Incidents increase

New UH land is crime-filled

By L.E. CALLAGHAN
Special to The Daily Cougar

Crime on the University of Houston campus has increased 13 percent during the first six months of 1982, in comparison to the crime rate of the first half of 1981.

Assistant Chief John Miller of the UH Police Department said the increase is due to the acquisition of the area known as the Cullen North Corridor. The new area has generated 53 percent of the robberies, 20 percent of the burglaries and 11 percent of the aggravated assaults at UH since January, 1982.

North Cullen Corridor is the area on both sides of Cullen Boulevard bounded by Elgin on the south and Interstate 45 on the north; and by Leek Street, which runs parallel to Cullen north of Elgin, east to the general services building. The major problem area is comprised of the fast-food establishments on Cullen and the Elgin Square Apartments, Miller said.

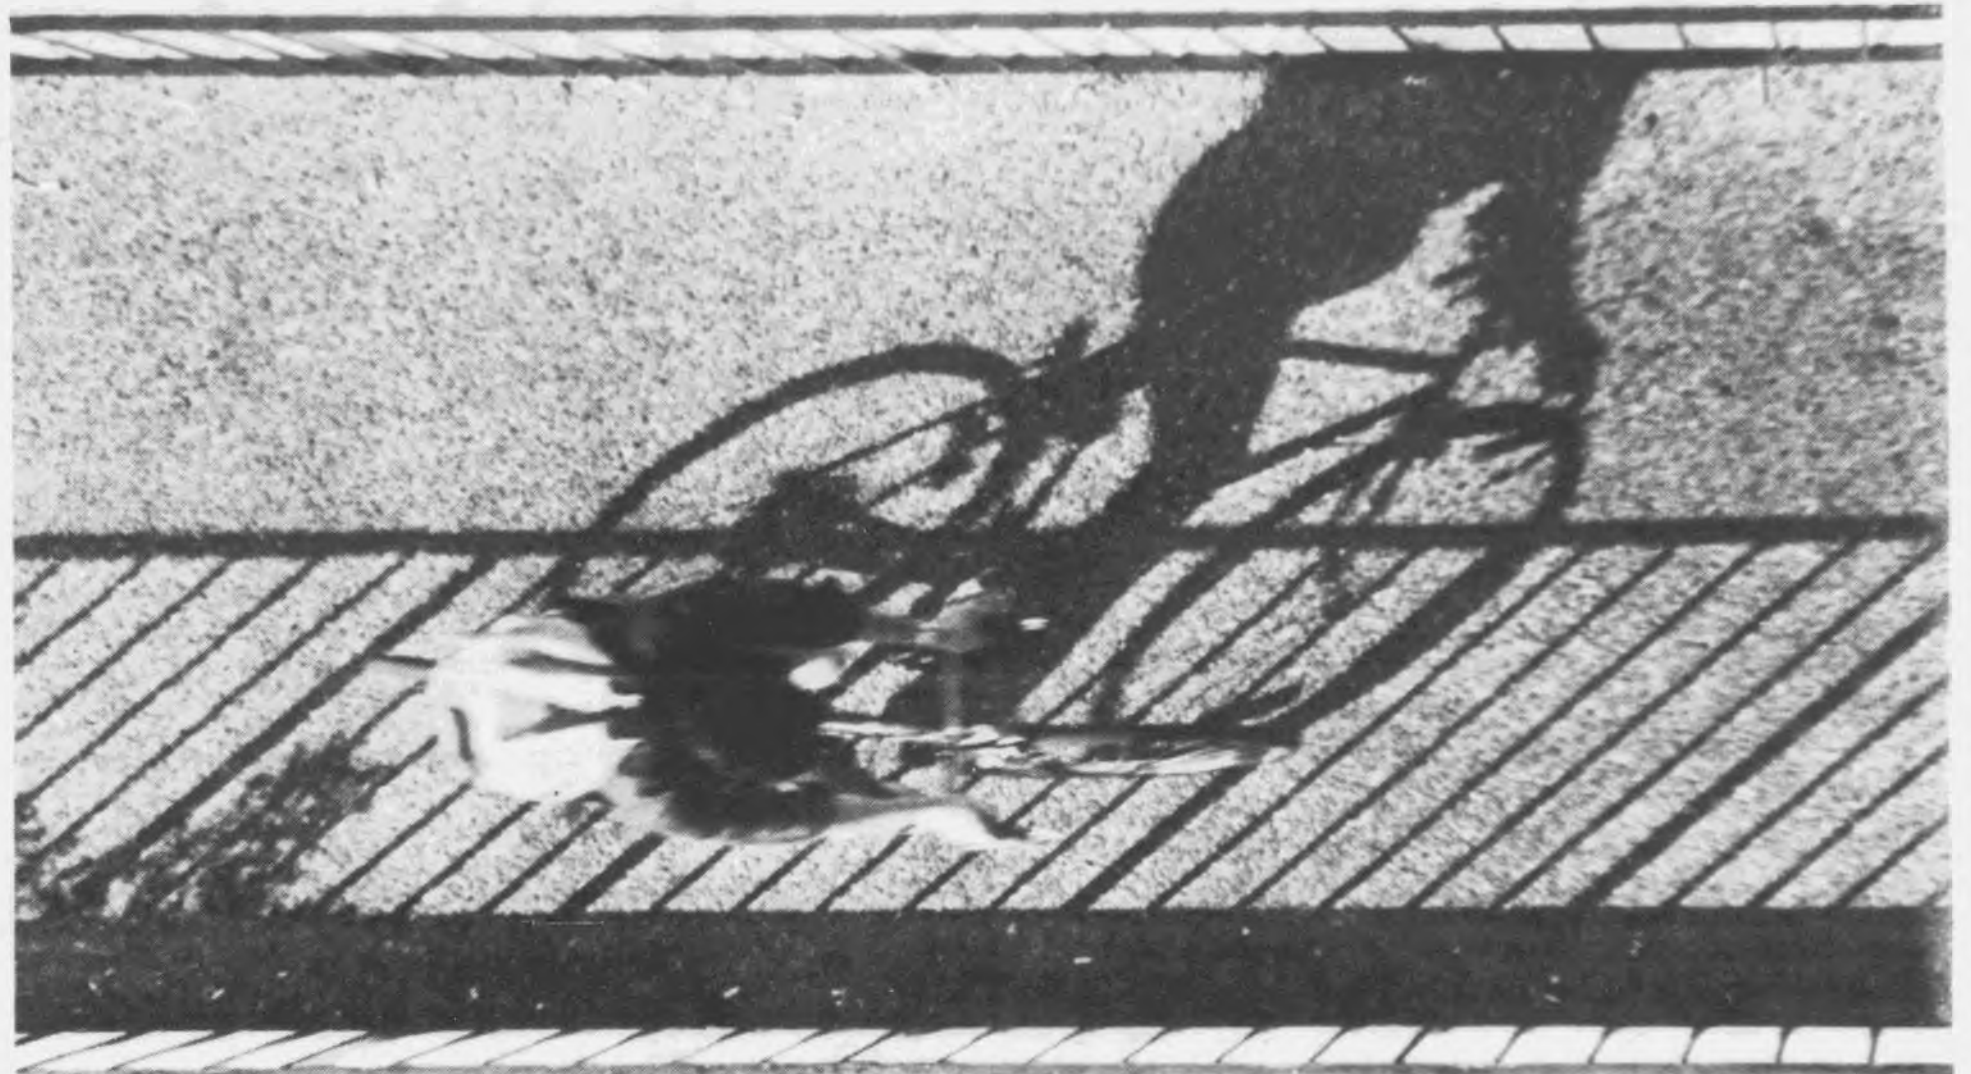

The city of Houston police department had jurisdiction over the area prior to January.

The crime rate for 1981 was down 17 percent from the previous year. Miller said this year's statistics, to date, would have been the same as last year's, were it not for the acquisition of the new area.

Crime prevention education is the most effective service the department can provide, Miller said. Students, staff, administrators and residents are encouraged to adopt sound crime prevention measures.

