Civic group advises "stay on the streets"

One Montrose civic group, the Westmoreland Civic Association, issued a flyer this past week advising readers, "Don't be frightened off the streets."

"Statistics show that a lack of pedestrian traffic aids the criminal," the group said.

However, the group also strongly suggested that pedestrians go in groups.

"If you walk or jog, don't go alone. Ask a neighbor or two to join you."

The Westmoreland area of Montrose was the site Thanksgiving eve of the murder of Michael Beavers, 30, and the robberies of two others. Police say they have two men in custody that they believe might be responsible for those crimes and up to eight other robberies in Montrose that evening.

Police are even less sure, however, if the two are connected to the death of Larry Wayne Wiggins, 20, whose body was found Thanksgiving day.

Police believe there may be several pairs of similar-looking armed robbers, all coincidentally described as black men in their 20s.

Other advice from the Westmoreland Civic Association included "Don't stop and get out of your car if you see two people sitting in a car in your vicinity. Call the police. We are getting heavy patrol at this time, and the police response is usually quick."

The Montrose Patrol can also be called.

"Don't carry much cash. If it becomes more profitable to rob you, as opposed to small stores, we will lose any control we have," the group said.

In response to the recent crimes, this group and possibly some other neighborhood organizations have "block captains" assigned nightly. "Don't refuse to identify yourself (to the block captain)" the group said.

"Your block captain, after identifying himself, may ask for your identity. This is his only way of knowing the people in his block."

Advice from the Westmoreland Civic Association, although covering only a small segment of Montrose, is varied for whole community.

"Don't let the smallest crime go unreported to the police. Also, ask for a case number, or occurrence number," the organization said, pointing out that one man is currently being held by police for being an accomplice in a bicycle theft.

"He would not be in custody if it were not for the actions of Westmoreland citizens," they said.

The group expressed alarm over a recent increase in "casings" in the neighborhood—situations where groups or individuals go through on foot, bikes or in cars, looking for loose bikes and easy burglaries. The group said their records show that burglaries usually follow reported casings by one to four days.

"If you spot a casing, let the person become aware obviously watching him as he looks in and out of garages, etc.," the group said. "Stay at a distance, and when you have been spotted, walk directly into your house and call the police (and your block captain or the Montrose Patrol)."

The police cannot respond to all calls at all times, but because of the current problems, you will likely get a patrol car, the group said.

Be prepared to give the police as much of a description of the individuals as you can. Car descriptions and license numbers are of course helpful too, but descriptions of the individuals are more important, the group said, along with your willingness to identify and prosecute.

"Do not confront these people. Always tell the and do so. You owe it to your neighbors, as well as to yourself," they said.

The civic group advised that a popular tactic used by robbers is to stop and ask for directions. The group said that should this happen to you—run, while noting anything unusual about the individuals that you could later use to identify them with.

Supreme Court directs local court to hear A&M case

WASHINGTON—Gay students from Texas A&M University will get another chance before federal district judge Ross Sterling in Houston to press for official recognition of their on-campus group, reported Associated Press.

The Supreme Court kept their suit alive Monday, Dec. 8, by refusing to hear the university's arguments that it has immunity from that type of civil rights suit.

The justices issued no comment on the decision.

Gay Student Services, a group of students at A&M's

College Station campus, sought recognition in 1976 as a student organization, which would allow them use of bulletin boards and school facilities.

J. Patrick Wiseman of Houston, attorney for the gay group, was reported by the Houston Chronicle's Washington bureau as saying that even though it was not a full Supreme Court hearing, the action was significant, providing what he believed to be the Fifth Circuit's first ruling clearly allowing suits against state universities under the Civil Rights Law.

John Koldus, vice president for student services, said that recognition would not be "consistent with the philosophy and goals that have been developed for the creation and existence of Texas A&M University."

Koldus claimed that the group was likely to promote sexual behavior between members of the same sex, which is in violation of Section 21.06 of the Texas Penal Code.

The homosexual students then sued the university in federal court, charging that their constitutional right to free association had been violated.

The suit was filed under an 1871 civil rights law commonly used when a violation of a constitutional or federal civil right is alleged, and the university protested that the suit should be dismissed.

