

J. S. CULLINAN
HOUSTON, TEXAS

October 25, 1930.

HOUSTON NEGRO HOSPITAL
Nurses Home

CONFIDENTIAL

Dr. J. W. Slaughter,
618 1/2 Milam Street,
Houston, Texas.

Dear Sir:

Sometime during the coming week when it is convenient I should like to make an engagement at my office to further discuss the sketches which were submitted during the summer, allowing time enough so that following the meeting at my office we might run out to the Hospital and look over the ground.

While, as you know, I had not contemplated giving this consideration until the latter part of next year (beyond developing joint ideas and plans,) owing to the stress of unemployment conditions with which we are confronted, if acceptable plans are presented, estimates of cost of which will not be excessive, and finally, financial arrangements worked out that will meet my personal requirements under existing disturbed conditions, it may be that this unit could proceed at once or as soon as complete plans that seem best to meet the needs all around have been prepared and submitted.

Yours very truly,

(Sgd) J. S. CULLINAN

JSC-CZ

cc-Mr. Maurice J. Sullivan,
Second National Bank Bldg., (c)
Houston, Texas.

✓
Ho-WTS (Bld)