Military, civilian officials split on MX

Washington (AP) — The chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff said Monday that President Reagan's proposed buildup of strategic forces was approved over his objections, and Senate Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd likened the package to "putting our money in a used car."

But Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger insisted that the Reagan administration will not reconsider its recommendation to build 100 B-1 bombers nor resurrect a now-abandoned plan to shuttle long-range MX missiles among desert shelters in the West.

The split between the Pentagon's top civilian and military leaders was aired as the Senat Armed Services committee opened hearings on the six-year, $180.3 billion strategic modernization program announced by Reagan last Friday.

Air Force Gen. David Jones, chairman of the joint chiefs, testified that the mobile basing plan was dropped over his objections in favor of an interim program to put about three dozen MX weapons in strengthened underground silos now occupied by Titan and Minuteman missiles.

Jones, saying he was speaking for himself and not necessarily all of the service chiefs, said, "I remain to be convinced" that the missiles can be made to withstand a Soviet attack by any means other than the so-called "shell game" of multiple bases that the Carter administration has advanced.

Questioned later Monday by Rep. Norman Dicks, D-Wash., at a House defense appropriations subcommittee hearing, Jones denied that he was trying to resurrect the multiple shelter plan.

"The president has made his decision, even though I recommended something different," Jones said, adding that he personally places greater importance on the B-1 program, which he favors, than the MX.

Senate committee chairman John Tower, R-Texas, a strong proponent of the shell-game MX, said he hoped it will get a new look when the administration makes a decision in 1984 as to how to deploy the 100 new missiles permanently.

Weinberger dashed that hope, saying: "As far as the president... the administration... and I are concerned, we have made a flat recommendation that the multiple shelter system... no longer be considered or that it be reopened. That's a firm, final decision."

The defense secretary maintained that placing the first batch of MX missiles in "hardened" or strengthened, concrete silos will "give us the strongest possible deterrent forces as quickly as we can get them."

Byrd, D-W.Va., called upon Congress to reject the administration's MX and B-1 package, labeling it as politically motivated and not based on "raw technology or national security factors."

"What we're doing with the B-1 is putting our money in a used car," Byrd told reporters. "It is a used car that will be obsolete for the purposes for which it was intended."

And Reagan's decision to put MX missiles in existing silos "does nothing to close the window of vulnerability. There is a general disappointment in that decision," Byrd said.

Rains cause leaks in campus roofs

Heavy rains yesterday afternoon caused leaks in the Cougar Band Annex Building and the Architecture Library.

In order to replace the one-story-high roof on the south end of the Band Annex, the old roof had been removed recently and replaced with a temporary plastic covering.

By the time the band was holding its rehearsal at 3:30 p.m. the floor was scattered with buckets, trash cans, and plastic tarps in an attempt to contain numerous leaks. Two students, Rob Taylor and Peter Riehm, struggled on the roof with sheets of plastic, trying to keep the leaks to a minimum.

Physical Plant Director Albert Bellamy said, "Of course we knew there would be a problem with the temporary plastic covering in the event of a rain like the one today. It never fails though, when we do roof repair work, it rains."

Bellamy insisted, "There is no danger involved in the Band Annex leaks. Except maybe for somebody getting wet and catching pneumonia."

Director of Construction Michael Burgess said, "The reason the roof was being repaired in the first place was because it tended to leak during heavy rains."

Lynn Sterba, the College of Architecture's library technician, noticed a leak in the library roof at 11:30 a.m.

According to Sterba, "Maintenance arrived very quickly and had the leak patched by approximately 1:30 p.m. But I'm going to leave the tarps out all night just in case."

The leak, according to Bellamy, was probably caused by somebody walking on the roof. Sterba said, "Apparently, people are always using the roof to retrieve frisbee's."

Reagan may ease CIA checks

Washington (AP) — A draft presidential order would allow the CIA to infiltrate domestic groups and, with the attorney general's approval, secretly influence their activities, government sources said Monday.

The document is the third draft of a revised executive order which the Reagan administration has sent to Capitol Hill. It would replace guidelines issued by President Carter in January 1978 to govern the conduct of U.S. intelligence agencies.

Sources inside and outside the government said the order also would:

Remove prohibitions against the CIA's conducting "special activities," or covert actions, inside the United States, if they are not intended to influence U.S. policies or politics.

Strike the requirement that intelligence agents reasonably believe that U.S. citizens and corporations abroad are agents of a foreign power or involved in terrorism or drug traffic before they can be put under physical surveillance.

Retain bans on assassinations, on CIA electronic surveillance in the United States and on CIA break-ins in this country.

Assert that restrictions on the FBI's conducting electronic surveillance or warrantless break-ins on U.S. citizens and corporations are not meant to limit the constitutional powers of the president.

The CIA refused comment on the proposed order, which President Reagan could implement on his own authority. Consultation with Congress on such a question is largely advisory.

