of arms in 1971 and as vice-chairman of the Rules and Judiciary Committee in the Summer, 1972. When McFarland became vice-president under Rogers, Serene moved up to chairman.

The five vice-presidents who have served in 1972 are David Gardner, Danny Moos, Rogers, McFarland and now Serene.

Serene, a political science senior, will participate in only two more senate meetings this semester.

"There isn't too much I can do in the next two weeks," Serene said. "I will wait until January and then get going," he added. The first senate meeting for next semester will be January 15.

Serene said he plans to reorganize the office of the vice-president and work with SA and senate committees in the near future. As vice-president, he will also be a non-voting member of the UC Policy Board.

During the Christmas holidays,

Serene and other senators plan to reform the SA constitution, write a code of ethics for senators, and revise the senate standing rules. The revisions will form a major code of management.

"I'm really excited about it," Serene said of his appointment. He added he feels qualified and capable for the office.

"It will really just be a change of duties more than anything else," he said. Serene said he will have to learn a lot about fiscal matters to fulfill his office duties.

"Jan deserves the office and I know he will do an excellent job," Rogers said.

Serene will serve as vice-president until the end of his term in March. He declined to say if he planned to run for the office again in the spring elections.

McFarland will continue to serve on the search committee for a new dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, Serene said. McFarland could not be reached to comment on her resignation.

ARA lettuce dispute makes no progress

By CONNIE COOPER

Although students voted two to one in favor of boycotting non-union lettuce in the November 15 and 16 referendum, no progress has been made in the attempt to satisfy both sides of the dispute concerning migrant farmworkers.

ARA Food Service management met Tuesday afternoon to discuss a solution to the lettuce boycott problem. "We are trying to find the best approach to the boycott issue," Jim Hamlett, director of UC dining services, said. "We have to figure out how to feed the other 95 per cent of the people."

Hamlett said the ARA management failed to reach a final decision concerning the lettuce boycott. He declined to comment on what was accomplished at the meeting.

Bill Scott, director of the UC, said the cafeteria removed the lettuce Tuesday and only served it to those people specifically requesting it.

Scott said the profanities written on the signs announcing the removal of the lettuce indicated that the people who want to eat lettuce are much more against removing the lettuce than against the plight of the migrant farmworkers.

Citing the fact that less than 5 per cent of the students voted for the boycott, Scott said, "You seem to have more people wanting lettuce than not."

He said the ARA Food Service was trying to find the most appropriate solution to the problem.

"They want to do the best they can to accommodate the greatest percentage of the people," Scott said.

In other attempts to enforce the outcome of the recent referendum, SA Pres. Paul Rogers, said the SA is rewriting the resolution in support of the lettuce boycott. The new resolution will state that the UC Policy Board does not want ARA to serve anything but United Farmworkers lettuce.

Rogers said he is fairly certain the new resolution containing stronger wording will pass when SA presents it at the UC Policy Board meeting next week.

Senators set up impeachment rule

After an hour and a half of discussion, amendments and amendments to amendments, the Student Senate established a code of impeachment at Monday night's meeting.

The code outlines the procedures to be taken by the Students' Association (SA) attorney general, the senate's Rules and Judiciary Committee and the senate, when an officer or appointee of SA is impeached.

The code, written by SA Att'y Gen'l Richard Dawson and newly-appointed Vice-Pres. Jan Serene, defines impeachment as "proceedings against an official, elected or appointed, of SA for nonfeasance or malfeasance of office."

Nonfeasance is the failure of any official to perform the duties, responsibilities or functions of office. Malfeasance is the improper or unlawful conduct by an official in the performance of his or her duties, the code explains.

SA CLOSED SESSION

Homecoming events probed

A special Students' Association (SA) committee will meet in a closed session at 3 p.m. today in the Cascade Room, UC, to investigate alleged wrongdoings at the November 11 homecoming game, Ralph Behrens, law student, said Tuesday.

"We want to find out just what happened at the game," Behrens said. "Based on these findings we will make a report to SA about the future of Homecoming at UH."

Some of the guidelines concerning dress and sex of the escort of homecoming queen candidates were unclear on the night of the game, Behrens said.

The committee has asked some students to testify before them in private. They will be questioned individually as to what happened on the night of the game and will be asked for suggestions on future homecomings, Behrens said. Students will be free to discuss their testimony after the committee has finished questioning them, he said.

