DEMONSTRATING AGAINST THE VIEWS of UH professor Archer Martin, these students voiced their opinions in a small rally held near the Science and Research building Wednesday.

Petition drive soon becomes verbal contest

By ROSANNE CLARK
Cougar Staff

What started as a small demonstration of people circulating a petition for the immediate termination of Dr. Archer J. P. Martin, a UH chemistry professor, and an end to the administration's "racist" policies turned into a shouting match between a few students and demonstrators over freedom of speech.

Martin, a 1952 recipient of the Nobel Prize in chemistry, joined the UH faculty at the beginning of the fall semester, filling the newly created Robert A. Welch Chair in chemistry.

Because of Martin's statements concerning the sterilization of the poor and those with low intelligence made in an interview with the Houston Post in March 1974, and because of his present position as a member of UH faculty, both Martin and UH have come under criticism from the Committee Against Racism (CAR).

Wednesday's demonstration, sponsored by CAR, was an effort to change UH's "racist" policies by gathering signatures to submit to Students' Association and eventually UH Pres. Philip G. Hoffman, Joe Manning, CAR spokesman, said. The demonstration was held in the area between the Science and Research Building and Agnes Arnold Hall.

The five desires of CAR, according to their petition, are the immediate termination of the campus' contract with Martin; the hiring of black and Chicano faculty, including women, in direct proportion to their number in the community; admission of minority students in proportion to the city population; immediate and permanent funding and departmental status for Chicano studies and Afro-American studies and a rollback in building use fees to 1970 levels.

In Martin's interview with a Post reporter, he is reported to have said, "Society would benefit if such undesirables as the poor, those with low intelligence and those with defects be encouraged not to breed."

He is reported to have said a bonus of money offered for sterilization "would be attractive to poor members of society who are less capable than the rest of society" and called persons who value life "sentimentalists." Martin is said to have attacked pacifists, calling their attitudes nonsense and reportedly adding, "I would like to see the protection of all their houses withdrawn."

CAR said Martin's presence on campus is part of the administration's "racist" policy against blacks and Chicanos and "constitutes a blatant endorsement of the advocacy and enactment of genocidal programs."

Marcia Livingston, CAR spokesperson, said, "The university hires racist liars to teach."

The demonstration became a shouting match between a few students and the demonstrators when one student commented, "A man should not be denied a job because of his own beliefs." He said if the students do not agree (See DEMONSTRATION, Page 2)

Jordan now member of policy committee, starts work soon

Houston Congresswoman Barbara Jordan has been chosen as one of the three members of the House to receive at-large appointments to the House Democratic Steering and Policy Committee.

Committee chairman and House Speaker Carl Albert announced the appointment Wednesday in Washington. The committee determines which representatives will serve on which committees in the next Congress and names committee chairpersons. The committee also helps determine democratic policy and plans in the House of Representatives. The committee is made up of House Democratic leaders, representatives chosen by region and three members at large.

The committee is expected to start work this week to lay out the committee memberships for the next session of Congress. Jordan said.

BEER, WINE

Campus sales start soon

By MIKE SNYDER
Cougar Staff

Wine and beer will apparently be available on campus soon in the hotel dining room of the Continuing Education Center, Dr. James C. Taylor, dean of the Center, said Wednesday.

E. Bruce Curry, assistant director of the Hearings Division of the Texas State Alcoholic Beverages Commission (TABC) in Austin, said formal approval of the Center's application for a permit to sell alcoholic beverages should be mailed Wednesday or today.

Recent decision

The approval comes in the wake of a decision by Texas Atty. Gen. John Hill which gave general approval to the selling of alcoholic drinks at state-supported universities, specifically, the University of Texas and UH.

A similar application by the UC Dining Services has not yet reached Austin for approval, Dining Services Director Jim Lawrence said.

Taylor expressed surprise when he learned of the approval of the application. He said the sale of wine should begin in the dining room sometime after the first of the year.

"As soon as we receive official approval of the application," he said, "we will begin making plans for the sale of drinks in the dining room."

He said a great many steps had to be taken to satisfy the conditions of the TABC before the actual sale of the drinks could begin. "Administration approval is also needed," he said.

Wine first

Wine will probably be the only drink available at first, Taylor said, with the sale of beer coming later. "Right now we don't really have the facilities to sell beer."

Confusion had existed earlier over a Houston city ordinance which prohibits the sale of alcoholic beverages within 300 feet of certain public institutions. Curry said he understood the ordinance to apply only to churches, hospitals and public schools. "The attorney general's ruling found no constitutional barriers to the selling of drinks on college campuses," Curry added. "Ap-

Senator warns of dictatorship

Unlimited federal spending and runaway inflation will inevitably turn the United States into a dictatorial government, State Sen. Walter Mengden (R-Houston) said Wednesday, speaking to a small group of students in the Embassy Room, UC.

Mengden's noontime speech, "The Taxman vs. the People: A Look at the Controversial Tax Limitation Proposal to be Submitted to the Texas Legislature," dealt with reasons for supporting strengthened public scrutiny over governmental purse strings.