The university contended that the state-run schools are immune from lawsuits filed under the 1871 law. The student group did not respond and, in November 1977, Sterling granted the request for dismissal.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, however, reversed the dismissal last February and sent the case back for trial. The appeals court rejected the university's contentions, including its claimed immunity.

The reversal relied heavily on a 1978 Supreme Court decision that stripped cities and counties of the absolute immunity they traditionally had enjoyed from lawsuits charging violations of federal civil rights.

Army settles in security clearance case

SAN FRANCISCO—In an out-of-court settlement that may prove to be a landmark case, the Army has agreed to reexamine its policies regarding gay civilian employees of defense contractors, reports Electronic Engineering Times.

Under the terms of the agreement, the Army can neither deny nor revoke an employee's security clearance solely on the basis of that person's homosexuality, it was reported.

In addition, the Army was said to have agreed to incorporate due process rights into its regulations regarding the revocation of civilian security clearances.

"In other words, before the Army can revoke the clearance of any civilian, it must give written notice to that person, who will have the right to confront the evidence against him. The Army must also provide a statement of reasons to that person, who will have the right to appeal the decision," reporter Cathy Figorito wrote.

The case out of which the settlement came was filed in March against the Department of Defense and the Army by Warren G. Preston, a graphics designer for GTE Sylvania's plant in Mountain View, Calif., the magazine said.

Preston had done contract work for the Army for over ten years but his Sensitive Compartmented Information access was revoked in March 1979 by the Army, solely on the grounds that he had engaged in homosexual activity, it was reported.

The publication said Preston was given no opportunity to confront the evidence or to appeal the decision.

On Preston's behalf, American Civil Liberties Union cooperating attorney Steve Mayer and ACLU staff counsel Amitai Schwartz sued the Army in U.S. District Court for discrimination and violation of due process, it was reported. The suit claimed that the revocation of Preston's clearance violated not only the constitutional guarantee of due process but also administrative regulations of the Department of Defense, the publication said.

According to the settlement, the Army will pay Preston monetary damages of $10,000 for "economic loss and psychological humiliation" plus an additional $10,000 to cover the cost of his attorney's services, the magazine reported.

"I'm really pleased with the terms of the agreement and glad to have the case ended so soon," Preston was quoted as saying. "We were prepared for a long battle in the courts but, happily, that wasn't necessary."

The magazine quoted Mayer as saying, "By agreement to pay money damages to the plaintiff, the Army is putting its money where its mouth is. The fact that money is involved makes this case serve as a beacon. Perhaps in the future the Army will not be so quick to abridge people's rights, knowing that payment will have to be made for the error."

He was quoted as adding, "The Army has agreed to change its practices both in regard to the treatment of homosexual employees and in regard to recognizing due process rights. The Army can no longer go after gay workers simply because they are gay."

MSA all-night party planned for Friday

The bowling division of the Montrose Sports Association will present an all-night "Christmas ODD-essey" Friday, Dec. 12, the group announced.

The event is scheduled for the Cockatoo at 3400 Travis and will include an open bar, music by Ken Bailey, an "activity" room for "active men," movies and the "hot men of Houston," the group said.

ODD-essey T-shirts will be on sale and the event will run from 10:00 p.m. Friday until dawn Saturday, the organization said. Advance tickets are on sale at selected gay clubs in the city and will also be sold at the door.

BY DAVID HOY

— In late January, 1981, there will be a new threat of war in the Mid-East, as Egypt's buildup of arms along the border with Libya causes concern.

— My ESP says that the budget of the United States will not be balanced in the next four years.

— I feel that the Cape Hatteras Lighthouse, now in imminent danger of collapse, will be saved. Both private and federal funds will enable the United States' tallest lighthouse to be salvaged.

— I predict that interest rates are going to continue to be steep, by past standards, but some relief will be realized by early spring of 1981, causing a rebound in the building trades.

— During the spring of 1981, I sense that grain sales to Russia will be renegotiated. The U.S. farmer will benefit from huge grain sales abroad. China and South America will also make large purchases of U.S. grain.

ESP can help each of us live life to the fullest! We become self-sufficient individuals when we are able to look within and realize that the mind and emotions that we possess can give us the answer to coping with living. And when we realize that within us lies the mystery of the universe, and when we understand that we can extend ourselves through our ESP abilities, we have the added edge that brings us a gentle touch to life. And when others begin to see that we have achieved peace, joy, and happiness, they will come to us for our help, and when we can begin to help others achieve the answer to living, we will find that our joy is doubled, as we achieve quantum heaps of happiness.