Some of Miller's suggestions are: always remain in a group; walk only in lighted areas; call for a police escort if you plan to walk on campus at night; always lock your dorm room, even if you are just leaving to use the restroom; and be alert, your body

180 apply for UH chancellor position

By SUSAN HUMPHREY
of The Daily Cougar staff

About 180 persons have applied for chancellor, a university official reported to the Students' Association senate at its Monday night meeting.

Some applicants—a dozen or fewer—will be invited to the campus in December for interviews, said Connie Wallace, assistant vice chancellor, dean of students. UH System President Charles E. Bishop will then recommend three or four candidates to the board of regents, who will be charged with making the final decision.

Wallace, reporting on the recommendations of the chancellor screening committee, presented senators with a draft of issues and qualifications to be considered by the committee in selecting a replacement for Barry Munitz, who resigned in August.

The deadline for chancellor candidates to submit applications is Oct. 22.

The senate continued filling campus-wide committee vacancies Monday night with 10 more appointments.

The senate, which has been working to fill committee openings since last spring, made 15 appointments at last week's senate meeting. Approximately 10 committee positions remain vacant.

This week's committee appointments are Charlotte Duggan and Kevin Lacobie, police parking and advisory board; Shelley Bush, Cheryl Broussard and Michael Welch, scholarship and financial aid committee; and Freddie Garriett, calendar board.