"We just want to talk to the students without having a loud audience," Behrens said.

After hearing all testimony the committee will submit a written report to SA on their findings, he said. This report will be made public and will possibly contain the suggestion that in the future UH students elect a Homecoming Queen and King.

To the Editor:

Re: The letter from 211817 of November 28.

I sure am glad that it was only 20,000 men killed and not the gross exaggeration of 40,000. For a minute there I thought the number of men killed in Vietnam amounted to something, but if it's only a mere 20,000 dead, happy days!

I realize Richard Nixon was not directly responsible for calling out the National Guard, but indirectly he played a very important part. The people in his administration and all those who believe in his sick ideology were the ones directly responsible for the killings and the white-wash that came after.

The reason the farmers are earning a living without supplementary help is because of the massive and wasteful subsidization program the administration allows to exist. Does your father get paid money by the government not to plant? You are probably one of those who scream about the welfare program.

If 211817 would read the U.S. Constitution, he would find that the right to peacefully assemble is in the Bill of Rights.

P.S. I'm glad you consider me an intellectual and group me with the people of Massachusetts and all the other 'fools.' At least we will be able to live with our consciences. What about you?

To the Editor:

Having been at least once in my life one-half of a conjugate coupling, I decided to take a venereal disease test at the University Health Center. I'm new to Houston and its infectious notoriety.

All personnel at the center were extremely courteous. The girl at the reception desk was pleasantly indifferent as I asked for the test. The nurse called my name and asked, "Now, what's your problem?"

I smiled, "I want a VD blood test." Missing only a half-step, she silently led me to an examination room.

I heard my file lifted from the closed door, a short pause and the doctor briskly walked in. "Now tell me all about it," he rumbled.

"There's nothing to tell," I said. "I have no symptoms. I don't think anything is wrong, but with Houston's high rate of VD, I figured it would be wise to have one. Frankly, what VD can do scares the hell out of me."

"So, you're scared," he asked, "when was the last time you had a VD test?"

"I've never had one," I answered.

Choking only slightly, Dr. B. repeated himself, "You've never had one?"

"No, sir." (I've never had a pregnancy test either, as a man, I've never felt the need for one.)

Whereupon he quickly initiated my lab slip and sent me down the hall. The lab tech was efficient and friendly. Any tension I might have had was dispelled by his humor and painless technique. One prick of my finger and I was out the door.

Next day, the same friendly receptionist pulled my file. I was ushered into Dr. B.'s office. He walked in, studied my file and as though unbelieving said, "Your test is negative."

"I understand that at times, a person can be infected but the test is negative and that it's a good idea to take it again, later. Is that true, I asked?"

"It depends on what you're doing," he said. "With what you're doing (what the hell am I doing?) you'll probably have to take it regularly. I haven't had a blood test in forty years (Is there any left?)" He peered over his glasses at me, "Watch it!"

Now I personally believe that catching VD is about as apocalyptic as catching a cold. The prognosis for VD can be, unfortunately, much more serious. Treatment is as easy as dropping your pants. Facing up to VD infection is much harder. Dr. B., you aren't helping any.

Your idea of VD prevention seems to be abstinence. Moving into the world of reality, I suggest you stress the importance of thorough medical treatment, instead. Obviously, treatment of only one member of a couple or group isn't going to prevent reinfection. To the staff of the Health Center, I award an A+ for attitude and professionalism. To Dr. B., I award an A in sincerity and an F in bedside manner. Think about it.

To the Editor:

The furor has passed, but I write this to exorcise personal demons.

The University Senate should have been established. Too much time and thought was put into the concept to have it shoved aside by the student chauvinism called into play.

The majority of students who voted in the election apparently swallowed the us versus them ploy. The faculty has always had more in common philosophically with the student body than with the administration.

It is much more ego gratifying for most students to perceive the situation as some sort of struggle between them and the faculty-administration bloc. It's not.

musical chairs

Remember back in the early spring of 1972 when we voted for a new Students' Association (SA) administration?

Some of you voted for the David Gardner and Paul Rogers ticket. But, that election was nullified by the Student Court so we had another one.

In the second election, some of you voted for Mark Collins and Paul Rogers. Gardner had disappeared from the ticket.

Then late in the summer, Collins vanished and Paul Rogers became president of SA, as stipulated by the constitution.

Not to be outdone by the rapid turnover in the president's office, Kathy McFarland, who ascended to the vice-presidency when Rogers stepped up, threw in the towel at Monday night's senate meeting.

