Caldwell testifies:

No way to predict how an officer will react

By BOB ENGLER
Staff Writer for The Cougar

Houston Police Chief Harry Caldwell defended his departmental policies before the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights yesterday, saying there is no way to account for the human element in police procedures.

"Passing institutional policy to prohibit certain behavior does not insure compliance by the individual to that order," Caldwell told the commission.

The Rev. Jack McGinnis said, "Much of what is frightening is not at the administrative level, it's on the street" when he testified before the commission Monday.

Caldwell credited the police force in general for adherence to HPD policy regarding use of force while working on the street. But there is no way to predict or control how an individual officer will react in difficult situations, he said.

Caldwell said he has made regulations covering police behavior more restrictive than they were when he was appointed chief in June, 1977.

However, Commissioner Frankie Freeman asked Caldwell about HPD policy allowing officers to carry personal firearms instead of department issued weapons.

Caldwell said HPD policy states all officers must register their firearms with their substation supervisors. "It would take a fool to show up with an unregistered weapon," he said.

The penalty for carrying an unregistered weapon while on duty, according to Caldwell, is usually suspension from duty without pay.

Freeman, concerned with the possibility of fear being generated by officers carrying large caliber weapons, asked Caldwell how many officers carried .357 magnum pistols while on duty.

"Only those who could not get .44's," Caldwell replied. Caldwell's answer brought some reaction from the crowd of about 100 watching the proceedings, and a federal marshal called for order before the hearing resumed.

Caldwell also responded to questions from the commission regarding investigations into police misconduct and possible inadequacies in HPD's Internal Affairs Division.

"No one has ever questioned the integrity of IAD," he said. However, Wednesday several witnesses before the commission said IAD may not be objective enough to carry out thorough investigations against police officers.

Caldwell said in cases where unjustified use of lethal force was suspected, IAD turned its information over to the prosecutor's office. He said investigations covered all facets of the incident, including the possibility of perjury by police officers.

"I respond with all of the information I have, and I state what the reports tend to indicate," he said. However, he said there was little he could say to change the "myopic and stereotype thinking" patterns of certain segments of Houston.

A report compiled by the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights says, "The community relations program of the HPD has been recognized as innovative and effective."

Caldwell said, "I have not only talked with the grassroots elements in Houston, I have talked with the taproots of the city." He gave the commission a one-inch thick volume of his progress working with the Mexican-American community.

"We are beginning to return to a position of accountability, but we will never be able to satisfy all of the factions," he said. "But as long as there is one black person in this city who trusts us, I will build the force around him," he continued.

Market shows best of UH organizations

Campus organizations displayed their wares to attract new members Wednesday at the annual Activities Mart in the UC Arbor.

Several student organizations, fraternities and sororities set displays promoting their campus group. Volunteers answered questions from prospective members and passed out bumper stickers and badges which identified their group.

This year for the first time, the Activities Mart was conducted in one day. In the past it extended over a two-day period, according to Ellen Meltzer, coordinator of campus activities at UH.

She said it was hoped that a one-day Activities Mart would increase participation of both campus organizations and interested students.

Although there are more than 250 recognized campus organizations, only 33 groups reserved space for the Activities Mart. Even less than half that number showed up to present their displays.

Magner defends search committee selections

By KATHY GRIMES
Staff Writer for The Cougar

Provost George Magner denied Wednesday that he violated the procedure for appointing members to the search committee for a new dean of the College of Humanities and Fine Arts.

Four HFA faculty members said on Tuesday that Magner was to choose appointees from lists compiled by HFA department chairs and the Faculty Council of Humanities and Fine Arts. These members also understood that Magner was to request more recommendations if those given were unsatisfactory.

But Magner claimed that wasn't the case.

"They understood wrong. I said I would accept nominations and I would consult beyond them. I consulted the associate provost and the chancellor's cabinet," he said.

"I did use most of the department chair recommendations. Their figures are inaccurate; I appointed nine, instead of two, out of the Faculty Council list," he added.

Dr. John King, history department chair, said he feels it would have been wiser to check more closely with faculty members about the appointees. "Now the search committee's going to have a more difficult time because Magner's procedures have destroyed some of the faculty's confidence in the committee," he said.