Having arrived at a peaceful life within ourselves, we can share that immense understanding with those who still grope with the problems of existence. When we have self-sufficiency, we then can appreciate what others do for us. But we will always be conscious of the fact that living a life of happiness is still fundamentally what comes from within, not from without.

Yes, ESP comes from within!

ing it down. Do not lap the immediately after putting it down. You can use anything from a rolling pin to a floor roller. Concrete floors should be checked for cracks. Clean these out and fill with concrete mix. Trowel smooth and sand any rough spots when dry and hard.

With the floor in good condition you will be ready to lay the tile. The best way to do this is one-fourth of the floor at a time.

Do this by snapping two chalk lines across the room at right angles to each other. Measure from the middle of each wall.

Without spreading any adhesive, lay out two rows of tile from the crossed lines to the walls. If the space between the last tile and the wall is less than the width of half a tile, move the center line over so that your last row of tiles — the one you will have to cut — will be slightly more than half of a tile. Then snap a new chalk line.

Move the line running in the other direction as well, if needed.

Next, spread the cement, starting from the walls and working to the lines in this quarter area, but not covering the lines.

Wait about 15 minutes. The adhesive should be tacky by then. Lay tiles flush with the chalk lines and work toward the walls. Set the tiles in place and butt them together. Do not slide them.

Tailor the last row to fit, tile by tile. Place a loose tile on top of the last row of installed tile. Place another tile over this, but flush against the wall. Using the top tile as a guide, score the loose tile underneath.

Floor tile has been a boon to the homeowner who wants to have new floor covering and wants to do it himself, saving the cost of installation. But because it is so easy to install, too many rush ahead with the job without proper preparation and the result is an unsatisfactory floor.

The main cause for a botched-up job is floor irregularities. Since floor tile is resilient in varying degrees it molds itself to whatever unevenness is beneath.

Wood floors in good condition need little work. Sand any obvious rough spots. Countersink nail heads if any show. Sand or plane splintered boards. Sweep. Floors should be free of dirt, grease, wax.

If the floors are badly scored or damaged or the boards are over three inches wide, use quarter-inch plywood or a hardboard as an underlay. Place the underlay so that joints are staggered. Do not butt them tightly. Leave about 1/32 of an inch for possible expansion. Nail down. Space the nails widely and countersink the heads.

New wood floors tend to shrink. If you are installing tile over a floor that is not well-seasoned, cover with asphalt felt paper, cement-

BOB IS APTLY NAMED — Bob Barker, who is the host of the long-running "The Price Is Right" and of "That's My Line," (the latter has done three programs for CBS-TV and has an order for 10 more,) was sitting in his dressing room saying that he and his wife and his two fully grown dogs had recently welcomed a puppy into the family.

"I had forgotten how amusing they are. I can just sit and watch her play. We haven't had a puppy in a long time. She's more fun than TV," he says.

Barker is aptly named for a dog-lover. He is more than just a dog-lover. He is a dog-aider. As a member of the Morris Animal Foundation, he is chairman of their annual dog-a-thon, which raises money for research. Recently he posed with Benjie for publicity dog-a-thon pictures in the forecourt of the Burbank Animal Shelter which has pawprints of famous dogs in cement, just like the forecourt of the Chinese

Theatre. "What was interesting is that the Burbank pound is the place where Frank Inn found the original Benjie, who was the father of the present dog."

MOORE FUN — Bob has a great sense of humor. When I mentioned that his understated brown and rust dressing room suite had once been Mary Tyler Moore's he said, "I'll say it was. It was so flowery and feminine when I was first assigned the room, I found myself mincing out on stage."

LESS FUN — Right now Bob has a personal crusade. It is to keep a pen in his dressing room.