The draft also says it does not authorize any violations of existing laws, but some sources said that in certain areas, particularly involving Fourth Amendment protections against unreasonable searches, there is little or no existing law other than the Carter executive order.

Several sources said the impact of the order will depend on how some of the language is interpreted and what implementing procedures agency chiefs establish, pending approval by the attorney general.

Lack of SA quorum halts funding debate

By MIKE MONSON
News Editor

Yesterday's heavy rains kept enough Senators away from last night's SA Senate meeting to prevent the existence of a quorum. As a result, the UH Homecoming elections will be held without the benefit of the Senate's official sanction.

The SA election code requires that the Homecoming calendar and election expenditures be approved by a majority of Senators. Since the calendar and expenditures began yesterday and will wind up next week, the Senate will never have a chance to act as required.

The elections, events and "proposed" Student Service Fee expenditures of $1021 will simply go on anyway, according to SA Senator and Program Council Homecoming Committee member Freddie Garrietty.

Without a quorum, the Senate is very limited in the action it can take. It can refer proposed funding legislation to its appropriate committee. It can approve committee and Senate vacancy appointees even though the next meeting with a quorum must vote on those approvals.

Also, if at any time a Senator calls for a quorum, the meeting must immediately be adjourned. Senator Don Atherton did just that last night. Before his action the Senate did approve the appointments of Jerry Vincent as the new Senator from the College of Optometry and Dawn Ford as College of Education Senator.

Atherton's call came during discussion of the Homecoming calendar and expenditures. According to Senate Speaker Robert Lusk, any discussion of Homecoming was meaningless without the required quorum. But the action to refer two pieces of funding legislation to committee was left on the agenda.

The two bills, one to allocate $238 to the HPER Majors Club to cover travel expenses to the Annual Texas Recreation and Park Society State Convention and the other to allocate $800.60 to send two members of the UH chapter of the National Organization for Women to its national convention, will have to wait a week for any action.

In earlier action the Campus Governance Committee proposed two appointees for membership on the Student Court. Both of those appointees will wait until next week. Senators Atherton and Eric Scott moved that the approvals be waived until the next meeting.

Heating pad responsible for fire in Cougar Place

A minor fire in the Cougar Place dormitory complex early yesterday morning left one suite with smoke and soot damage. No injuries were reported.

The fire, reported at 6:20 a.m., was confined to a suite in Building 1 of the complex. The fire destroyed an electrical heating pad and the mattress and bedding in one unit of the suite. A fault in the heating pad caused the blaze, according to Associate Director of Housing Tom Penett.

"Everyone was evacuated from the building the minute it was discovered," Penett said.

Penett said Dorm Manager Ray Domingue quenched the fire with a wall extinguisher. The Houston Fire Department was called to help clear the smoke.

The fire started in one side of the suite and spread to the adjoining unit through the connecting bathroom.

This morning's fire was the second since Cougar Place opened in September, Penett said. The first incident occurred the first week of school and was attributed to a hair dryer.

Letter

Look to comrades

To the Editor:

Here I thought, in this modern day of high technology and advanced education, the intellectual young adult had overcome his parents' Jim Crow era. But after reading Debra Jennings' letter to the editor, there must still be some ignorance concerning interactions between individuals as a society.

The fuse that seemed to set Ms. Jennings off so quickly, and probably not well thought response, was the showing of a great archival film, "The Birth of a Nation" which, by the way, was premiered in 1913, almost 70 years ago.

In my opinion the film represents not the racist factor, but the film industries and America's accomplishments since that long ago era that has plagued this society. Something so out of contrast with society today it must not and cannot be used as leverage to obtain one's own personal vendetta.

But since Debra talks for all, then let me quote a parable.

"A ship lost at sea for many days suddenly sighted a friendly vessel. From the mast of the unfortunate vessel was seen a signal, 'water, water; we die of thirst!' The answer from the friendly vessel at once came back, 'Cast down your bucket where you are.' A second time the signal, 'Water, water; send us water!' ran up from the distressed vessel, and was answered, 'Cast down your bucket where you are,' and a third and fourth signal for water was answered, 'Cast down your bucket where you are.' The captain of the distressed vessel, at last heeding the injunction, cast down his bucket, and it came up full of fresh, sparkling water from the mouth of the Amazon River. To those of my race who depend on bettering their condition in a foreign land or who underestimate the importance of cultivating friendly relations with the Southern white man, who is their next door neighbor, I would say: 'Cast down your bucket where you are'—cast it down in making friends in every manly way of the people of all races by whom we are surrounded."

I've quoted this from one of the greatest statesmen of our century, Booker T. Washington.

Mark Russell on raises

The Republican-controlled Senate just voted themselves a bigger tax break on business deductions and raised the pay of senior government officials. This is blood, sweat and tears?

They passed these measures on the same day that President Reagan was preparing his speech on personal sacrifice, buckling down, tote that barge, lift that bail, and put a half a sandwich in a kid's lunch pail.