King said the problem may be due to Magner's use of the word "college."

"He (Magner) said he would consult the department chairs and the 'college,' which I took to mean the Faculty Council. I'm not doubting Magner's right to appoint those whom he saw as qualified, but the general terms he used were misleading," King explained.

Magner said those appointed to the committee are qualified to do their job, which he sees as finding "as strong a dean as we can." The committee's choice, Magner said, is vital to the continuing growth of the HFA college.

Editorial:

Academics loses to regents' choice of Commander

Politics and academia make strange bedfellows. But Allen Commander sleeps well with both, and the UH Board of Regents makes the affair as kinky as a waterbed. Unfortunately, one of the partners in this relationship is doomed to suffer — and that is the academic environment of the UH Downtown College.

Commander's official title is UH System vice president for public affairs; translated, this means he is a lobbyist. His job is to present a favorable image of UH and its interests to the Texas Legislature, various state boards and federal agencies.

He apparently has expanded his responsibilities. Commander now lobbies the UH Board of Regents for own personal concerns. In this case, it was for the chancellorship of the downtown college.

The position at the downtown college became vacant when Dr. J. Don Boney, then college chancellor, died of an apparent heart attack two weeks ago. UH President Philip G. Hoffman wanted to name Dr. Joseph Champagne, UH System vice president for academic affairs, to take Boney's place until a permanent chancellor was named.

The downtown college needed someone to hold things during the interim. The ideal person would have been a caretaker who knew how to keep the academic machine functioning, and who would not get embroiled in internal politics. For objectivity's sake, the interim chancellor should have been someone who was not interested in the job permanently.

Champagne seemed to fit that description. Commander, a professional lobbyist, quite obviously did not.

Since Commander did not have the blessing of Hoffman for the interim chancellorship, he decided to go around the president and lobby the regents himself. Champagne, an academic-oriented administrator rather than a political one, was unable to compete with Commander in the world of backstage politics.

Of course, it is ridiculous to think that he should have to. Apparently, the governor's new appointees to the board are more interested in wheeler-dealer politics than they are academic quality.

When an organization interviews for a managerial position, it is to the best advantage of the organization to seek a manager with the best qualifications in the field. In this case, the managers of the UH system chose a person who has his own interests at a higher priority than the administration and students he is to serve.

Thus the regents have upheld a precedent at the higher levels of UH employment that have already been well-established for faculty: that in a showdown between academic concerns and the powers of political persuasion, the academic is doomed to failure.

In other words, the regents blew it. They allowed themselves to be politically seduced by an experienced professional lobbyist who wanted to give himself an inside track to the permanent chancellorship. For the board now to appoint a search committee would be a joke; they have already made a mockery of objectivity.

Commentary:

Incident upsets volunteer

Editor's note: University Police have received many complaints about flashers on the upper floors of the M.D. Anderson Memorial Library. The following commentary, dropped off at The Daily Cougar office Monday, was written by a woman student who had an encounter in the library last week.

At her request, the name has been withheld.

Students who go through similar experiences should contact the University Police at 749-2691.

In the back of my mind, something was recording the movements and sounds that were going on around me, but my tight focus on the volume of bound journals on the library shelf in front of me acted as a filter. It was only in retrospect, as so often is the case, that I could learn the immediate lesson of that afternoon; what it's like to listen to a masturbator.

As a Psychology major, I had attended an introductory meeting for Crisis Hotline volunteers. One of the bits of information conveyed to us that day was that not all callers would be asking for referrals or needing to discuss problems. "You'll get some masturbators," Joyce stated.

On the phone, was she serious? "Yes, and you don't need to stay on the phone with those types. This is the only case when it is permissible for the volunteer to disengage from the caller abruptly. Hang up."

We roll played several practice calls, but didn't get into sexual release calls other than to be told, "You can tell by their breathing."

But to return to that day in the stacks. I had located the Psychology journal which had several references I was interested in. Rather than lug the heavy bound volumes down the rows and back to a table, I opened and read on a conveniently available empty shelf. As I replay the tape in my mind, a tall dark slender man looked down the row I was standing in. A few minutes later someone passed down the aisle, stopping on either side of and behind me as he ostensibly searched the stacks. Immersed in my reading, I didn't even look up.