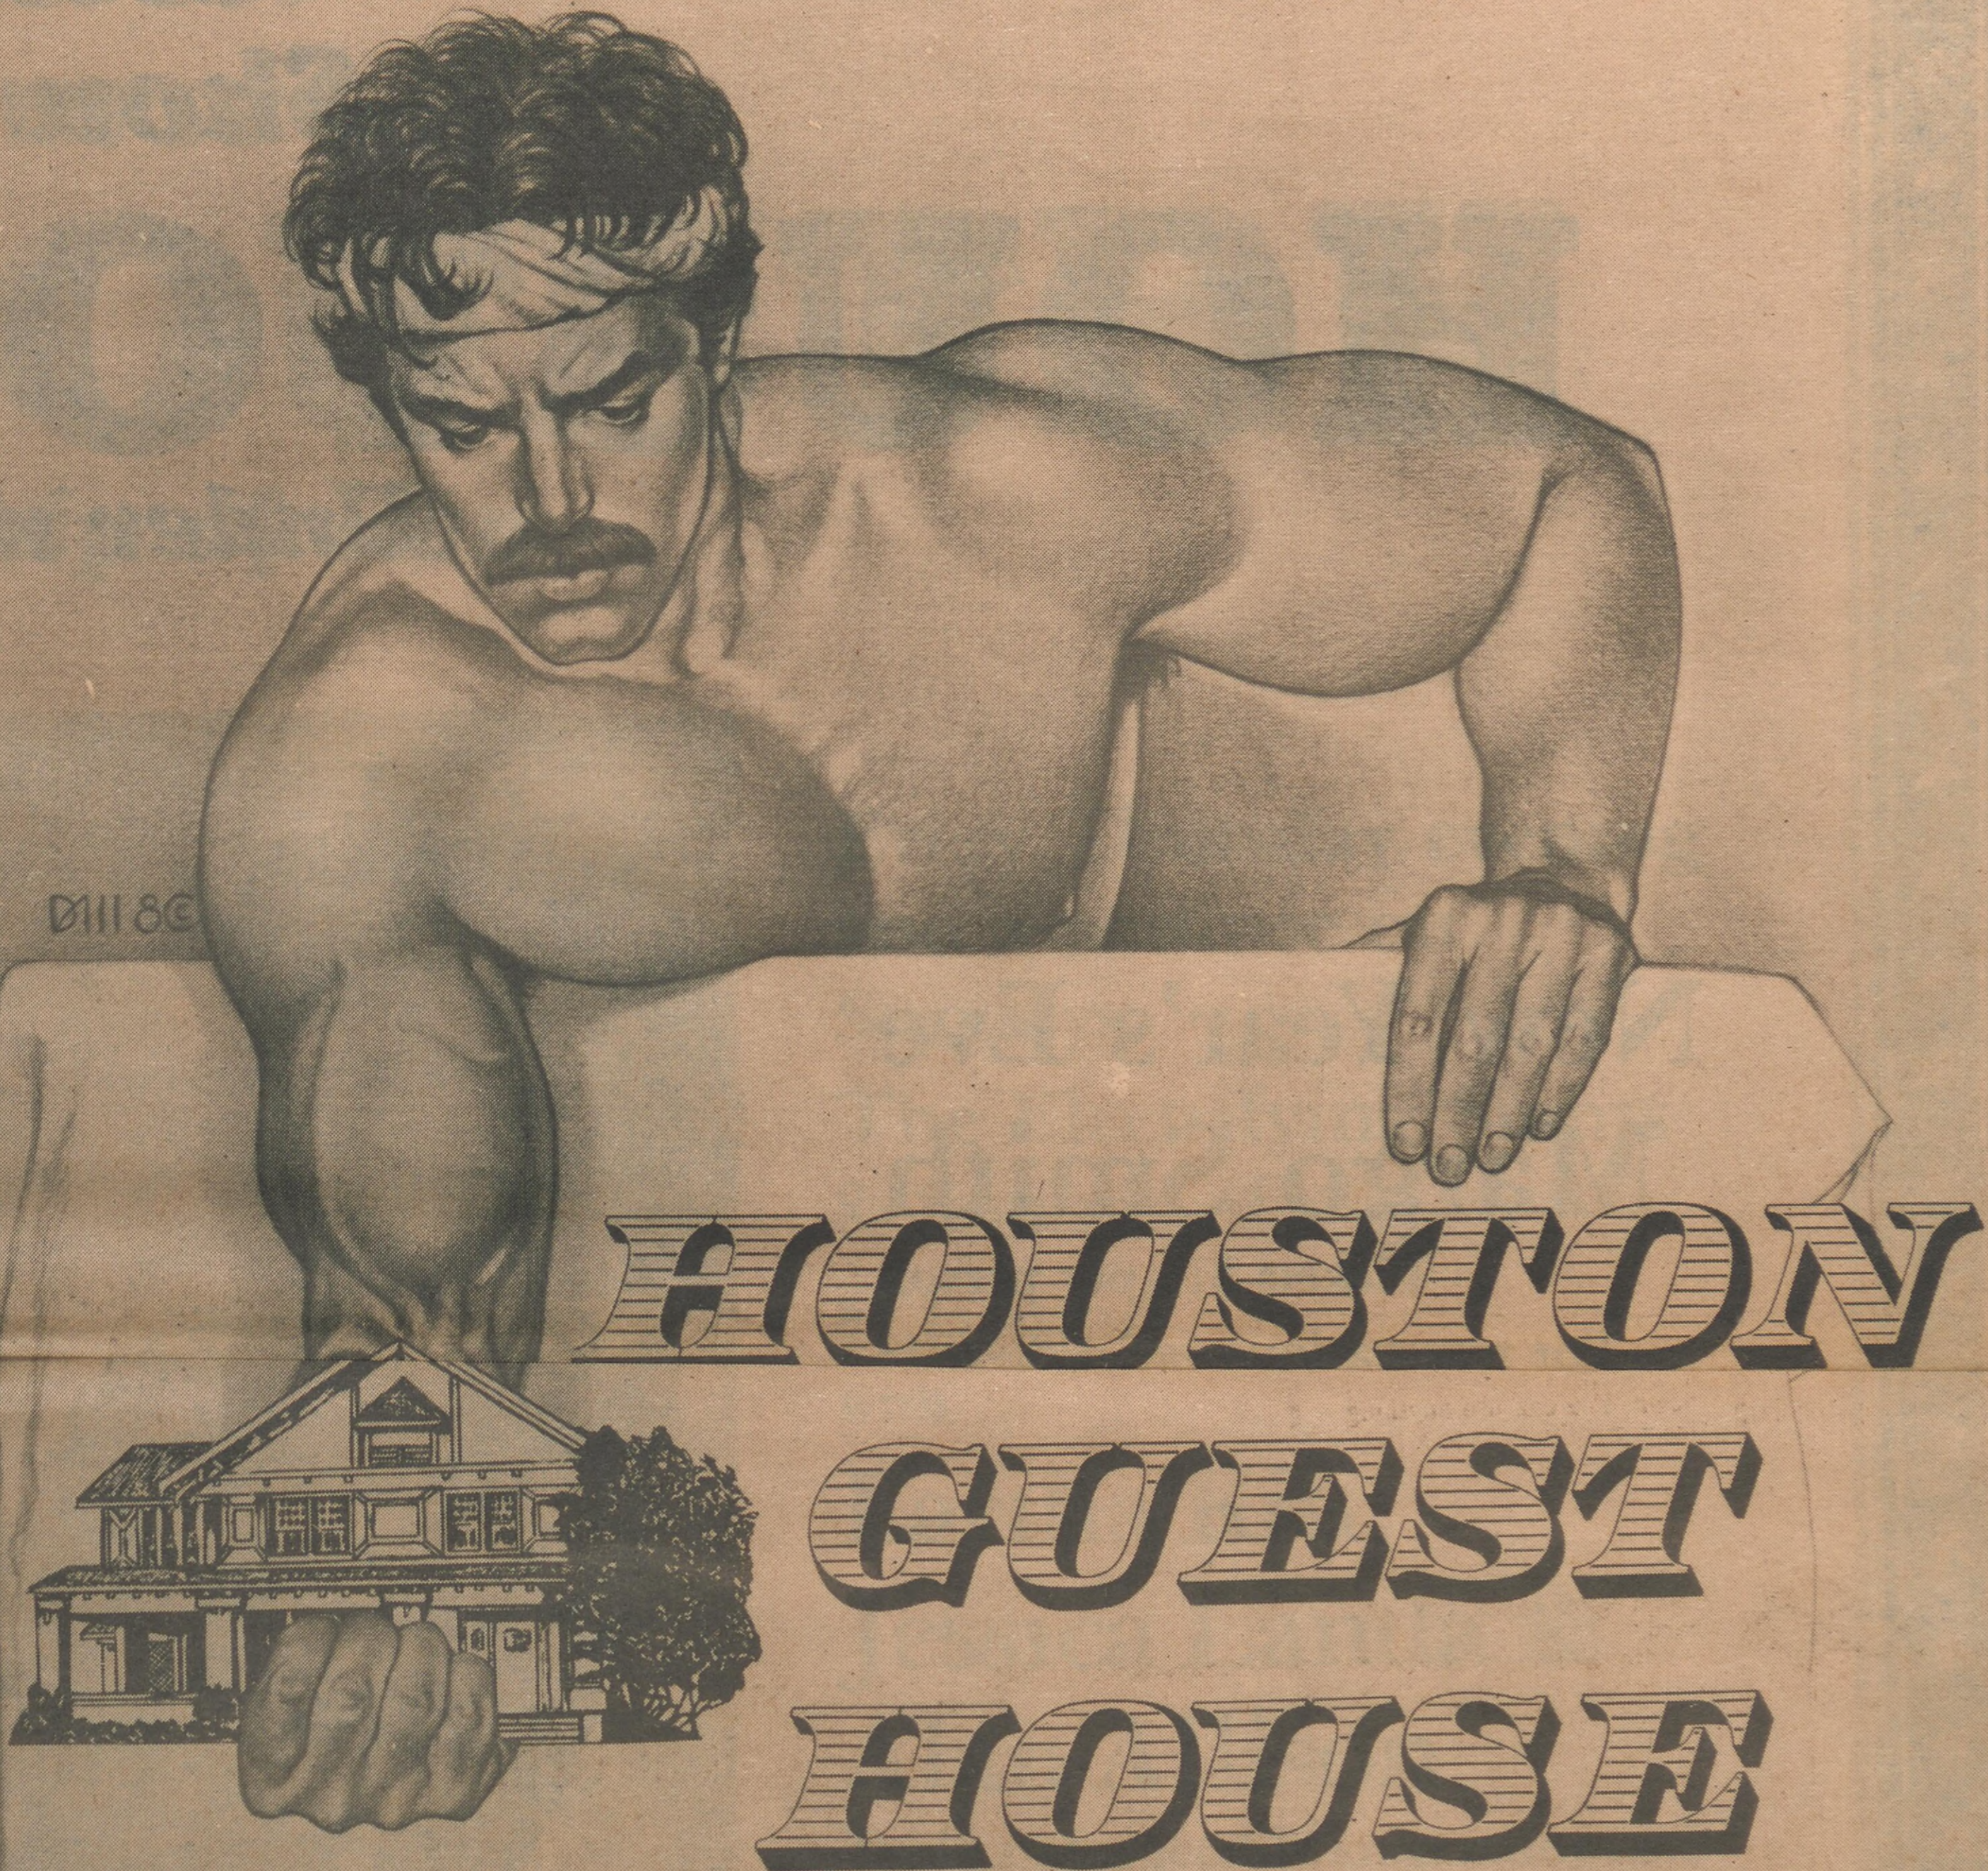

"When they fixed the place up for me, they suggested I lock my things like ashtrays up in a closet because other people used the room. I said that was unnecessary. Well, so far they have ripped off everything including half a scale on a Scales of Justice kind of decoration. "And I can't keep a pen in the room. I can't keep hiding pens in here. I have put them on the top of the door frame. I have put them in the dirt of my philodendron plant. I have put them between the cushions of the couch. And someone always finds them. Presumably, some top producer is trying to drive me nuts."

BEGINNINGS — Bob began his radio career in college and he found that he had an affinity for being a host. It's not a profession for which one trains and other hosts, he says, began their careers studying acting. But he loves his work, says he is never bored and that while there is a script for "The Price Is Right" for camera personnel to use, he has never seen one.

"That's one of my claims to fame. I have never seen a "Price Is Right" script. The other is that I have never been to Catalina." A funny man who loves dogs. Which makes him a good guy in a lot of people's books.

Samantha READS YOUR STARS

If you were born this week: You are generous and loving and tend to be a soft touch for those in need. You are sentimental and may hang onto keepsakes and other nostalgic odds and ends. You are a leader, a good manager and executive. (As long as you don't have to bother with those miserable details!)