You thought Washington was going to change its ways this year, didn't you? Perish the thought, oh, ye of too much faith. Change? In a city where the arrogance hangs as heavy as the marble buildings?

This takes $217 million out of the Treasury, but I still have faith — anybody who can turn ketchup into a vegetable can turn water into wine and a $217 million pork barrel into a silk purse.

October, no fond memories

By Sig Christensen

I woke up this morning from a very vivid dream about an old girlfriend who had nearly become my old lady. I suppose we had, at one time, been in love. She did all the things I did, and I did all the things she did. Doing and liking, of course, are two different matters.

So it was that I truly despised watching the Saturday morning cartoons she loved, but I nonetheless sat next to her in our somewhat conjugal bed, spending half the day with "Fat Albert." Later in the afternoon she hugged me with all her life as we...turned into a sharp curve doing fifty. Alas, she hated my love for motorcycling.

This wasn't a cynical kind of appeasement intended to prolong the affair. Rather, we really believed in each other enough to sacrifice our prejudices. This was real, and good, and vivid.

Obviously, it is the stuff that dreams are made of.

As the dream faded I grew troubled. Undoubtedly, I think about her from time to time, but time itself has eclipsed us, baring ourselves from human to harlequinade.

When I looked at my calendar, I suddenly understood why my dream was real, and good, and vivid, and otherwise painful. The First of October had passed my door, like he has in other years, in much the same manner as the Angel of Death had in the Old Testament story of Exodus.

Outside my door lay my blood sacrifice. It consisted of four wheels, an engine, and a coolant system gone loco. Some people would call it a car, but I would call it a raw deal, a testament to that prostitute Detroit. I would gladly yield this auto to my ghost-friend. In keeping with his character, though, he'd gladly let me keep it. After all, he's taken the good stuff.

On a sunny October 2, two years ago, he made a double play by wiping out my motorcycle and breaking my legs. I suppose the morbid curiosity seekers at the Continental Bus station got a thrill too. Although I did receive a nice settlement (my lawyer did as well, considering his effort), old October deprived me of the most dependable transport device I have ever known.

The First of October, in his sinister way, left me a calling card through this real, and good, and vivid dream about an age and way of life gone by. And after the dream was no more I rose from bed to face another...sunny day

Outside my door lay my blood sacrifice. It consisted of four wheels, an engine, and a coolant system gone loco. I wanted to bypass this business and return to my bed, perhaps recapturing a frame or two from a Saturday morning cartoon.

For a moment, the temptation to get back to wholesome needs, to let that domestic trash rot and rust as its creators intended, nearly swept me away. I thought about my bicycle, and how much better off I'd be if I used it instead. And that seemed like a damned good idea — until I opened the door and took in a breath of October.

Projections show Houston now no. 4

Houston (AP) — If Texans like to brag about bigness, Houstonians can now chant "We're No. 4" without fear of being shouted down again by Philadelphians.

The City of Brotherly Love has thrown in the towel, unofficially.

The Census Bureau is sticking to its old count, but the Philadelphia Inquirer reported Monday that if the trends of the past decade have continued, "At midnight, Houston snatched our No. 4 spot in the population playoffs."

The 1980 census showed

Houston gaining an average of 98 new residents a day between 1970 and 1980, while Philadelphia was losing more than 71 daily. By projecting those statistics, the Inquirer said Oct. 5 is the day Houston, which was ranked No. 45 in 1920, rises to the No. 4 spot.

Some people in Houston's planning department threw a party in 1979 to celebrate overtaking Philadelphia based on their statistics. But the official census figures that came out the next year said Houston was still fifth, with 1,594,086 people compared to Philadelphia's 1,688,210.

This time, no one here seemed to get excited at the news of the Inquirer's discovery.

The Inquirer said its findings were not official.

"That cannot change on the books until the next census is taken April 1, 1990. Until then the 1980 census figures remain official, if not up to date."

And both Houston and Philadelphia still rank far behind the official Big Three — New York with 7,35,348, Chicago with 3,005,072, and Los Angeles with 2,966,763.

Chi Alpha sorority offers Christian student events

Chi Alpha is "not a sorority, or a fraternity, or even a club" but "a group of Christian students with a mission," according to Glen Menzies, campus minister of UH Chi Alpha.

Chi Alpha is derived from two Greek words, "cristou apostili," meaning "Christ's sent ones."

Why are they here? Evangelism primarily, said Ron Parrish, co-campus minister of the UH group.

Chi Alpha has its big meetings at 7:30 p.m. Thursdays when it includes worship, rap, teaching, and prayer in a setting which often combines music, drama, and/or guest speakers.

Smaller "support groups" of 5-10 students meet once a week on various days of the week from now until Nov. 23-25. Support-group meetings are more intimate times of relational sharing which observe and seek to mimic the life of Christ as seen in Scripture.