My next awareness of the non-printed world was that of a man in the aisle across the empty shelf from me. He moved a bit to my left and then sat on the floor. My peripheral vision knew that he kept glancing up at me, but I wasn't about to be distracted. The gasps were muffled, nothing to alarm an innocent, but then he stood up with a tumescent bulging beneath his belt and stepped directly in front of me.

Another shelf of books hid his face, but we were both well aware of my quick collecting of books and departure for a populated study area.

That night I discussed my reaction and mulled over options with Joyce. "The only other thing you might have done was to alert the library staff," she offered. I wasn't willing to do that and told her so. "You stayed calm, got out of a tense situation and learned something. I'd say you handled the experience well," she assured me.

When I'm ready for a lesson in life it generally finds me. I've come to UH to get an education, but next time, take it to a phone booth, fella.

"Raising this deflates that, which helps a lot."

State rep fires shots

Chief Caldwell under gun

By LANNY DUMBAULD
Staff Writer for The Cougar

Houston Police Chief Harry Caldwell doesn't run the police department, according to one state representative.

State Representative Craig Washington pointed a finger at Caldwell and made the charge at the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights hearing Tuesday night. "He doesn't run the department, the Police Officers Association runs the department," he said.

Later he credited Caldwell with trying to improve the department.

Houston Police Department recruitment practices were the main subject of Tuesday night's session. Despite the national attention on the issue, attendance at the two and a half hour session was very light. Caldwell sat in the first row taking copious notes of the proceedings.

The first witnesses included four community leaders who voiced their views on the general problem of police misconduct and the progress the department has made toward solving it. Washington attacked the present grand jury and called for formation of a Civilian Review Board.

The next four witnesses were officers of the HPD recruitment and training divisions. They were asked about the cause of current department understaffing.

Capt. B.R. White of the recruitment division told the Commission HPD's recruitment area is confined to the Southern states because of the "higher concentration of blacks in the area."

When pressed for reasons why so many applicants are disqualified from joining the academy, White said certain disqualified applicants had a past history of "having sex with a child, habitual window peeping and sadistic behavior."

Queried on how much trainees in the police academy are taught about use of excessive or deadly force, Capt. L.C. Michna said counseling is used along with weekly tests on the Texas Penal Code. Simulated crime scenes also are utilized and any cadet who fails two scenes (i.e. kills the imaginary actor) is terminated, Michna said.

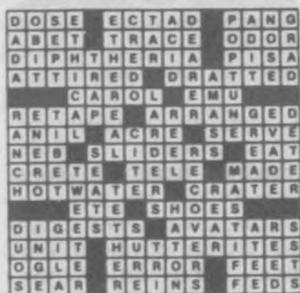

When confronted about high attrition rates for black and Mexican-American cadets, Lt. I.L. Stewart said, "Academically they do not perform as well" as their white counterparts.

One commissioner asked if a trainee's attitudes about other races is ascertained by the recruiters. White said it was "a very direct and pointed question asked of each applicant."

From the Associated Press
BONN, West Germany — A young man pleading for "a humane world" hijacked a West German jetliner in flight, held out all day in a standoff at the Bonn airport insisting the nation hear his demands for social change, then surrendered Wednesday night.

The hijacker, reportedly armed with a pistol, freed the 120 passengers and four of the eight crew members unharmed seven hours after the Lufthansa Boeing 727 landed at Bonn-Cologne Airport, but had kept four crew members aboard the plane, demanding to talk to Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and a television news crew.

FORT WORTH — FBI informant David McCrory testified Wednesday he "beat hell" out of a defense witness in the legal saga of millionaire defendant Cullen Davis.

McCrory, 41, did not explain when or why he fought with Jody Mac Oliver, but told the jury in Davis' murder solicitation trial he "beat hell" out of him on several occasions.

'Coogs are champs,' says Gators' Pell

By DON BRUBAKER
Sports Writer for The Cougar

The sad voice over the phone from Gainesville, Fla., was Florida head football coach Charley Pell. The reason he was sad was the topic of conversation, his football team.

If what they say is true, that calling long distance is the next best thing to being there, Pell would rather stay on the phone than bring his Gators to Houston Saturday night.