She said she has completed her required hours for her master's degree in sociology and needs time to work on her thesis. Financial problems also affected her decision.

McFarland's resignation is nothing new to the SA vice-president's office. Who can forget the "yes I want it—no I don't—yes I do" see-saw decision the then Vice-Pres. Maria Jimenez made, or didn't make, in the fall of 1971?

She never did retire from that position. Instead, Pres. Steve Umoff quit and Jimenez became the chief executive. Upon her kick upstairs, David Gardner became vice-president which brings us back to the beginning.

The office of vice-president of SA has developed into a stopping place from which local politicians can catapult themselves elsewhere. Whether the office-holders intended it or not, the position has become a temporary one. SA has had four vice-presidents since the beginning of the year.

This practice of playing musical chairs with the office has undermined the effectiveness of the vice-president and neutralized the importance of the position.

Sen. Jan Serene (A&S), chairman of Rules and Judiciary Committee, will become the fifth vice-president of the year.

As head of his committee, Serene has helped re-write SA's election code and, more recently, created a code of impeachment. He takes the problems and responsibilities of his senate office seriously and should activate a vice-presidential office that has been stagnant for too long.

Hopefully, Serene will remain in the position until the current administration's term ends in April.

Former senator predicts disaster

AUSTIN— (UPI) —Former Sen. Ralph Yarborough said Tuesday it would be "another Democratic disaster in 1972" if Robert Strauss of Dallas were elected either chairman or treasurer of the national Democratic Party.

Strauss has been suggested as a possible replacement for party chairman Jean Westwood by the man who defeated Yarborough two years ago—Sen. Lloyd M. Bentsen, Jr. (D-Tex.).

"Strauss came to the fore as a faithful lackey and protege of former Republican cabinet officer and Republican campaigner John Connally," Yarborough said. "The Democratic party needs a new unity and cohesion; Robert Strauss can furnish neither."

Yarborough said a number of Texas Democrats had contacted him asking him to oppose any move to elect Strauss to a national party office. "They regard the Strauss candidacy as an attempted Connally coup," Yarborough told a news conference.

The former senator, long a spokesman for Texas liberals, said he favors postponing election of a new party chairman for up to 90 days to give new Democratic officeholders time to take office and "settle down" before deciding on new leadership.

Yarborough ducked questions about whether Westwood should resign as party chairman, saying, "all indications are she won't have to be kicked out."

"Over a period of time I think she will step down," Yarborough said. "I don't think she should be kicked out in a week's time before the Democrats have had a chance to caucus."

Positions open

The Educational Affairs Committee of Students' Association (SA) is still taking applications for coordinator of the Peer Tutorial System, scheduled to begin operation in the spring semester, 1973.

The coordinator will be responsible for recruiting, screening and training UH students to tutor other students with academic problems.

"A student wishing to apply for the position of coordinator should be able to communicate ideas in more than one way," Sen. Ann Bowen (Social Work) said. That is the only requirement, she added.

Deadline for applications is 5 p.m., December 4.

BAPTISTS, MOSLEMS

Religious groups share ideas

"Is religion relevant to the new generation?" will be the topic of discussion when the Baptist Student Union (BSU) and the Moslem Student Association (MSA) meet Friday night.

Margie Escalera, international student coordinator for BSU, said the meeting will be held at 7 p.m. in the Dallas and El Paso Rooms, UC.

"This is the first time in the history of this campus students will meet to share ideas in hopes of gaining a mutual understanding for the benefit of society," Jawad Saymeh, president of MSA, said.

Joe McClintock, chairman of BSU's international committee on the Executive Council, explained the meeting was suggested by Saymeh, who said, "We hope to share ideas. We don't want to convert you to Islam—we want to understand you."

Two speakers are scheduled for the evening. Dr. Abraham Yazdi, associate professor at Baylor School of Medicine and president of the Islamic Society of Greater Houston, will speak on the relevancy of Islam in today's society.

Jeanette Richardson, director of the Women's Missionary Union at the First Baptist Church of Houston, will speak on the relevancy of Christianity today.

Escalera said her main concern is "translating abstract feelings of love, faith, and hope into concrete expressions so that individuals may understand each other's philosophies."

"This is a great opportunity for students to meet and to discuss their religious beliefs. Religion plays such an important part in our culture that an understanding of each other's religions will be a great help in understanding each other as individuals," she said.