The state senator said the severe economic troubles of Germany in 1920 created a German public overly willing to accept financial relief, making it easier for Adolf Hitler to become the country's savior. "The people must bring the government under control. Government has an insatiable desire to spend money," he added.

Mengden cited three steps to balancing the scale of human freedom as opposed to individual liberty. He said Americans took the first step, physical force, by means of the American Revolution. The second step, he said, is the power of the vote. Now, the people must take the third step, regulating the federal budget, he added.

Mengden was the last speaker in a series of lectures brought to campus by the Young Americans for Freedom.

parently, it is legal as long as the drinks are not sold in stadiums or public enclosures."

Lawrence said if his own application was approved, the sale of beer and wine in the Cougar Den would begin within a few weeks. He emphasized that the UC's current plans are subject to the approval of the university administration.

The UC Policy Board, in an October 10 meeting, set up guidelines for the sale of alcoholic beverages in the UC. These included a limit of 15 per cent alcoholic content, a requirement that the beverages must be consumed in the room in which the sale occurs and the setting of weekday and weekend hours for the sale of the drinks.

The National League of Cities' (NLC) 50th Annual Convention closed its fourth day of committee meetings Wednesday with the announcement of the nomination of a woman for a League officer position.

The Nomination Committee also announced there will be two more minority members on the Board of Directors, bringing the minority representation on the board to 11.

San Juan, Puerto Rico Mayor Carlos Romero Barcelo has been recommended by the Nominating Committee to work as the League's 1975 president.

Martin's name was linked with Nazism by both groups. Ron Osborne, pre-medical student, said the Martin matter revolved around the principle of free speech. In response to Livingston's statement that Nazis should not be allowed to speak, Osborne claimed Livingston was reversing her point by saying a Communist, which Livingston proclaimed herself to be, should be allowed to speak, but Nazis should not.

Livingston retorted, "We don't hire teachers who teach the world is flat, so we shouldn't hire teachers who teach us blacks and Chicanos are inferior." Livingston also stated if UH can spend $35,000 to hire a Nazi in the chemistry department, it can hire blacks and Chicanos as faculty.

Manning said he did not object

The Public Safety Committee recommended that rifles also be registered, but other resolutions removed those weapons from the final recommendation.

The NLC will conclude its convention this afternoon with a General Assembly of the delegates voting on the various nominations and resolutions presented during the last five days.

to freedom of speech but labeled Martin a "hate monger who is spreading racist lies."

Although Martin was unavailable for comment, G. G. Meisels, chemistry department chairman, spoke in Martin's behalf, calling CAR's arguments "utter nonsense." He said CAR was taking their information from a "misquoted article in the Post nine months ago," and said Martin's statement was taken out of context and blown out of proportion by CAR. He said Martin discussed the possibility of sterilization in a discussion of possible solutions to world problems.

"I have talked with him on many occasions, and, to my knowledge, he is not publicly advocating sterilization or has no personal commitment to see this policy implemented."

Meisel added Martin has not taught any classes since he came to UH. He has been doing research and only plans to teach a small graduate class in the spring. "He has made two lectures at UH, both purely on chemical matters. . . We hired Martin because of his qualifications; personal views have no assessment," Meisels said.

Sundry schooling starts in February

Information fliers for the spring semester Sundry School will be posted January 20 at campus Daily Cougar distribution boxes, Houston Public libraries, 50 city parks and recreational sites and various businesses, supermarkets and schools in the Houston area.

Sundry School is a series of informal, non-credit courses designed for enjoyment and self-development, sponsored by the Campus Activities Department. Each course lasts eight to nine weeks, with one or two meetings per week.

Registration begins February 1 at the Campus Activity Desk in the UC Expansion. A $2 registration fee will be charged.

Veterans' bill grants greater money benefits

The recent congressional decision to override President Ford's veto of the proposed veterans' bill has been heartily accepted by veterans attending UH.

The bill, which is designed to increase veteran's school benefits by 22 per cent, was an instrumental boost to the scholastic future of all veterans, Steve Caporiccio, Veterans' Service Organization (VSO) president, said Wednesday.

Caporiccio, education graduate student, said the congressional decision will not only keep thousands of veterans in school, but it will also prevent many of them from being forced to seek part-time employment.

Caporiccio said he feels Congress has finally recognized the importance of veterans in the American society.

The new bill will provide full-time institutional training payment increases from $22 to $27 for a single veteran and from $261 to $321 for a veteran with one dependent. The benefits for a veteran with two dependents will be raised from $298 to $366. The payment rate for each dependent over two will be raised from $18 to $22.

The new bill will be retroactive to last September 1.

many who were shared with rejected Christ as their Savior, at least they now know what they are rejecting.

Jesus Christ has been made an issue to many UH students this semester and many more will hear about His love and forgiveness next semester. I hope that all Christians on campus will realize how important Jesus is to them and how important it is to share Him with others, whether they be sharing through words or actions.

area is that you are ultimately regarded as part of the ethnic problem and forgotten.

When Ethnic Affairs sought to assist these high schoolers in the poverty areas, it did so with the intent of not making the same discriminatory mistakes others have made. For this reason, the Ethnic Affairs assists the university in recruiting prospective students, whether they are of minority status or not.