ARIES (3-21/4-19): Personal affairs are accented, Aries. Stoke your own fires before you trot off to gather wood for someone else. Mind your money; try not to be too terribly extravagant, sweetie. Days bustle to rollercoaster finale. TAURUS (4-20/5-20): Better make a list and check it twice, Taurus. You've lots of people to see and places to go, including some very hush-hush activities. Latter days suit you to a T, for temptation, tipsy, and tinsel. Terrific!

GEMINI (5-21/6-20): It's party time, Gem, and you're in fine fettle! Don your best and join the frolic, 'cause Cupid's there, too. Don't forget to complete the projects you've started — those finishing touches are so important. Days zip by.

MOONCHILD (6-21/7-22): You are both sensitive and emotional, Moonbaby; you know that. Because of the pace of life just now, you're apt to feel as if you're on an emotional see-saw. So please make time for rest and relaxation during the week. Take the phone off the hook and cuddle with loved one, angel.

LEO (7-23/8-22): You really could use a social secretary this week, Leo, but I'm sure you'll manage on your own. You are being watched by speculative eyes, so do complete several tasks at hand. Days jingle to joyful conclusion.

VIRGO (8-23/9-22): I think it was Teddy Roosevelt who said something to the effect of "walk quietly, but carry a big stick." He could have been speaking of a Virgo. If enough becomes enough, you're liable to clobber a certain turkey.

LIBRA (9-23/10-23): Look for a hidden financial catch to a certain proposition, Libby. Besides, you don't want to think about business deals right now, do you?! Later, grab a likely prospect and go caroling. What a lovely duet!

SCORPIO (10-24/11-22): It may not look like it, Scorp, but you are in charge. So grab your baton and direct. Your intuition is especially high; listen to it. Latter days bring snowflakes; whisk 'em away and you'll find sugarplums.

SAGITTARIUS (11-23/12-21) Cupid gifts you with all sorts of delightful surprises. Your charm and appeal shine as bright as any star, Saj babe. Midweek sees you trying to stir too many pots and days caper off to gleeful and gilded finish.

CAPRICORN (12-22/1-19) You're as busy as one of Santa's elves this week, Cappy. Watch for friends with great ideas and somebody with a few tricks up his sleeve. Later, Venus plays your tune and the harmony is super. Days whirl by.

AQUARIUS (1-20/2-19): News, messages, and errands are highlighted during first days, Aquari. Be prepared to go with the flow, so that a few minor upsets won't rattle you. Week's end is a merry one, with hugs and kisses all 'round. Cheers!

PISCES (2-20/3-20): I don't like to bring mundane matters into the holiday spirit, Pisces, but, in all the flurry, don't forget to pay some bills. Words from a distance add smiles and latter days see visitors galore. Deck the halls!

Jolly Green Thumb BY MARY FUREY CRYMES

Blessed is he — usually she — who has a supply of dried herbs and a need for last-minute Christmas gifts. It's a case of the supply filling the demand.

If you have craftily, and thriftily, saved the some results of your summer-fall herb garden, you're in clover. There are eons of lovely, savory things you can do and make.

Start with a welcome food gift, for example, herb jelly, a gourmet food lover's delight. To make a five-pint batch, start with four tablespoons of dried mint, or sage, tarragon, thyme or a mixture thereof. Pour 2 1/2 cups of boiling water over these, let stand a bit and strain. Put into a large pan with a half cup of vinegar and 2 1/2 cups of honey. Stir to a boil, then dump in a half bottle of fruit pectin. Boil hard as per instructions, cool, skim and bottle.

Herb vinegars, packaged in slim jars and bottles to which you've added a sprig of the herb are another gourmet meal touch. For tarragon, an all-time favorite, you need 2 cups of dried leaves to 2 pints of white vinegar. Mix and stir occasionally for a week, then package and label. Sage, borage, savory or any tangy herb can be substituted.

For something truly different and exotic, you need to branch out from the home-grown variety and look for some frankincense. At holiday time, it's available in natural food stores and some pharmacies. If you can get it, it makes heavenly room incense. Mix 2 tablespoons with 1 of powdered orris root and a teaspoon of ground cloves. Add a tablespoon of lemon oil and store it in a tin box. Just a sprinkle on glowing fireplace coals, or a dab on a cotton ball tucked out of sight will fill the house with the scent of the holidays year around.