Saymeh explained his hopes for a mutual understanding which he said can lead to world peace.

"Politics has not been the answer to world problems. Religion is the basic principle for humanity and is therefore a better tool for mutual understanding."

This meeting will be the first in a series. "A symposium is scheduled for the spring semester. We will have national speakers from each of the world's five major religions: Hinduism, Buddhism, Christianity, Islam and Judaism," Saymeh said.

McClintock urged students to attend. He said he wants a large input in order to generate ideas and create a greater awareness of religious thoughts.

SA to repeat workshop to aid student legislators

Students' Association (SA) will hold an orientation workshop for all Student Senators Saturday, Sen. Malinda Wilson (EDU), chairwoman of the Educational Affairs Committee, said Tuesday.

The workshop will begin at 9 a.m. in the World Affairs Room, UC, with a general session. The session will last about an hour, Wilson said, and SA officers will preside.

In the morning and afternoon, a series of workshops for senators will be held. The workshops will include fiscal procedures, writing bills, SA department budget reports, parliamentary procedures and general senate business.

All senators and officers will attend the workshop, Wilson said. No SA funds will be involved, she said.

A controversy developed during the Summer, 1972, concerning a bill which allocated $220 "to fund a workshop for the purpose of developing effective legislators."

Although the bill was passed, 15 to 1, former Sen. Larry Shainock, (EDU), who voted against the bill, argued at the time, "If the senators want to have a retreat, let them pay for it themselves." A scheduled agenda for the retreat included guest speakers and workshops.

MED SCHOOL ADMISSION PROBLEMS?

EuroMed
may offer RX via overseas training

For the session starting Fall, 1973, the European Medical Students Placement Service, Inc. will assist qualified American students in gaining admission to recognized overseas medical schools.

And that's just the beginning.

Since the language barrier constitutes the preponderate difficulty in succeeding at a foreign school, the EuroMed program also includes an intensive 8-12 week medical and conversational language course, mandatory for all students. Five hours daily, the course is given in the country where the student will attend medical school.

In addition, the European Medical Students Placement Service provides students with an 8-12 week intensive cultural orientation course, with American students now studying medicine in that particular country serving as counselors.

Senior or graduate students currently enrolled in an American university are eligible to participate in the EuroMed program.

Grand jury frees jailed professor

BOSTON— (UPI) —Harvard Prof. Samuel L. Popkin, who went to jail rather than disclose to a grand jury his sources of information on the Pentagon Papers, was freed Tuesday without having to testify.

Popkin, upon release, questioned the autonomy and power of grand juries to interfere with the rights of educators and others to defend their sources.

Harvard President Derek Bok testified in Popkin's behalf last week, arguing that whether Popkin chose to defend his sources was a moot point, since there was no intention of calling him as a witness.

Popkin was jailed Nov. 21 to serve a sentence of 18 months for contempt of the order to testify before the grand jury.

He was informed the sentence would not be imposed if he answered questions of the grand jury.

However, when Murray discharged the grand jury on a motion by Richard Bachman, assistant U.S. attorney, Popkin was ordered freed immediately and the charge against him was dismissed.

Bachman said he moved for dismissal so as not to conflict with or cause prejudice in the trial of Daniel Ellsberg and Anthony Russo in Los Angeles in connection with the alleged theft and distribution of the papers Lawless was winner of the 1972 UH Teaching Excellence Award and the 1971 College of Business Alumni Association Distinguished Faculty Award.

He received his B.S. degree from UH and his Ph.D. from Texas A&M University. Lawless was chosen Outstanding Graduate Student in Industrial Engineering at Texas A&M in 1967.

He taught at A&M from 1965 until joining the UH faculty in 1969.

Lawless will serve under Dr. Charles F. Jones, former vice-chairman of the board of directors of Humble Oil and Refining Company, who became dean of the business college this fall.

SIDE LINES

With the college football season closing in Houston, we can look back at the 1972 campaign and find our share of both close battles and wide-open mismatches.

The Cougars' final three games in which they outscored their opponents 140-27, would head the mismatch list, closely followed by Texas' 45-9 drubbing of Rice. Thrillers for the year would include UH-Rice, UH-Arizona State and Rice-LSU.

Season's longest battle

But the award for the longest battle of the season would have to go to the Greenway Plaza-Committee for a Civic Center Arena clash. This hook-up started back in August and is still on in the third quarter.