It is because the Department of University Relations, which directs recruitment, does not answer all questions which senior high school students want to ask about UH. Ethnic students who have assisted in recruitment with this purpose in mind assist the Department of Academic Recruitment and Advisement in conjunction with Ethnic Affairs. Indeed, it has always been an interest of Ethnic Affairs to assist prospective and currently enrolled students.

It is because the high school students who took the limited SAT's which SA funded were going to enroll only at UH and pay their students service fees many times over each consecutive semester. In this manner, they have repaid not only SA but the university for their opportunity.

It seems that lately throughout this semester to ask the Cougar to interpret ethnic affairs and problems would be like asking a Ku Klux Klansman or a John Bircher or the Young Americans for Freedom to interpret the Bible on minority rights and assistance. Consequently, only the Students' Association remains progressive for students.

No, ethnic affairs has not made a misjudgement; clearly, it is the Cougar's "missed goals" which have.

Senators, I want to thank all of you for allowing me to express my feelings about the Students' Association and its contributions to education.

My purpose in delivering this speech was to insure that in some way students would receive this information about the SAT's because of the inconsistency of the Cougar. I could not be assured that the correct information would reach the student body. Maybe you as representatives can more effectively fulfill this purpose.

ASTRO-BLUEBONNET BOWL

Pack returns to haunt UH

By BRIAN WICE
Cougar Staff

Three games into the 1967 grid season, following stunning upsets of Florida State and Michigan State and coming off a dramatic 50-6 dismantling of Wake Forest in the confines of the Astrodome, the vaunted Houston Cougars earned the number two ranking in the weekly Associated Press poll for its highest football ranking ever.

Just 10 first place votes shy of edging out Southern Cal for the top spot in the nation, the Red Machine was venting its wrath on any and all comers with a remarkable average of 488.7 yards of total offense per contest. An awesome enough statistic to lead the nation in that category.

But, the weekly AP rankings must have gotten lost on the way to Raleigh as the North Carolina State Wolfpack ambushed the Coogs on their home ground to take a 16-6 decision and remind Coach Bill Yeoman's boys that they were still mortal.

Seven years have passed since the Coogs have attained such heights but they still possess the knack of becoming overconfident as last week's 30-14 Tulsa drubbing aptly illustrated.

Ironically enough, the last time the Red Machine lost a contest to the Golden Hurricane in Skelly Stadium was the final game of that same 1967 season when the Coogs wound up on the short end of a 22-13 affair, with the other UH loss being a 14-13 heartbreaker to Ole Miss.

After bursting the bubble of an undefeated season for the Coogs

A WORRIED YEOMAN

seven years ago, the Wolfpack came within two games of having an unblemished record of their own but back-to-back losses to Penn State and Clemson dashed any hopes they might have had for a perfect year.

This year, Coach Lou Holtz's griders have also notched a 9 and 2 slate with impressive victories over sixth-ranked Penn State and tough Arizona State, a squad that gave the Cougars a tough time in Tempe last September. The only blemishes on the NC State slate were consecutive losses to North Carolina and Maryland that robbed the Wolfpack of a share of the Atlantic Coast Conference title.

Holtz, the ACC Coach of the Year in his first season (1972) at NC State, has compiled a unique record of never having lost a contest at home, at night, or while his squad was wearing their red uniforms since he has been the gridiron mentor at Raleigh.

With this year's Bluebonnet Bowl clash being under the lights in the Astrodome on December 23, Lou Holtz's claim to fame as being invincible after dark may be in jeopardy as Coach Bill Yeoman's charges will be attempting to bounce back and even the score for that 1967 defeat that stripped the Cougars of their role as strangers in paradise.

WORLD CHAMPS

Celtics invade Pavilion for tilt

John Havlicek, Dave Cowens and Jo Jo White, who could start for the Eastern Conference in this year's NBA All-Star game, lead the defending World Champion Boston Celtics against the Houston Rockets here Friday night. Tip-off time at Hofheinz Pavilion on the UH campus is 8 p.m.

Havlicek, in his 13th season in the Celtics green, last year became the eighth player in league history to go over the 20,000 point mark.

Cowens, in his fifth season, was Rookie-of-the-Year in 1971 and followed up that season by being named Most Valuable Player in 1972.

From a shooter to an all around solid player is the five-year story of Jo Jo White. An All-Star in three of his five seasons, White is considered by Celtics general manager Red Auerbach to be in a class with Sam Jones as a pure shooter.

Joining the "Big Three" in the Celtics lineup are veteran forward Don Nelson and guard Don Chaney, the former the former UH standout now in his sixth pro campaign.

This first meeting of the season between the Rockets and Celtics will be a fun-filled evening with halftime entertainment by the Houston Highlanders Pipe Band and other music supplied by the band from Sam Houston High School.

Rangers endure times and trails

By ALLAN C. KIMBALL

The Texas Rangers are the oldest law enforcement agency in the world, including such legendary crime-fighters as Scotland Yard. This year marks the Rangers' 151st year of service to the state.

The Rangers were organized in 1821 by Stephen F. Austin who brought 300 settlers into Texas, then a part of Mexico which in turn was governed by Spain. Austin feared for the safety of the settlers because of raiding Indians and Mexicans. In 1823, he paid 10 men to scout the movements of Indians, requiring them to range over the countryside; hence their eventual name: Rangers.