Though Chi Alpha isn't a fraternity, etc., it schedules events each semester — one of which is a concert of the Second Chapter of Acts, a contemporary Gospel group especially popular among evangelical Christians. This free concert will take place in Hofhienz Pavillion Thursday, Oct. 8. The group has several albums out.

UH Chi Alpha Christian Fellowship is a part of the National Assemblies of God. Its emphasis however, is local.

UH runners feel good about winning

By RICHARD BROWN
Sports Editor

Senior Andy Halpin didn't know if he was going to make it and junior Kirchen Hagenlocher was so hot she felt like a crazy woman, but they both finished the University of Texas-Arlington Invitational Friday ahead of their respective cross-country packs.

Halpin led the Cougar men to a first-place win against four other teams with a time of 31:27.3, made over the 10,000-meter Vandergriff Park course in Arlington. At one point in the race, though, Halpin thought he wasn't going to finish.

"I lost my balance the night before when I went out for a run," Halpin said. "I fell on my hip and when I woke up on Friday, I couldn't walk."

Halpin says some warm-up exercises before the race eased some of the pain, but he was still concerned about his hip.

"I had a pretty easy start," Halpin said, "then my hip tightened up and I really didn't want to finish. My hip loosened up, however, and I went for it and took off. It was really easy."

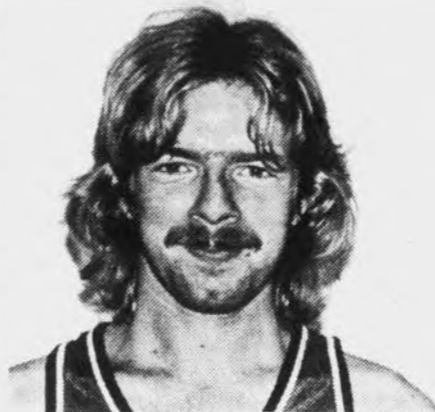

Halpin's first-place finish came after he had two second-place showings at the Texas A&M and Rice Invationals in late September. He says a change of attitude during the summer made him a better runner this season.

"Last year I went all out," Halpin said. "I ran too much and tired myself out. That was pretty stupid. But now, if I feel tired, I would rest. I listen to myself more now than I did before."

Hagenlocher heard her coach, Ken Lehman, tell her to "just have fun" as she ran towards the finish line with Terry Ewbanks of the University of Texas near her side. Hagenlocher smiled, and she pulled further ahead of Ewbanks to finish first in the 5,000-meter race with a time of 17:36.8. It was a victory that Hagenlocher will remember.

"I was really excited about the race," Hagenlocher said. "I knew Terry was going to be there and I never had beaten her. I went ahead of her in the race and ran really quick. She hung on, though. She tried to pass me but I didn't let her."

"My coach (Lehman) said, 'Just have fun.' I smiled and my lead increased. She was quick, but I knew she was going to be beaten.

"I was really glad. It was something that I wanted to do for so long."

"Ken is always all over the course," Hagenlocher said of Lehman. "He tells me that I'm stronger than any of the other girls I race against. The guys cheering helps, too. It keeps me going. It was so hot there I felt like I was a crazy woman."

Hagenlocher says Lehman's workouts have helped her running.

"Ken wants me to run the best for myself," she said. "I believe in his workouts. I have a lot more confidence to do what I want to do for myself, and running is very important to me. I'm beginning to see how far people can go with running."

"I guess I never really believed in myself. But now, I'm having fun running and that's the important thing."

The Cougar men gained their second straight UT-A Invitational team championship with 54 points to second-place Rice University's 71. McNeese State placed third with 93, followed by Baylor with 110 and Louisiana Tech 113.

Sophomore Earl Zilles finished third with a time of 31:37, behind Baylor's Bacillo Garcia who had a 31:36. Other UH finishers included Paul Hamilton (12th place, 32:31) and Kyle Wright (14th, 32:41).

The UH women's team placed fourth with 81 points. Texas picked up 29 points for the championship. Abilene Christian was second with 64 and Texas A&M third with 80. North Texas State finished fifth, followed by Northeast Louisiana.

Hagenlocher was the only top 10 Cougar finisher. Rosemary Hessman, with 18:43, was 12th and Nancy Staudt placed 17th with 19:17.

The Cougars take the week off and will travel to Baton Rouge, La. for the LSU Invitational on Oct. 17.

Women's volleyball

The women's volleyball team had a frustrating time at the Southwest Missouri Invitational Oct. 2-3. The team was able to win only one of 10 matches against five other teams and did not place in the playoffs.

The team carries a 7-13-2 season record into the 15th Annual UH Volleyball Invitational at Hofheinz Pavilion and Garrison Gym on Oct. 8-10. The Cougars will be defending their 1980 title against 11 other teams.