Both groups have presented proposals to City Council. Kenneth Schnitzer, managing partner of Greenway Plaza, Ltd., has offered the Greenway proposal which openly admits a desire for profit.

The downtown group, headed by George R. Brown, board chairman of Brown & Root which holds a multi-billion dollar contract to build the gigantic Texas Eastern Transmission Corporation complex in the downtown area, contends that their only interest is for the good of the public. Without looking at that seriously, let's get to the actual proposals.

Greenway has offered to give the city the seven acre site for the building of the arena and agreed to underwrite $4 million in bonds of the $10 million construction cost.

They have also offered to let the city use its air-conditioning plant at a reasonable rate and save the cost of building a separate facility. In addition, Greenway would provide facilities for 6,000 cars to be parked under cover and would cut the city in for a percentage of the parking revenue.

The downtown group has offered to underwrite $4 million of the $10 million cost for building the arena also. Beyond that, they have nothing substantial to add that could top the Greenway offer.

Since the people of Houston will pay for the arena, and since the people will be using the arena, it stands to reason that the arena should be built at the lowest cost and at a site that will provide better facilities.

The downtown area cannot provide the same amount of parking spaces within the same distance to the arena site as can Greenway. The parking facilities downtown will not be covered either, a big concern to many spectators.

And when there are events at three or more of the five present Civic Center facilities downtown, as there were 222 times last year, it's debatable whether or not there will be adequate parking available downtown.

Second in line of importance is the cost. With having to span the Buffalo Bayou, estimates range from $250,000, according to Brown & Root's engineers to from $2.24 million to $5.46 million, according to Schnitzer's engineers, would be added to the cost of the construction. Regardless of whose engineers you listen to, it's obvious the downtown proposal will cost substantially more.

City Council is having a hard time making its decision about which proposal to take. Maybe they haven't heard from their voters enough to make up their minds. Let's give them some help.

Aquanauts on SWC trail

By BERNIE HARTMAN

For the first year in the history of athletics at Houston, the university has a swimming team capable of major competition. With a team composed of almost 50 per cent recruits, Coach Phil Hansel and his group will take on Southwest Conference aquatic teams.

"There's no question that this team is much improved over last season's group. We got a late start last year and our team was really a volunteer group," said Hansel. The team is made up of 15 freshmen, one sophomore, four juniors and one senior.

Even with such a young team, the UH swimmers will be going against powers such as Texas, TCU, A&M and the tough SMU. Hansel described SMU as the toughest rival Houston will be facing this year in the Southwest Conference.

The next foe will be SMU this Friday in Dallas. Hansel will field a team of about 15, but said that the team was about nine or 10 swimmers deep, "but to be the best, we've got to compete with the best."

Not only will Friday provide many of the swimmers with plenty of experience, but Saturday the remaining six members will join the rest of the team in Dallas for the Southwest Conference relays. The relays will be the first time UH has competed in a wholly Southwest Conference sponsored sports event.

Actually the team, although considered swimmers, has two divers as part of the whole. The divers are Bruce Cant and Keith Weeks, both freshmen. The other swimmers are Gary Baker, Craig Bunch, Eric Carlson, Willie Cobbin, Matt Farmer, Larry Gilmore, George Grant, Joe Hale, Steve Hauser, Terry Hennessey, Fredrick Mesloh, Bruce Sanders and Bob Supple.

Upperclassmen on the team include sophomore Alan Morcum, juniors John Baker, Mike Bartosh, Craig Colton and Richard Kerver. The only senior on the team is Sam Falcona.

Hansel said he thought it might be a little ambitious, but the goal for this year is fourth place in the Southwest Conference, with the major goal being to qualify one UH swimmer in the nationals (NCAA or AAU).

The SMU meet will be held at the university's swimming pool in Dallas but the Southwest Conference relays will be held at Loos Pool, which is near Richardson, Tex., north of Dallas.

Tragedy seems funny

By DONNA TALBOT
Amusements Editor

Remember those old movies you have seen on television about the sad and heavy lives of jazz and blues musicians?

Well, they've made a new one now and it's showing at Loew's Twin Theatres in Town and Country.

In "Lady Sings the Blues," Diana Ross plays (more or less) Billie Holliday. She's superb as the lanky 15-year old, but isn't able to outgrow the character and progress into Billie Holliday, the woman.