"Our young team has so many questions to be answered," Pell said. "The Astrodome is a tough place to take an exam."

How young are the Gators? Twenty freshmen will be suited out at kickoff time. The team is so young, they probably know more about blocking and tackling than shaving.

Pinning Pell down on who his starting lineup will be is about as difficult as sunbathing in a snowstorm. According to the Florida coach, over half of the starting positions have not been decided.

Some starters have been determined. One is at quarterback, where Tim Groves is number one. The 6-1, 188-pound junior had 28 completions in 71 attempts for 395 yards and three TD's in 1978.

The running back positions are not set. According to Pell, the battle at tailback is between sophomore Calvin Davis (team leader with 497 yards last year), junior squadman Carl Prioleau, and sophomore Shannon Burch. The two contenders at fullback are sophomore John Whittaker and junior Terry Williams (364 yards).

The starting split end is senior Darrell Jones. This spring, Jones beat out sophomore Johnny Gaffney. As a freshman, Gaffney caught six passes (one for a TD against SMU) for 105 yards. Johnny's older brother, Derrick, is a wide receiver for the New York Jets.

The flanker position is in good hands. Junior Cris Collinsworth is so well respected, his nickname is "Cadillac." Collinsworth was All-SEC on both wire service teams. His 39 catches were good for 745 yards and nine scores. The fastest player on the team (4.4 in the 40), as a freshman quarterback, he tied the NCAA record with a 99-yard TD pass to Derrick Gaffney against Rice.

Another question Pell has not yet answered is who will start on the offensive line. Junior center Ray Lawrence was the starter over another junior, Wally Hough, but Lawrence is out with an injury.

Joining Hough on the offensive front for the Gators will probably be Harold Galloway (242) and Jim Subers (234) at guards, Bill Bennek (248) and Joe Wickline (248) at the tackles, and Chris Faulkner at tight end.

Pell is "still looking at people" in the defensive line. Chances are juniors Tim Golden and Yancey Sutton, both converted from linebacker, will start at the ends.

The Gators' new boss has been forced by injuries to key personnel to make some shifts elsewhere in the line. Steve Tanner won a starting spot at left tackle, but his injury forced Pell to move David Galloway from the right side. Dock Luckie has been switched back to right tackle from the nose guard spot he took over in the spring.

Pell has no problem at linebacker. Senior middle linebacker Scott Brantley has been consensus All-SEC the past two years, while junior David Little (younger brother of the Miami Dolphins' Larry Little) was second team all-conference last year. "They're the only two we have who are ready to play," said Pell.

It's still a mystery to Pell who his starting defensive backfield will be. The leading candidates at the corners are Bill Fiorillo (eight thefts last year) on the left side, and Kyle Coburn on the right side. Juan Collins is the likely starter at free safety, while senior Chuck Hatch will probably get the starting nod at monster back.

Injuries and youth have caused Pell's first season with Florida to be anything but smooth. "We haven't played yet," Pell said, "so we don't know how to win."

Pell has one word to describe the Houston Cougars: "Champions. They've won a championship. Also, I'm impressed with Houston because they came from behind after being down by nine points to UCLA in Los Angeles. They've proven they know how to win the close ones. That is the biggest thing we are combatting."

Pell's last team at Clemson won the Gator Bowl last year. To go from a winning team to a team that had only four wins in 1978 is quite a transition. "I knew we had to rebuild," Pell said, "and that's what we're doing."

The progression begins for the Florida Gators of 1979 Saturday night in the Astrodome.

UT coupon exchange begins next Monday

The Houston Cougars have defeated the Texas Longhorns two out of three times since joining the Southwest Conference in 1976. As you might imagine, tickets for the games have been a scarce commodity.

Beginning Monday, Sept. 17 at 8:30 a.m. at the athletic ticket office in Hofheinz Pavillion, student coupon books may be exchanged beginning that date and running through Thursday at 4:30 p.m., Sept. 20.

The only tickets available for the game will be those exchanged for coupons in the athletic books. No additional tickets may be purchased for this game.

In order for students to be guaranteed UH-UT tickets, coupons exchanged must take place during the following hours: Monday and Tuesday, Sept. 17 and 18, between the hours of 8:30 a.m. and 7 p.m. And on Wednesday and Thursday between the hours of 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.