Southwest Missouri State, which won the SW Missouri Invitational last weekend, will be featured, as well as Texas-Arlington, which was runnerup to SMSU.

Cougar Notes

Coogs stop them cold

The Cougar defense just keeps them standing still.

UH's Mad Dogs, with their convincing 24-3 victory over Baylor last Saturday, are ranked third in the nation in rushing defense. Pittsburgh rates first, giving their opponents an average of -10 yards per game, and the Texas Longhorns are second, with 40 yards per game. The Cougars are giving up only 55.8 yards a game.

The Cougars have yet to yield more than 84 yards rushing after four games. Not since 1968, when UH stopped opponents for under 100 yards rushing in seven straight games, have the Cougars been able to maintain such a streak.

UH is also seventh in overall defense nationally, limiting their opponents to 221 yards a game, and seventh in scoring defense. The Cougars have allowed their opponents an average of 8.0 points a game. You have to look back to the stats of 1956, when Bill Meek was head coach and UH finished on top of the Missouri Valley Conference with a 4-0 record, 7-2-1 overall, to find as good an effort. The Cougars allowed just 9.0 points a game then.

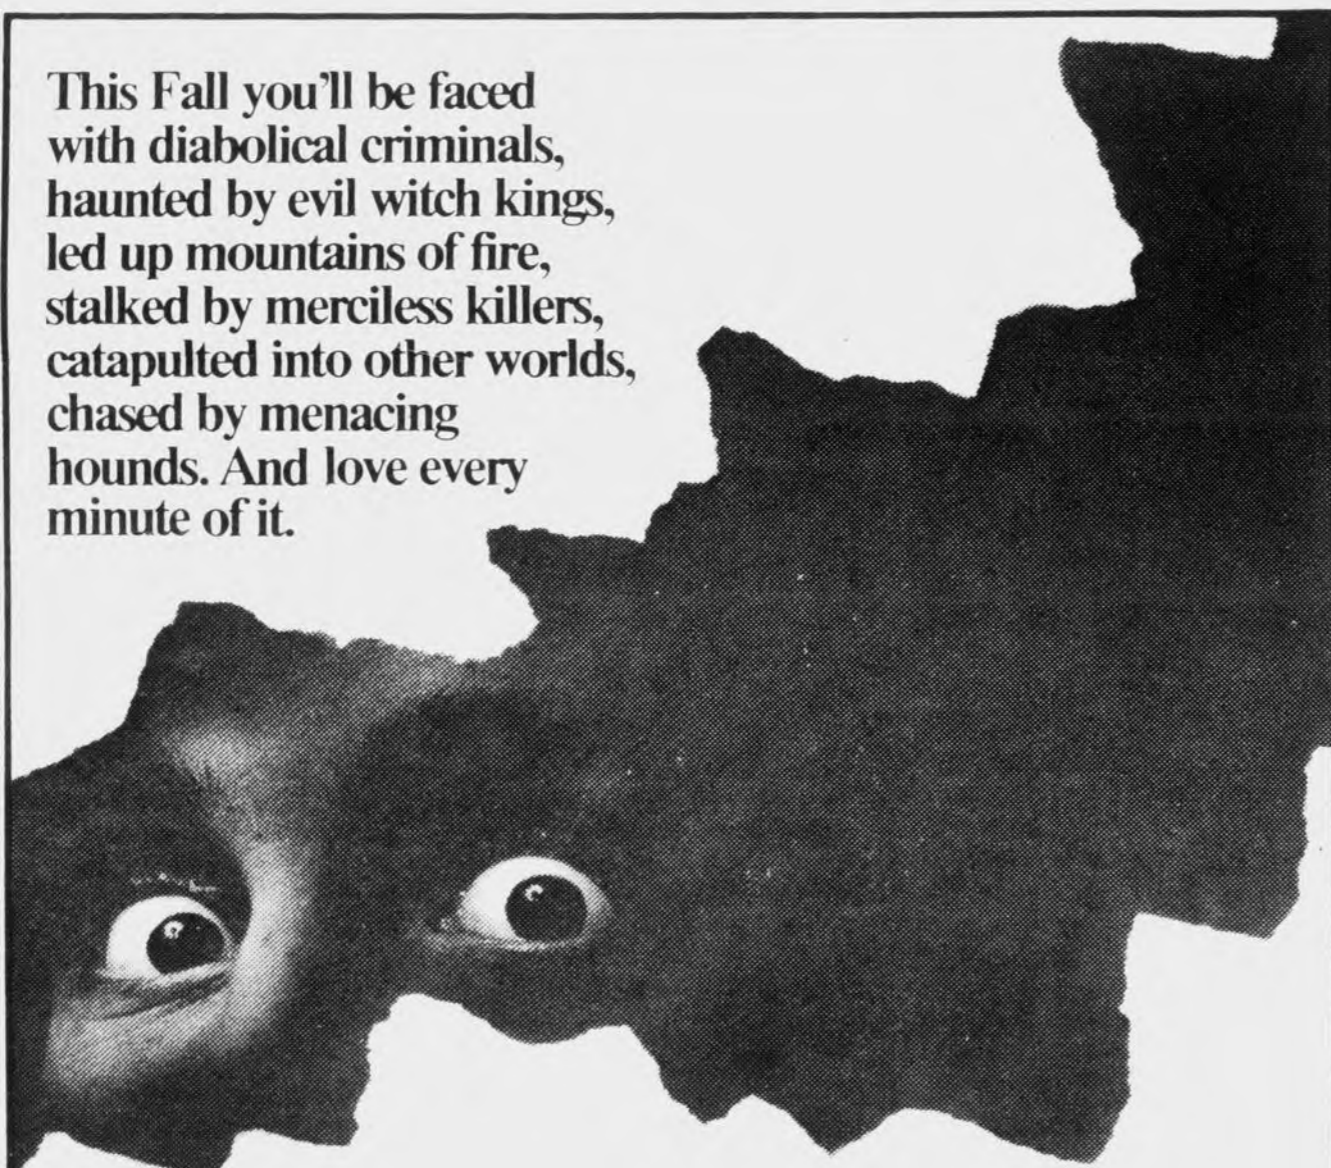

Opponents have yet to score a fourth quarter point, and they have tallied 32 in four games, with one touchdown on the rush and one touchdown passing. 1974 was the last time the Cougar defense has been so stingy with the points. Virginia Tech (limited to 12 points), South Carolina (14), Villanova (0) and Cincinnati (6) were held to a total of 32 points by UH midway through that season.

If the Cougars keep Texas A&M from scoring a touchdown in Saturday's game, it will mark the first time since 1973 that UH has kept three opponents from scoring one. The Cougars would also be able to chalk up their 11th quarter of play without allowing a touchdown.

A&M tickets are on sale

There are 1,000 tickets remaining for Saturday's UH-Texas A&M game at Kyle Field in College Station. The UH ticket office, located in Hofheinz Pavilion, will remain open today until 7:00 p.m. and 4:30 p.m. the rest of the week. Tickets are $10.00 each and students will need to present their identification card.

Astros won't apologize

(AP) — The Houston Astros, winners of the National League Western Division's second season, are not about to apologize for advancing to the divisional playoffs Tuesday against Los Angeles instead of Cincinnati.

The Astros, defending Western Division champions, will send Nolan Ryan, 11-5, against Dodger starter Fernando Valenzuela, 13-7, in a dream pitching matchup in the first game of the best-of-five division playoffs.