The senators also approved the following appointments: Phil Baker, organization funding board; Suzanne Stroud, teaching excellence and awards committee; Imran Khan, advisory committee for international affairs; and Pearl Carrillo, A.D. Bruce Religion Center policy board.

Doctoral student is a native of 'both Beiruts'

The description of Beirut in the New Standard Encyclopedia describes the Lebanese city's location on the Mediterranean Sea, its climate, its cultural points of interest, and its origin.

The description of Beirut in the daily news speaks of death and the open wounds of war.

Abboud Ghalayini has lived in both Beiruts. Ghalayini, a University of Houston student, grew up in the peaceful, encyclopedia city. Before he left Lebanon in 1977 to do graduate work here, he also had experienced life in a war zone.

Some of the only pictures Ghalayini has of his homeland are on postcards. "I have some old postcards, very old . . . when everything was still pretty."

Until fighting broke out in Beirut in the 1975 civil war, Ghalayini spent time on the beaches, on the soccer field or on Hamra Street, an area of cafes, shops and theatres he compares to the French Quarter in New Orleans. In the winter months, December through March, there was skiing about an hour's drive from the city.

Three-hundred-year-old buildings graced the business district. Ghalayini said a unique characteristic of Beirut is that modern culture from the West combines with the centuries-old heritage of the Middle East.

Although there was always some political unrest in Beirut, he said "a healthy feeling of democracy" existed when he lived there.

When the bombings and gun battles first began in 1975, residents found it difficult to adapt, he said. "At first, people were scared and wouldn't do anything."

Abboud Ghalayini

But fighting continued, and people adjusted their lifestyles: "They had to learn to live with the new situation. It got to the point that if fighting was only across town, people still felt they could go out to get groceries," he said.

Ghalayini attended the American University of Beirut, where he lived on campus. Although the campus was usually immune from bombing since it was American, many times Ghalayini heard missiles whistling nearby.

"Sometimes I would be studying for a test and there would be all kinds of noise from the bombing."

His sister, her husband and three children still are in Beirut. He was able to reach them by phone about three weeks ago—only through luck.

"It is almost impossible to get through. When you do, they tell you how devastated the city is, and that there's hardly anything that hasn't been damaged," he said.

His sister's family fled to the mountains outside Beirut after the recent violence began, but decided to return to their mortar-damaged home.

"What they have gone through is a mild version of everyone's story . . . it doesn't include the ones who have lost family members," he said.

Joseph Stalin once said one death is a tragedy; one million deaths are a statistic. Ghalayini disagrees.

"The people being killed are someone's neighbors or relatives," he said. "If one thousand people are killed in Beirut, you either personally know someone or know of one of them."

Ghalayini left Beirut to study at UH when he graduated in 1977. He received a master's degree in biophysical sciences here in 1979. He expects to have a doctoral degree in that field in December. He doesn't expect to return soon to Beirut.

"I do want to go back as soon as possible," he said. He feels strongly about the need to defend his homeland,

Bowling team places second

Two University of Houston students were in the winners' circle at the Texas Intercollegiate Bowling Conference Fall Classic last weekend, where the University of Houston bowling team placed second out of a 17-team field.

The UH team was second in overall team competition, after West Texas State University. Eighty-six men and 67 women from 17 Texas institutions were entered in the competition.

The tournament was held Sept. 18 at the University of Texas at Austin.

Belinda Benavides placed first in the women's competition, making her the first woman from UH to win the classic. Mike Scott took third-place honors, after being defeated by one pin.

Benavides was the top female qualifier in the competition, with a 607 score after a three-game series. Scott was the top male qualifier, with a 717 score for the series — the highest score ever made at the competition.

Bruce Austin of the University Center games area, where the UH team practices, said Benavides beat three bowlers from West Texas State, which he said recruits and provides financial aid to members of its bowling team. Two of those three women were members of last year's national championship team from Erie Community College in Erie, Pa.

Letters

Pays his way

This letter is in response to the article in the Cougar by Earl J. McGrath (Sept. 16) demanding that there be no reductions in financial aid by the government.

I have full-time student hours, and I also hold down a part-time job. I take pride in paying my own way. I don't want financial aid. I don't want anyone to be forced to pay for my education, and I don't want to pay for anyone else's through taxation.

Think of it, students — with the financial aid program, when you graduate and start to work, you will still be paying taxes for schools until you retire. That is over 40 years of paying taxes for a school that you only went to for four years. I don't want to spend the rest of my life paying out aid to the rest of the country's students. I would much rather work a little harder now for four or six years and then save all that money that I would have spent for the next 40 years on taxes.