Under the leadership of such men as John Coffee Hays, Samuel H. Walker, William A. Wallace, John Armstrong and John Jones, the Rangers operated against the Indians and Mexicans in the early years and later against outlaw bands, cattle thieves and local rioters.

Wartime activities

The Rangers acquired legal status in 1835. They became the nucleus around which the Texas Department of Public Safety was formed a hundred years later.

During the period of the Republic of Texas (1836-1845), the Rangers fought the Mexican army. When Texas joined the Union in 1845, the Rangers continued their operations against Santa Ana's Mexican forces as a scouting unit of the regular U.S. Army. Their activities were later suspended during the Civil War.

When Reconstruction came to an end in Texas and Richard Coke became governor in 1874, the legislature authorized two new units of Rangers: the Frontier Battalion and the Special Force.

Today the Rangers operate a six company unit under the direct command of the director of the Department of Public Safety, with companies headquartered in Houston, Dallas, Midland, San Antonio, Austin, Waco and Lubbock. Their major duties are protection of life and property, suppression of riots and insurrections, investigation of major crimes and the apprehension of fugitives.

There is an apocryphal story told about the Rangers which probably illustrates quite well what the Rangers think of themselves and how well they have been regarded by citizens of the state.

The story is told of a small town that was being terrorized by a mob. There was little the local people could do about this so they asked the Texas Rangers for help. Soon after, a lone Ranger rode into town, carrying his Colt .45 six-gun, a rifle, Bowie knife and a sword. The town leaders gathered around and asked the Ranger when the remainder of his company was coming into town. The Ranger replied that he was the only Ranger available.

"But you're only one man," someone said.

"Well, you ain't got but one mob," the Ranger said.

The entire history of the Texas Rangers is filled with men who could have, and perhaps did, make remarks like that and could back them up.

Proved the revolver

John Coffee "Captain Jack" Hays was one of the early captains of the Rangers, coming from Tennessee originally as did many early Texas settlers. In 1841, while in charge of the San Antonio company, he led two expeditions to Laredo, capturing the town from the Mexicans both times. Hays was later made a colonel and placed in command of a regiment of Rangers that acted as scouts and spies for General Zachary Taylor during the Mexican War.

It was Hayes who proved the effectiveness of Samuel Colt's new invention: the revolver. Up to that time, Colt had been unable to sell his six-shooter in the United States. As a matter of fact, Colt's Paterson, N.J., factory went out of business the same year Hays and his company acquired some of his pistols and put them to use against Comanches in 1842.

In 1846, when Hays was with Taylor, all the men that were formally in his company carried Colt revolvers into service. The other Rangers, about 500 men, carried their single-shot pistols or rifles, and it was not long before they all wanted a weapon as good as the Colt handgun. Hayes ordered 1,000 more so each Ranger could have two.

Colt, still out of business, had to be tracked down and talked into reopening his business. He designed a new model revolver, incorporating changes suggested by Ranger Samuel Walker. The new pistol became the famous "Walker" Colt, the largest, most powerful six gun ever manufactured.

Soon the regular army saw the Colt's effectiveness in action, and they wanted to be as well equipped as the Rangers, prompting the army to arrange a lucrative contract with Colt for his new weapons. Colt became famous and rich, thanks to a couple of Texas Rangers.

One of Hays' and Walker's compadres in arms was the blustery William "Big Foot" Wallace. During the Mexican War, he was one of many Rangers captured and imprisoned in Mexico City, and he did his best to make the Mexicans

In one instance, Big Foot was made to haul a cart full of building materials for a road crew. He quickly tired of being used as a horse, even if he was about as big as one, and managed to get "spooked" by one of his overseers, running off and tearing up the cart in the process.

Later, back in Texas, Big Foot got hungry and ordered a loaf of bread. When it was brought by a Mexican servant, he said he thought someone might have poisoned the bread and proceeded to make the poor servant boy eat the entire loaf.

One might think that Big Foot's predilection for trouble would have led him to an early grave, but he lived to the ripe old age of 82.

Major John Jones, a former Confederate cavalry captain, was the first commander of the Frontier Battalion of Rangers. He had to contend with trouble at every turn back in 1874. Bandits and cattle rustlers roamed the Rio Grande valley, Indians were raiding in the West and outlaws were harassing the towns. Within two years, however, Major Jones had cleared the Texas borders and put an end to all threats from hostile Indians in the state.

Jones then turned his attention inward after the borders were secure. He was to bring a great many outlaw careers to an abrupt end, among them the legendary Sam Bass.

In the short span of 50 days, Bass had become the champion train robber of Texas, holding up four in that small period of time. Jones set out on his trail in April of 1878, never relenting. Finally, during a holdup attempt in Round Rock, the Rangers trapped Bass and his men. Bass and one of the others managed to escape, but not before Bass was fatally wounded. The Rangers tracked the outlaws and found Bass under a tree, dying. They brought him into town but nothing could help Bass, and he died on Sunday, July 21, 1878.