"I don't feel any compassion for the Reds and anybody who says we backed into the playoffs is crazy," Astros third baseman Art Howe said. "We outplayed them in the second half of the season. Sure, they had a good streak, but we must have done something right because they couldn't catch us."

Cincinnati will watch the playoffs this year after finishing both halves of the strike-marred season with the best overall record in the major leagues, while Los Angeles, the first-half winner, and Houston fight for the division crown.

"All players realized that because of the strike this year, we were playing by a new set of rules," Astro catcher Alan Ashby said. "We played by the rules and were the better team."

The Astros lost two of three games to the Dodgers in the regular season-ending series, while Atlanta took two of three games from the Reds, handing the second-half title to Houston.

Ryan, whose 1.69 ERA tops the National League, said he felt at the peak of his career in his second year with the Astros. "I probably don't have the stuff I once threw, but I have more control," Ryan said.

Valenzuela, who until Sept. 25 had never given up a run to the Astros, led the league with eight shutouts, 180 strikeouts, complete games and 192 innings pitched. He could be seeking revenge against the Astros.

Houston defeated Valenzuela 4-1 in an important series in the Astrodome Sept. 25.

As the sun approached the horizon, the heat waves above the harvested corn field began to dissipate. Standing beside a mesquite tree near a small man-made tank, I could hear the ticking of the windmill as it turned in the hot breeze.

A shot rang out to my left and I looked up to see a group of mourning doves as they flew overhead. Before I could respond, the doves had quickly vanished behind the tree line.

The mourning dove is a quarry to be respected. Being the fastest of the upland game birds, a dove may reach speeds of 60 mile-per-hour on a calm day. The brown and gray feathers which doves wear are excellent camouflage, blending well with the South Texas terrain.

The reasons for the popularity of dove hunting are apparent. Usually doves are hunted late in the afternoon, before the winter chill sets in. Contrast this time with duck hunting, which is most effectively done in the cold of winter, standing in a marsh before dawn breaks.

It has been estimated that 70 percent of the population of dove die off each year and are replaced with newborn. Hunters account for only 10 to 13 percent of this death rate. The remainder are lost to predators, scavengers or disease. Due to an increase in the numbers of doves, the daily bag limit in Texas has been raised from 10 to 12 birds per hunter.