With the great amount of Texas alumni and Houston fan interest in this game, no additional seats are available.

INTRAMURAL REPORT

A weekly report on intramural sports from every Cougar's favorite place to eat.

INTRAMURALS

Another season of super football action is upon us and Intramural flag football is no exception. The staff, organizations, and players are all gearing up for what may be the most exciting football season ever. Once again we will have a round robin tournament which should provide untimely upsets and predictable wins. The 1979 flag football season kicks off this Saturday at 10 a.m. with some tremendous interconference rivalries meeting each other head on. Last year's post-season favorites are this year's pre-season picks. The men's action this weekend should center around the dorm team of Taub Terrors "A" vs. the wide open play of Omega Psi Phi and the attorney hopefuls of Mr. Meanor vs. fraternity powerhouse Sigma Chi "A" on Saturday.

Moving to Sunday, the eye docs of Fighting Iris vs. the high scoring Old Dirt Road should provide a touchdown barrage while the game of the week will feature perennial fraternity champion Kappa Alpha vs. the unpredictable power of Omicron Beta Gamma.

Moving to the women's action, the retired jocks of HUH?! will face the much improved sorority team of Delta Gamma while the game of the week will pit the veer offense of All-School champion Law Dees up against the always dangerous passing attack of sorority champion Chi Omega. Come out and cheer for your favorite team.

THE DAILY COUGAR

DeLuise bombs in directorial debut

By H.N. GRAHAM
Amusements Writer for The Cougar

HOT STUFF
Director: Dom DeLuise; writers: Michael Kane, Donale E. Westlake; producer: Mort Engelberg; from Columbia Pictures.

A few years back, our government started financing local undercover operations by city police forces. The cops would set up a fence, and the bad guys would come to them with the stolen goods. And wind up in jail. It was an obvious ploy, it worked quite well (showing how much stupidity goes into the makeup of the common criminal), was written up in Reader's Digest (cultural approval from the American heartland), and it was inevitable we'd see some movies about this rare instance of spectacular success by our national constabulary, brought to us by script-hungry producers.

That's what's going on in "Hot Stuff," starring Dom DeLuise as the gruff but lovable older detective who is the leader of the fencing operation, Jerry Reed as the ambitious younger detective who's talked everybody into trying it, Suzanne Pleshette as the new woman detective who's only been in the squad room a few days, and Luis Avalos as the token ethnic detective. Shame about Avalos, he's the only one showing any talent in this misguided production.

The film was done as slapstick comedy — the idea coming from the producer, so it seems. The film was directed by DeLuise himself, his first effort.

Now there is nothing wrong per se with trying to tell the story "Hot Stuff" had to tell as a comedy. It wouldn't be Shakespeare, but it might have been fun. Or interesting. Or watchable.

DeLuise has shown a flair for outrageous comedy, the more outrageous the better. Reed and

Jerry Reed, Suzanne Pleshette, Dom DeLuise

Pleshette both have exhibited some talent as light, innocuous comedians.

Either DeLuise just didn't get the hang of directing his first time out, or he was saddled with a script so bad nothing could save it. Whatever, "Hot Stuff" is a terrible film, boring, predictable, and a waste of time.

campus films

COUSIN, COUSINE
Director: Jean-Charles Tacchella; a Libris Films Release; 1976; at 1 and 7 p.m. in the UC Underground Theater.

1976 was a terrible year for secret from their respective spouses.

The film is a totally anarchic holiday, harmless and a great deal of fun. H.N.G.

Victor Lanoux, Marie-Christine Barrault

films. When the year was all but over, "Cousin, Cousine" came out of nowhere to become a big popular success.

It took a drought in the American film market in that year to get people to go out to try this comedy from France, but "Cousin, Cousine" worked itself into being a hit by being warmer, funnier, and more entertaining than anything else out at the same time.

The story is very simple. Two distant cousins, one male and one female (the title is just the French word for cousin in its masculine and feminine forms), played by Victor Lanoux and the delightful Marie-Christine Barrault, meet at a family gathering, and start an affair, which, in the interest of honesty, they refuse to keep a