Rangers had a knack, it seemed, for quick results where all other attempts had failed. Sergeant John B. Armstrong made a name for himself by capturing the infamous killer John Wesley Hardin. One of the foremost murderers of Texas, Hardin was rumored to have killed up to 30 men.

Hardin had fled Texas to Florida after killing Sheriff Charles Webb. Armstrong went to Florida and confronted Hardin and one of Hardin's men on a train. Hardin drew his gun, but the weapon hung up on his suspenders, giving Armstrong enough time to kill Hardin's friend and clubbing Hardin himself into submission.

As the frontier era came to an end, so too did the general duties of the Rangers. After the turn of the century, they were cut back to four companies and were called into action only when events were too large for local law enforcement officials to handle.

One of the last of the old style Rangers was Frank Hamer. Captain Hamer is probably best known for his pursuit of Bonnie Parker and Clyde Barrow.

Hamer began his pursuit in February of 1934 and finally trapped the two outlaws near Ruston, La., in May of that year.

The Texas Rangers have established a fame and tradition that is known world wide. They have become, through action and attitude, a major part of Texas and American history, an ideal of law enforcement and a part of our frontier heritage.

Good Montrose vibes

By FRED HERRON

Did you ever have one of those afternoons when there was nothing to do? You felt like you needed a change of pace, but you'd been everywhere and you didn't feel like looking back.

Well, last Saturday was one of those days. It was cold, rainy and the wind whipped through the hole in my tennis shoe. Texas has just put it on A&M. Baylor was on its way to the Cotton Bowl and, even better than that, I didn't have to worry any longer about the Aggies representing the Southwest Conference. All of this definitely put me in the mood to celebrate. But where to go?

I dragged out a list of places that I'd been meaning to check out in the Montrose area. I figured this would be a good day to see what was happening.

La Bogeda on the corner of Mandell and Fairview opens at four. It's a two story house converted into a pub and restaurant. The upstairs has been remodeled. It was the Harvest Moon, a fine place to sample vegetarian cuisine. It now is the Bogeda Cafe. It was converted to a lounging area for wine tasting and listening to classical music.

The cafe will open from 4 p.m. to 11 p.m., and from 12 midnight until 12 noon. They serve a fabulous country breakfast. It consists of double yoke yard eggs, whole wheat bread from a private breadmaker (none of that commercial stuff), Canadian bacon, smoked country sausage, hash browns, grits and chicory coffee.

If you feel like boogying, downstairs they have a fine sound system piping in the tunes, and all the beer and wine you can hold, your choice of 72 imported wines and 33 choices of imported beers. From time to time Bogeda features live entertainment.

I drank tap beer and listened to some sounds off "Abbey Road." The place has a fine atmosphere, with copies of murals inlaid in wood designs in the walls.

The rain continued, and though I hated to leave, I headed out to Theodore's to take advantage of their happy hour. Theodore's is an old house revamped as well. The interior consists of a montage of antique stained glass, paintings, plants and bursts of various and sundry old Shakespearian-looking dudes.

Theodore's features entertainment seven nights a week, reserving one night for auditions and one night for jazz. You can expect to hear everything from Hank Williams to Jerry Jeff Walker.

If music isn't your thing, there is a bar upstairs for rapping. If you want to dance, across the hall is a juke box and a dance floor.

By this time, I had had enough of booze and boogy. I was looking for someplace quiet to sit and relax.

Just down the street on Westheimer I happened upon a soft couch, a fireplace and a glass of rose. For those of you who don't know about Prufrock's, it's a dim light mellow place to sit and discuss Gibran's "The Prophet" or David Hume's theories on the existence of self.

If you don't feel philosophical and you're out of pipe tobacco, you can walk into the back room for a card game or a game of chess.

Exclusive- a writer tracks the SLA

Exclusive: The Inside Story of Patricia Hearst and the SLA by Marilyn Baker with Sally Brompton. 240 pp. New York: Macmillan $8.95

By RICHARD NAVARRO

The SLA bandwagon has piped its merry tune and Marilyn Baker has been quick to jump aboard. Rushing into print after the May shootout in Los Angeles, Baker has compiled her version of the inside story of Patricia Hearst and the Symbionese Liberation Army.

Unfortunately, Baker's inside account isn't really inside. She wasn't an SLA member nor did she interview one. The closest she came were her talks with Chris Thompson, the person who had originally introduced some the SLA members to one another. Still, Baker's vantage point is better than most of the outside-looking-in stories.

Baker, a 44-year-old reporter for KQED-TV in San Francisco, followed the story with a death-defying interest—literally. She received a number of death threats which proved authentic enough to require police protection and was the intended victim of an aborted attempt at booby-trapping her car.

Aided by midnight phone calls and unofficial news leaks, Baker spent months tracking leads, throwing out worthless ones while juggling profitable ones into a useful order.

Pounding on doors, tramping down alleys and staking out apartments, Baker managed to develop an accurate itinerary of the SLA from its conception. After countless hours of interviewing countless people, Baker emerged with information even the authorities envied. She reported the identity of the men who abducted Patty two months before the FBI could confirm her report. She uncovered the membership and exposed the brains of the army. And she was the first to reveal escaped convict Donald De Freese as General Field Marshal Cinque, the conspiracy's token black.