The tragedy of a woman who was raped at 15 by a wino, who worked as a prostitute and in a cheap bar, who suffered the effects of drug addiction and withdrawal and who served a prison sentence for possession of illegal narcotics is lost.

We see Holliday in the heights of ecstasy and in the depths of despair, but the effect is shallow and almost comical as director Sidney J. Furie jumps from one scene to another without transition.

Ross's voice is hauntingly reminiscent of Holliday, but the similarity ends there. Holliday's voice is surprisingly light for a blues singer. Maybe that's why Ross fills the bill in this area. However, no matter how light the lyrics may seem (such as in "The Sunny Side of the Street"), Holliday evokes a sense of tragedy. Ross simply isn't able to capture this tragedy.

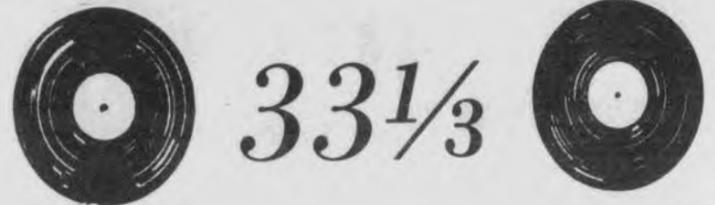

Holliday wrote "Strange Fruit" after seeing a young Southern black boy who had been hung from a poplar tree. If you close your eyes and listen to the lyrics, the horror of that scene and the terror evoked by the Ku Klux Klan in the South are overwhelming. Too bad you can't get the same effect from watching the screen.

Billy Dee Williams (who was Gayle Sayers in "Brian's Song") plays Louis McKay, Holliday's faithful friend and lover. His performance could probably have been tragically convincing, but it, too, lacked needed depth after the film was put together.

Michel Legrand did the score for "Lady Sings the Blues" and the music is the most positive aspect of the movie. Diana Ross just was not able to suffer in the way the role or the blues demand.

That lady just can't sing the blues; she doesn't know how.

Rowan Brothers
by the Rowan Brothers
on Columbia Records

The Rowan Brothers' first album couldn't come more highly recommended. In an interview in Rolling Stone, the Grateful Dead's Jerry Garcia enthusiastically described their music as "sparkly, brand-new and shiny." "They could be like the Beatles," he said, "They're that good!"

Chris and Lorin Rowan play very positive music that bubbles over with the exuberance and healthy energy of youth.

"It's a beautiful morning, I just opened my eyes— Old Mother Nature, you're the greatest surprise," they sing on "Hickory Day," the bright-eyed and bushy tailed tune that opens the album.

The comparison to the Beatles is apt—the song is rich with full-bodied George Harrison holy music even down to the "halle, halle, hallelu...Rama, Rama" chorus.

In "Love with Conquer" a couple of clear acoustic guitars mingle with a ringing mandolin to paint a musical picture of a bristling, sylvan waterfall.

The Rowan Brothers high, sweet and happy voices sound a little like America or Crosby, Stills and Nash (before the melancholic Neil Young joined the group). When singing through an echo chamber, which they often do, they sound a little remote, almost ethereal. But that remoteness is perfect for the other-worldiness of "The Wizard" or the medieval reverence of "Lady of Laughter."

About the only time the Rowan Brothers get down to earth is on "Move on Down," a ridin'-off-into-the-sunset travelling song that opens with the grinding ignition of an old pickup truck.

But even that earthly sojourn is only temporary. The album floats wistfully to a close with "Singing' Song."

"We've been singin' this song ever since the day began... We'll keep singin' this song... spread the music across the land."

Only the sourest cynic will resist their gentle invitation to "sing it around the world." D.A.

JERRY GARCIA of the Grateful Dead described the music of Chris and Lorin Rowan as "sparkly, brand-new and shiny." Their new album, Rowan Brothers, is as fresh and new as they are.

'Butterflies' brings tears

By RON DUSEK

"Butterflies Are Free" is at the Windmill Dinner Theater. Wait!

Before you all run out there with your expectations higher than the "Quasar," let me warn you. You might have trouble adjusting to the new faces portraying the personalities you saw in the movie by the same name. I'll explain in a second.

For the benefit of those of you who have not seen the movie, let me tell you "you'll love it." It's a story about a blind young man, named Don Baker, who leaves his wealthy home and tries to make it on his own, but has problems with his overprotective mother who comes to visit him. And it's also about a young woman, Jill Tanner, who finally realizes that other people are just as real as she is.

