The tranquility of society depends on justice and the happiness of its members as well as the peaceful possession of their goods. Therefore, you must confine your heartfelt desires within the limits of moderation and let the head of justice guide them. Do not cast a covetous eye on the goods of your neighbor or in the manner he may possess them. Rather, your neighbor's possessions should be sacred to you. May no temptation blind you and may no injury done to you incite you to violence, thus putting your neighbor's life in danger. Do not destroy your reputation, do not corrupt falsely...