Despite its subtitle, Exclusive is not a book dealing with the SLA. It is the story of a reporter who spent several months of her life investigating the Hearst kidnapping. The facts concerning the SLA appear not because they are the subject of the book but because they surface during this period of Baker's life.

STAMPS

by Lee Graves

The U.S. Postal Service (USPS) has released its 1974 Souvenir Mint Set, containing all the U.S. commemorative stamps issued during 1974, and it is now on sale at most post offices.

The three-panel folder sells for $3.50 and contains protective strips of acetate to mount the stamps. A text describing each stamp is included along with information about the designers and statistics concerning the issue and sale of the individual stamps. There are 15 subjects included for a total of 29 separate stamps.

The set is very well suited for Christmas giving and is one of the basic philatelic items offered by the USPS in its promotion of stamp collecting. The cover design features the Skylab space laboratory and the Skylab commemorative stamp is included in the set.

Other stamp subjects range from the stamp honoring Robert Frost to the long eight-stamp set honoring the centenary of the Universal Postal Union. The set also includes the blocks of stamps issued for the First Continental Congress bicentennial and America's Mineral Heritage.

Many post offices also have for sale the 1972 and 1973 Mint Sets which are offered for sale at $3.00 each.

The USPS has not announced any new issues for 1975 yet, but in looking at the newest publicity for stamp collecting in the national media, I found a space has been allocated in their souvenir album for a commemorative stamp honoring D.W. Griffith, a movie director. This issue will undoubtedly be announced soon along with the remainder of the 1975 philatelic program.

When the spring semester begins, this column and all announcements of new issues will again be published in NOVA.

Soccer crown hopes dim as UH loses two players

By DENNIS F. TARDAN
Cougar Staff

With a smooth undefeated season behind them, the UH soccer team is encountering some turbulence as they steam towards the state soccer championships in Denton December 7 and 8.

First teamers Ben Oliver and Miguel Olmeda have been declared ineligible to play in the championship according to soccer sponsor Bob Reeder.

Both Oliver and Olmeda dropped below the 12 hour scholastic minimum required for Texas Collegiate Soccer League (TCSL) participation. Reeder said he was appealing the matter but had little chance of a favorable ruling.

Some of the soccer team members complained that the championships were poorly scheduled. Nino Yanpey, a sophomore pre-med major, said the championships should not be played so close to finals. "I think they should have been played three weeks ago," he said. "The conference championships have been decided long ago. It is going to be hard to win now."

Good team morale

Yampey added that he thought the team had good morale but were going to miss both Olmeda and Oliver. He said UH's possibilities of winning the championship have gone down.

Rightwinger Edwin Pereira, a architecture senior, was more optimistic. "Morale of the team is very high. We will have to overcome the loss of the players somehow. This is my last game and we may have an advantage going in as the underdogs."

New offense sore spot

Another sore spot with the players is Soccer Coach Ted Sinadinos' switching to a new offense for the playoffs. The new offense is a three forward, three halfback, and four fullback alignment compared to the four forward, two halfback, four fullback arrangement that took UH to the Southern Conference championship.

"Our players have confidence in the offense, but it doesn't mean that much," said Jaime Ledergerber, a fullback majoring in finance. "We will be able to score more goals but we need to be in damn good physical condition."

Ledergerber said the halfbacks must not give up or UH might lose the contests. He said the offense, while dangerous, allows UH to control the half line, the most important part of the soccer field.

While the team may be despondent because of the long Thanksgiving layoff without practice, the players feel two good hard practices before the championship may carry them through.

MOHAMMAD ALI SHAFIZADEH (center) and the rest of the UH soccer team will have their work cut out for them when they meet UT Austin on December 7 for the right to play in the state championship.

On the beach
by Neil Young
on Reprise Records

It seems that in the "good old days," Neil Young was paid less money for making better music than he's making today. I say that because with the exception of the soundtrack album from his autobiographical film "Journey Through the Past," his newest effort, On the Beach, is probably the least satisfying album he has ever produced. That being the case, Rusty Weir's assertion in the liner notes that "there is good music in this album," is not totally unreliable, however. It's just that the good moments are so few and far between.

To begin with, the album's opening cut, "Walk On," is little more than commercial drivel and certainly doesn't augur well for the rest of the disc. Oddly enough (or on second thought, maybe it was predictable), this is the song that seems to have received the most airplay, even on FM stations that should know better. The reason for this is doubtless its inclusion of a lame rebuttal to Lynyrd Skynyrd's recent stab at Young in "Sweet Home Alabama."

Moving from the ridiculous to the more sublime, "See the Sky About to Rain" is one of the best things Young has offered up this time. Although instrumentally simpler, this version is more haunting than the one recorded by the briefly reunited Byrds, and it succeeds in evoking a mood of despondency ironically increased by a sympathetic Nature. Young's Wurlitzer piano work and Ben Keith's steel guitar contributions play a big part in creating this trademark Young mood.