But the limit is generous. Hunters may average five birds a bag if they're lucky. Over a season's time, one hunter may bring home only 24.

Another dove blurred by. I raised my shotgun, swung in front of the bird, and squeezed the trigger. Not even flinching, the dove continued on its way unscathed.

Truss gets AP honor

Senior defensive end Leo Truss will be named the Associated Press Southwest Conference Defensive Player of the Week, The Daily Cougar learned yesterday.

Truss had eight unassisted tackles, assisted with two tackles, made one fumble recovery and one blocked pass, and accounted for 19 yards in losses in last Saturday's 24-3 UH win over Baylor to earn the honor. Truss, 21, was also named "Mad Dog of the Week" by UH football coaches for his effort.

"I'm very happy to get the recognition," Truss said of AP's nod. "I was kind of surprised. I was not expecting anything like that. I've been going out and playing, and giving all I got."

In busiest first day

High Court agrees to hear veto case

Washington (AP) — The Supreme Court, opening a new term with one of its busiest days in history, said Monday it will decide the constitutionality of how Congress does much of its spending.

With Justice Sandra Day O'Connor making her public debut as a working member, the court issued some 1,000 orders and began hearing arguments in cases already accepted for study.

The justices said they will decide the validity of the "one-house veto," under which either house of Congress may set aside decisions of the president or government agencies.

A federal appeals court said the much-used legislative procedure — an element in more than 200 laws dictating the spending of billions of dollars — is unconstitutional.

The Justice Department and House and Senate lawyers now must try to convince the nation's highest court that the appeals court was wrong. The one-house veto eases Congress' workload but short-circuits the conventional way a law comes into being.

In essence, the veto works this way:

Congress passes a law allowing the president or certain government agencies to issue regulations having the effect of law. The regulations are sent to Congress as recommendations, and will become law unless vetoed within 30 days by a majority vote of either the Senate or the House. If the recommendation is vetoed, the president or executive agency has no recourse.

Under the more common procedure, proposed laws have to pass through both houses of Congress and then be signed by the president. If the president imposes a veto, the legislation can be resurrected only by a two-thirds vote in each house.

The one-house veto has been in existence since 1932 but such provisions were not written into laws with any frequency until the 1970s.

In other matters Monday, the court took these actions:

Agreed to decide whether there is a constitutional right to bail. The justices will use a Nebraska case to resolve whether states can deny pre-trial freedom to all people accused of certain crimes. A lower court said such blanket denials of bail is unconstitutional.

Refused to allow group prayers during student assemblies at a public high school in Chandler, Ariz. The court, without comment, left intact decisions barring such prayers.

Whether a woman who says she was raped in 1931 by the Scottsboro Boys, nine black youths whose legal case became part of the nation's race-relations history, may sue NBC for libel over a 1976 television movie.

Rejected attacks on state laws barring most adopted people from inspecting official records showing their true parents' identities.

Ended the legal life of a lawsuit that had charged the FBI and the Kerr-McGee Corp. with undercutting Karen Silkwood's nuclear plant union-organizing drive. The justices left intact a decision dismissing conspiracy and cover-up allegations filed after Silkwood's 1974 death in Oklahoma.

Haig raps opponents of AWACS sale

Washington (AP) - In a furious attempt to salvage an $8.5 billion arms deal to Saudi Arabia, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. charged opponents with "illusions . . . irresponsible in the extreme" on Monday while President Reagan unveiled support from six previous administrations.

Haig, in testimony to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, personally assailed Democrat John Glenn of Ohio for what he termed the "imaginary" claim that a compromise could be worked out calling for joint U.S.-Saudi manning of the five AWACS radar planes at the heart of the sale.

The president, meanwhile, assembled 16 defense and foreign-policy officials from Washington's past for a White House display of bipartisan support. The officials included former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, who served presidents Nixon and Ford, and Zbigniew Brzezinski, President Carter's national security adviser.

Reagan read a joint statement by his guests which declared that "the sale of AWACS and other air defense equipment to Saudi Arabia would make a substantial contribution to the nation security interests of the United States in a vital part of the world."

"The rejection of this sale would damage the ability of the United States to conduct a credible and effective foreign policy, not only in the Persian Gulf region, but across a broad range of issues," the statement said.

Reagan's guest to turn around an obviously skeptical Congress also included summoning every Republican member of the Senate to the White House for meetings on the issue Tuesday.

On Capitol Hill, Haig declared "it would be irresponsible in the extreme" to veto the sale, which could be negated through votes by both houses by Oct. 31.

"Our margin for error and delay is dangerously thin," Haig told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Singling out Glenn, Haig said the Ohio Democrat's call for joint manning of the Airborne Warning and Control Systems planes is "imaginary" because the Saudis simply won't buy that.

He said that so-called compromise is but one of "two dangerous illusions" harbored in Congress. The other, he said, is that the damage to U.S.-Saudi relations caused by a congressional veto could be repaired later.