The dialogue is wittier than in "Love Story." The story is guaranteed to put a tear in your eye, unless, of course, you're a man. Then it'll only put a lump in your throat. And men, you don't have to worry about clearing your throat and "letting on," because the funny parts are always just seconds away, and no one will suspect you if you clear it then.

I wonder if the women wonder why the men are always clearing their throats during the funny parts.

Since we are in the general vicinity of stereotypes, let me say this to those of you who have seen the movie. Goldie Hawn, who starred in the movie, looked the part of the character of Jill Tanner. A dingy, dumb blond with an "Annie Fannie" body.

Well, Ginger Flick, who plays the part in this production, does not look like the type who would be saying and doing the things that she does. She looks like a hard woman, a hussy, but with a "Pillsbury Dough-boy" body. She was miscast.

John Spencer, who played the blind boy in the Windmill production, was a very convincing blind boy. But, if it's possible for someone to over-act, I think he did in most of the highly emotional scenes.

Jan Sterling, (she's the big name in this production) who played Mrs. Baker, came out with "Mother" written all over her face. As a matter of fact she was able to squeeze out some real tears in a situation in which a real mother probably would have also. And she was also the perfect "tight-assed bitch from Scarsdale," as one of the actors described her.

If you see it, you'll enjoy watching the characters react to the stereotypes they put on each other, and, also, have the opportunity to feel yourself trying to accept a personality without its stereotyped enclosure.

"WONDERS OF THE BUSH" is a design contributed to UNICEF by Papa Ibra Tall, a Senegalese artist, for the 1972 card sales. Cards and calendars are available for sale at several locations in the Houston area.

A $200 music system is not an appliance

(The softness control on the butter dish shouldn't interest you.)

If you are looking around for a music system in the $200 price range you can either go to an audio specialist (like us), or to a large home appliance center or department store. Fearing that at an audio specialty store you won't be able to buy anything for the amount of money you have to spend, you may well go first to talk to the nice man who sold you your refrigerator.

Following him past the air conditioners, all-in-one-stereo-theatres, and freezers, you come to the corner devoted to stereo equipment. "Here's a nice one", he says pointing at a few nameless boxes. "Marked down from $400 to $200 just this week. Buy it. You'll like it. If there is any problem, just ship it back to the factory."

We at Home Entertainment have an alternative: our $210 Sansui/BSR/Creative system. Our experience as specialists in listening to, and carefully evaluating good stereo equipment gives us the ability to carefully choose the best values in low-priced equipment. Each component in our two hundred-dollar system has proved its value reliability in a series of tests on our service bench, each component is guaranteed by our service department for at least 2 years parts and labor. (The speakers are guaranteed for 5).

The receiver is a Sansui 210. There are controls for balance, loudness, volume, bass, and treble. There is a stereo headphone jack. It doesn't have the power to shatter goblets but it produces music with a clarity that is hard to find in an expensive receiver.

The speakers are Creative 22's and are of a bookshelf design. There is a 6-1/2" woofer and a 3-1/2" tweeter. The bass is firm and clean, without any jukebox boominess.

The record changer we are recommending is made by BSR, long known for quality automatic turntables. It can be operated either manually or automatically, there is a convenient cueing control. It comes complete with cartridge and walnut grained base.

The system price is $209.95 which is $64.85 less than the price at which we would sell the components to you separately. It is a great starter system; it will get you into quality stereo music, at a price which will leave you some money to buy records with.

Come talk to us about it. We're specialists, but we don't bite. You may. Thank you.

Scottish awards now available

UH students of Scottish descent may apply for scholarships for graduate study in any university in Scotland, Barbara A. Sacks, assistant director for scholarships and financial aid, said Tuesday.

The Saint Andrew's Society of the State of New York is offering selected students a stipend of $3,750 for one year, Sacks said. This amount is sufficient to cover transportation, tuition and all living expenses, she said.

The awards to study in Scotland are made on a competitive basis to any student from an accredited college or university in the United States.

Basis of selection includes record of academic achievement, participation in other activities, responsible leadership, financial need and employment, evidence of Scottish descent and a statement of personal objectives. In 1961 the Saint Andrew's Society began offering scholarships to Scottish students to study in American universities. The program was expanded in 1965 to allow American students of Scottish descent to travel to Scotland and study.