In terms of energy alone (which is in very short supply overall), "Revolution Blues" is the most exciting track of the eight. But it's the kind of song one likes despite his better judgement: it's a bit too contrived and snappy and its sparks never quite ignite, but Young's driving guitar leads and band member Rick Danko's funky, peripatetic bass combine for a winning effect. Young is convincing enough as a sociopathic Hollywood sniper with just a twinge of conscience, and lyrics like

*"I've got the revolution blues
I see bloody fountains and 10 million dune buggies
comin' down the mountains
Well, I hear that Laurel Canyon is full of famous stars,
But I hate them worse than lepers and I'll kill them in their cars."*

The title cut "On the Beach," which leads off side two, is the album's only other strong selection. Most of the second side is colored with Young's brand of surrealism, a style which he employs unwisely at times. While there may be a touch of Fellini or Dali behind some of Young's lines, they still come across as the rather shallow work of an amateur. Even so, "On the Beach" is a success because of the insight Young shows into his professional dilemma and by now waning fame. It's good to hear him admit "I need a crowd of people, but I can't face 'em day to day" and acknowledge the possibility of going to a radio interview only to find himself "alone at the microphone."

The remaining four cuts vary in quality. "Motion Pictures," a low-keyed, country-flavored love song, has a tone so personal one almost feels he shouldn't be listening and is dedicated to Carrie Snodgrass, Young's lady and the mother of his son, Zeke. It appears that her companionship is the remedy to the self-doubt and insecurity expressed in the preceding "On the Beach."

"For the Turnstiles" has an unpolished, impromptu quality, sounding like the product of a heavily stoned session. Young's voice, rawer and raspier than usual, is accompanied only by guitar and dobro, while the lyrics, though intriguing, are generally indecipherable as to meaning.

"Vampire Blues," despite its amusing line "I'm a black bat, baby, I need my high octane" and some stylish picking from Young during the bridge, never quite makes it as a parody of the standard blues formula and is pretty much of a throwaway.

"Ambulance Blues," finally, is another nebulous composition, noteworthy perhaps for its oblique autobiographical and political allusions and occasionally stinging guitar licks. Again, though, Young has done better material in this mold before, such as "The Old Laughing Lady," "After the Goldrush" and, on the political end of the spectrum, "Ohio."

So, all in all, I say to Young's many dedicated fans (of which I am definitely one), "Caveat Emptor!" For despite a few refreshing spots, Neil Young's "Beach" is pretty barren.

Rod McKuen discusses poetry, life

By LEON BECK
Cougar Staff

Rod McKuen hovered in the corner of his suite at the Hyatt Regency listening to a Moody Blues tape on a portable tape recorder. McKuen, dressed in tennis shoes, faded denims, and a semi-shaggy beard, looked more like an itinerant beachcomber than the best selling poet in America.

Impressive credentials for someone with less than four years of formal education. The experience McKuen received came not from textbooks but from life.

"The training I got was from the rodeo, about six months as a shoe salesman, 18 months digging ditches, and a year and a half herding cattle," said McKuen as he relaxed on a sofa. "I was a cookie catcher for about three weeks until I was so stupid that I couldn't catch anymore. I wasn't mechanically inclined in those days."

Evidently McKuen, who was in town recently to discuss his latest book Seasons In The Sun, may not be able to catch cookies but he has found his niche in the literary and musical world.

In a syrupy, raspy voice, McKuen spoke almost in a whisper, as he discussed his poetry. Although McKuen is perhaps best known for his poetry, he doesn't consider poetry a profession.

"I don't think that poetry is a profession. Look, I've sold a hundred million records and I've sold only 10 million books of poetry. My classical music is played by nearly every major symphony orchestra in the world."

"Last year I was nominated for a Pulitzer for classical music and my pop songs have been recorded by everybody from... well the raunchiest rock groups to symphonic variations on... so it's very hard to say what your profession is. My profession is really getting through life. I never really wanted to be put into a box. I've been very encouraged by people, particularly by young people.

"You go to lecture in colleges and you find that they don't want to be put into boxes either. They just want to go out and do things. I never knew what I wanted to do... I just assumed that if you work and you go straight ahead that things will be alright."

"Seasons In The Sun," written by Rod McKuen, was recently released by Terry Jacks and became a million selling record.

*We had joy, we had fun
we had seasons in the sun
but the wine and the song like the seasons have all gone.*

Although McKuen writes both songs and poetry, he sees a definite distinction between the two.

"I really don't think of my songs as being poems... none of them. None are worthy of being poems. If you hear me reading something against music, it's poetry. If you hear me singing something, it's not poetry. Seasons In The Sun has in front of the book three stanzas from the song. I wrote it as a short story years ago and then later it became a song. "Jean" I wrote in just a few minutes coming back from the first rushes of the movie that I'd seen in England. It wasn't until a year later that I had finally scored the picture.

"If I had been writing poetry for a while it is very hard for me to switch and write songs... really tough. The same thing is true if I had been writing classical music for a while and then go to do a film score... it's really tough, I mean it's like pushing another button and waiting for a long time for the gears to wind up."

The theme throughout his new book is the sun and McKuen said he has tried to create nine months of summer in the book. "Hopefully, I've created a whole new season in there somewhere."

McKuen

McKuen feels that anyone who writes poetry must owe a debt of gratitude to the likes of Whitman, Sandburg and Frost, although McKuen feels much more influenced by the people around him.