He said turmoil in Iran, a new alliance among Libya, Ethiopia and South Yemen, and the fragile ceasefire in Lebanon are all threats to world peace.

Bell rate hearings conclude

Austin (AP) — A six-week hearing on Southwestern Bell's $469.8 million rate hike request ended Monday, but Texans probably won't know until December how much their phone bills will increase.

Hearing examiner Bob Gillespie said he would submit his report next month. He predicted the three-man commission would rule on it in early December.

The commission will get a separate report from Hearing Examiner Carolyn Shellman, who heard testimony about how much money the company needs. Gillespie will decide where that money should come from.

Southwestern Bell wants to raise local one-party residential rates by $5.45 per month. The company, facing increased competition, does not want to raise intrastate long distance rates.

However, the PUC staff — in an effort to keep local service rates down — is recommending a five percent increase in intrastate long distance rates, for a total of $42 million. The staff report recommends $247 million in increases, including $2.40 a month for most residential customers.

Southwestern Bell still is fighting the long distance increase. However, company lawyers tried Monday to show that if a long distance hike is ordered it should be more than the $42 million recommended by the staff.

Testimony prepared by Bruce Egan of St. Louis, an economic analyst for Southwestern Bell, said the $42 million increase would not necessarily mean $42 million in revenues for the company. Egan's testimony said increasing long distance tolls would mean less long distance calls — 26,915 fewer calls a year, according to his calculations.

The staff recommendation did not take that into account, according to Egan and Bell lawyer Jim Wurtz.

"The $42 million recommended by the staff is not worth $42 million to the company," said Wurtz.

Because higher rates would mean fewer calls, long distance increases adding up to $78.5 million on paper actually would be needed to bring in $42 million in revenues, said Bell spokesman Dale Johnson.

Several of the intervenors in the case, including MCI and U.S. Telephone — long distance competitors — persuaded Gillespie not to allow Bell to introduce Egan's testimony into the record. The intervenors said Egan's comments were not proper rebuttal testimony but was new information Southwestern Bell should have offered when it presented its case here.

New Iranian president elected as 129 executed

Beirut, Lebanon (AP) — Government firing squads executed 129 leftists Monday and Iran's fundamentalist Moslem regime proclaimed Hojatolislam Ali Khamenei president by a record vote, Tehran's official media reported.

Firing squads at Tehran's Evin Prison executed 61 urban guerrillas at daybreak Monday and 68 other leftists were put to death elsewhere across the country, a prison spokesman and the state-run Kayhan newspaper said.

The prison spokesman, who refused to give his name, told The Associated Press in Beirut by telephone that the prisoners were convicted of street violence and armed insurgence against the Islamic republic. The Tehran newspaper said the other leftists were executed on similar charges.

Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's government has announced the executions of at least 1,195 government foes since the June 22 ouster of secular-minded President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr. Leftists have been blamed in the slayings of more than 300 Khomeini supporters during that same period.

The prison spokesman and Kayhan said the condemned people belonged to the Mujahedeen Khalq and an allied Marxist-Leninist group, Peykar. The Mujahedeen is an Islamic-Marxist guerrilla group spearheading the bombing and assassination campaign against Khomeini loyalists.

Mohammad Hussein Soroureddin, Interior Ministry undersecretary, announced Monday over Tehran Radio that Khamenei claimed more than 16.8 million votes, burying his three token opponents.

Alfred Eisenstaedt will have slide show

Alfred Eisenstaedt, one of the most celebrated photojournalists of the 20th Century, will give a six-hour slide presentation of his works, including his latest prints from a series entitled "Eisenstaedt: Germany," on Oct. 22 from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. and from 1:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. in the Houston Room of the University Center.

Internationally recognized as a pioneer in candid photography technique, Eisenstaedt has covered outstanding persons and events throughout the world.

Eisenstaedt's visit is being co-sponsored by the UH Continuing Education Center and the Photo World School of Photography. The presentation is open to the general public. Tickets are $10 and are available at all three Photo World photography stores (10891 Katy Freeway, 7320 Southwest Freeway and 850 F.M. 1960) and at UH.

For more information, call any Photo World store or the Continuing Education Center at 749-7666.

In conjunction with his visit, the Clemens Gallery, 803 Marshall, will exhibit a collection of his works. This exhibit will open on Oct. 22 at 7 p.m. and continue for a four-week period.

It was a time when thin lines were drawn, North against South.
Brother against brother. It's from the tumultuous period that Poco draws their inspiration to form that rare melding of history and music on their new album, "Blue And Gray".

Featuring:
Widowmaker
and Streets of Paradise

Blue And Gray," music steeped in our history, with all of its emotion, conflict and conviction, this is Poco at their finest.

Poco's most ambitious effort to date, "Blue And Gray," on MCA RECORDS and Tapes.

Produced by Mike Flicker
Crosslight Management Ltd.