Application forms are available from the Saint Andrew's Society of the State of New York, 281 Park Avenue South, New York, N.Y., 10010. Deadline for application is February 1, 1973.

CAMP DAVID, Md.— (UPI) — Pres. Richard Nixon today named Elliot L. Richardson as defense secretary and Caspar W. Weinberger as welfare secretary in his "new look" second term administration. He also picked Roy L. Ash to be budget director.

Richardson, now welfare secretary, was chosen to succeed Melvin R. Laird, who announced months ago his plans to give up the Pentagon post.

Weinberger will give up his present Cabinet-level job as budget director to take over for Richardson as head of the sprawling Department of Health Education and Welfare, while industrialist Ash will move into government for the first time to become head of the Office of Management and Budget.

AUSTIN— (UPI) —Some 50 University of Texas architecture students will create a city of ice at a park in Fargo, N.D., in a three-week project beginning January 10.

The students and accompanying professors will live like Eskimos in igloo-like structures on the site where temperatures sometimes dip to -10 and -15 degrees. Some 300 other students from schools around the country and a few from overseas will participate.

"We will create a city, a social structure out of a building material—ice—that can grow and change with changing needs," Gene Lucas, a graduate architecture student, said.

DALLAS— (UPI) —A 29-year-old drug wholesaler was arrested Monday night with what Dallas police termed "the largest haul of heroin in Dallas police department history."

The suspect, who was free on $5,000 bond on a previous narcotics arrest, had two packages of heroin capsules in his hand when officers entered the house near Bishop College. Police found 12 more ounces of the drug on a table along with 59 bottles of an insomnia remedy used to dilute the heroin.

In all there were enough drugs to bring $72,000 on the retail market.

The officers also arrested a 26-year-old woman who drove up to the house while they were there. She had $608 in cash and a revolver in her possession.

WASHINGTON— (UPI) —No one will be drafted into the armed forces in January and the total draft for the first six months of 1973 will be less than 10,000, Defense Sec. Melvin R. Laird said today.

That would make the total draft for fiscal year 1973, which ends June 30, about 50,000.

The draft is scheduled to expire June 30. Laird said he anticipated no problem filling active duty forces after that date with volunteers.

However, he said if Congress did not approve enlistment bonuses for the National Guard and the reserves, there might have to be a special draft after June 30 to keep reserve forces up to strength.

The reserves and Guard are now about 45,000 men short of their authorized strength

By United Press International North Vietnam, its private peace negotiations with the United States in recess, is arranging for extended military aid from Moscow and Peking, Communist radio broadcasts said Tuesday.

A Radio Hanoi broadcast said Chinese Premier Chou En-lai has "severely condemned" the United States for failure to agree to an Indochina cease-fire agreement and signed a 1973 Hanoi-Peking accord on military and economic aid. Communist diplomatic sources in Paris said the Chinese agreed to supply Hanoi free of charge.

SENATE

Senate can initiate impeachment proceedings by demanding, in executive session of the senate, that the attorney general investigate reports concerning the person to be impeached.

If the attorney general finds grounds for prosecution, articles of impeachment will be submitted to the Rules and Judiciary Committee of the senate, the code outlines. Within 72 hours, the committee will notify the accused party and set a time and date for a grand jury hearing.

During an impeachment trial, the Student Senate will sit as a jury and the attorney general will preside. If the attorney general is being impeached, the chief justice of the Student Court will preside, the code states.

During Monday night's meeting, senators argued the code may become a political tool used by campus politicians to harass their political enemies. After several amendments, the senate passed the code 18 to 1.

In other senate business, Ogden Pemberton was appointed as a justice on the Student Traffic Court. Pemberton, a law student, is the first black to serve on any student judicial body. His appointment was unanimous.

The senate also passed a bill to allot $50 for a student Christmas party with the stipulation that if non-United Farm Workers lettuce was served, the money would be withheld from the ARA Food Services.

During the President's Report, SA Pres. Paul Rogers introduced Thomas Blanton, a black student leader who has recently been to Southern University in New Orleans (SUNO). Blanton described the political situation at the school and at Southern's main campus in Baton Rouge where two students were killed two weeks ago.

"The problems at Southern are not unique. They exist at TSU, Texas Southern University, Prairie View and at all black institutions because of inadequate funding," Blanton said.

He said contrary to published reports, students at SUNO are still effectively boycotting classes.