"I'm much more influenced by people, by individuals, by things that are a happening to me, by things that are going on around me... by animals, by changes in the weather, by movement, by travel, by the daily newspaper rather than the history books."

Perhaps being born in a salvation army hospital, and by working since the age of 11, McKuen is more sensitive and compassionate, having seen life through different eyes.

A song McKuen recently wrote, "There Goes A Man Who Tried," sums up these inner feelings and represents McKuen's philosophy of life.

"I've tried to say to people,

'Don't be afraid to let your feelings show... don't be afraid to be emotional.' I try to say, 'Don't be afraid to cry.'

"It's shocking that there are kids that never embraced their father. I don't understand that. I never knew my father so maybe that's why I can't imagine not loving your father enough to want to hold him. Any feeling of somebody being unmanly because of that is so much bunk that Madison Avenue or somebody had fed us all these years. I think in that respect women's liberation and gay liberation, black liberation, all those things, while they have labels, have been very good for men in particular.

"I think women's liberation has done more for men than it has done for women because what I has done is given people the courage of individual liberation."

In McKuen's writings he tries to bring people closer together. "I'm concerned about people's inability to communicate and that is a big hangup for me and I always try to write about that a lot. If I could write about that definitively one day, I probably wouldn't have to write anymore."

What makes Rod McKuen the best selling poet in history?

"Well, gosh. If I knew it would be presumptuous of me to say... I don't know. I'd like to think it's because I tell the truth."

From the words to his poems and from the lyrics to his songs one can find McKuen's philosophies and truths.

New T&S head greeted

By LINDA JOHNSON
Cougar Staff

New Traffic and Security (T&S) Director Joseph P. Kimble was formally introduced to the UH community Wednesday afternoon at a reception in the Regents' Lounge, UC. Kimble officially assumed his post on December 1 and succeeds the late Larry Fultz, who died January 23, 1974.

The former chief of the Beverly Hills Police Department compared the UH campus to the State University of New York at Stony Brook (SUNY-SB) where he was director of the Department of Public Safety for three and one-half years. "The campus is larger, but a lot of the problems and questions are universal, for example, the parking situation. Why don't students have more power, and why are security officers the only ones to demonstrate responsible behavior," he asked?

Although he has not had time to consider the parking problem in depth, Kimble said he felt a study should be made between UH and other universities to determine if parking fees and services were comparable.

Kimble said the pedestrian should be considered first. "I personally hate cars. They're stinking beasts that harm the environment," he said.

He said he favors some sort of tram system as a partial solution. "We have two things to consider when thinking of the parking situation," Kimble said, "conflicts and convenience or necessity."

Kimble said he advocates better distribution of parking ticket information. Information should be released at the beginning and end of each semester to let incoming students know what to do when they receive a citation and how they can avoid getting them, he said.

Confusion between City of Houston tickets and T&S citations would also be alleviated, Kimble said. Although city citations can not affect student records and registration, T&S tickets can create stops, he added.

"One of the big problems we have is that we forget a new crop of people is continually coming into the university. The newcomers often don't know what's going on. By the time students get to their second and third years, they know the ropes. This just isn't the case with new students," Kimble said.

Kimble praised the emergency phone boxes in remote parking lots and said they would be a great help in controlling crime. "When most people see something going on they say, 'I'll wait till I get home or to the gas station at the corner to call in.' By that time, it's too late, and the criminal has gotten away," he said. The boxes will eliminate the wait, he added.

The emergency phones also have a psychological effect, Kimble said. Potential crimes are prevented because people know help is only a phone call away. "What we need is a few publicized cases of success to highlight the boxes," Kimble said.

The emergency phone system was originated by the late T&S Director Fultz, and work on the idea was assumed by the Office of Facilities, Planning and Construction after his death. Aimed at providing as much security as possible for the people using the remote lots after dark, the conspicuously lighted phones should be in operation some time in the fall of 1975.

The system's original name, Blue Light Emergency Phone, came from Fultz's idea to have the phone locations designated with high-intensity blue lights that would be easily visible at night.

Kimble, speaking of his home in New York, said he liked Manhattan, but he lived in a somewhat rural part of the state, some miles from the city. Originally from California, Kimble said he's halfway home here in Houston.

UH Pres. Philip G. Hoffman formed a search committee during the first week of February after Fultz's death to establish standards for the new director and to initiate a search for someone to fill the post. Kimble's appointment was announced in September.

Kimble did his undergraduate work at the College of San Mateo, California, and received a master's degree from SUNY-SB.

Scholarship offered

Theta Tau, the professional engineering fraternity at UH, has announced it will award a $250 scholarship to an engineering student. The scholarship will be presented during Engineer's Week in February, 1975.

Tom Tilton, Theta Tau regent, said candidates for the award will be judged on the basis of scholastic improvement, service to the College of Engineering and financial need. He said a grade-point average of 2.0 or above is all that is required for application.

The deadline for application for the scholarship is Dec. 13. Tilton said interested students should contact Theta Tau at 749-2391.

Interviews for Georgetown University Law Center

Dean of Admissions and a representative of La Raza Law Students will be at the Placement Center.