For those "Marie Antoinette" students who wish to go on accepting financial aid — fine. Go ahead and graduate thinking that the world owes you a living. But this country was made and is going to be made by people who take responsibility for their own lives and do things on their own, not by people who demand charity. If I ever received a financial aid check, I would probably burn it.

Grace period

In the interest of cutting unnecessary costs and avoiding needless hassles, I would like to make a recommendation to the UHPD Parking Division. Currently, the Parking Division is requiring all improperly placed parking decals to be scraped off and exchanged for new stickers. This would seem to me a very tedious, costly and time-consuming process for not only the Parking Division but also the students.

I have learned from past semesters that it is prudent to affix the decal within 24 hours of its receipt. This is what I did. Traditionally, the decal has gone on the rear windshield, at least for the past two years. Unfortunately, I neglected to read the rules and regulations first which contain the proper instructions for attaching the sticker. Needless to say, I attached my sticker in the traditional place which is now the improper place — as did hundreds of other students.

Instead of writing all those citations and exchanging all those mutilated stickers for new ones, I would like to propose an alternative. The Parking Division could announce a blanket statement to the entire campus about the matter. This semester could be considered a transition or grace period and next semester the decals must all be on the front.

Opinion

Choose-a-chief

At the Monday night Students' Association senate meeting, Connie Wallace informed senators that anyone may submit nominations for the position of chancellor.

Wallace, assistant chancellor, dean of students, said any persons with administrative abilities — friends, relatives or acquaintances — would be considered for the job.

Her solicitation for respondents leads us to believe that the chancellor screening committee has not found a suitable candidate among the 180 applicants. With this in mind, we urge all members of the University of Houston community to aid in the quest for a leader.

Due to the imminent need for a permanent chancellor, The Daily Cougar is announcing its Choose-a-Chief Sweepstakes.

Here is your chance to put that special someone in a position of real power. Now you, too, can have friends in high places.

Choose-a-Chief candidates, however, must meet a rigorous set of qualifications. All nominees must be either male or female, and they should be at least 18 years of age. Graduation from an accredited high school would be helpful, but is not necessary.

All candidates' names must be submitted with the headline from this editorial or with the words "Choose-a-Chief" printed in block letters on a 3-by-5 index card.

Submit all entries to the chancellor screening committee by midnight Oct. 22. The final drawing will be held on Halloween in the telephone booth located in the Heyne Building basement.

Financial aid flash:

Reductions and changes in student aid

By E.M. Elmendorf

Newspaper, radio, and television reports of substantial cuts in federal financial aid to college students have triggered a barrage of phone calls to the U.S. Department of Education in Washington, D.C.

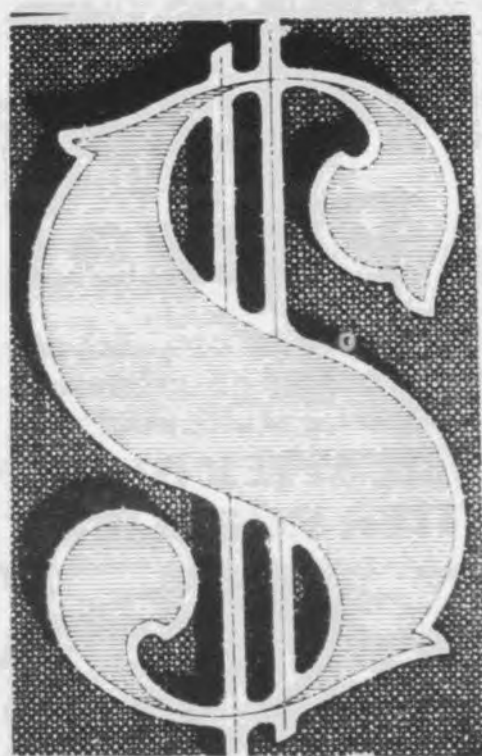

Callers, both students and parents, are often confused by misleading or incomplete information. Many have expressed fear that the government has let them down, that college is no longer affordable.

It is true that student financial assistance programs have undergone considerable change in the past two years. There have been some reductions. Most of the changes, however, reflect an effort to return the aid programs to their original purpose, which was to help students cover the cost of a college education — not to carry the whole burden.

Federal financial assistance is divided into three categories. "Grants" are awards of money that do not have to be paid back. "Loans" are borrowed money which a student must repay with interest. "Work-study" provides the chance to work and earn money to off-set college costs while attending classes.

The Pell Grant Program is one of the best known of the federal student aid programs. Formerly called the Basic Educational Opportunity Grant, Pell is often the first source of aid in a package which may be composed of other federal and non-federal sources. In the 1982-83 school year, 2.55 million students will share more than $2.2 billion in Pell Grants.

The U.S. Department of Education uses a standard formula to determine who qualifies for Pell Grants. Students should contact the college financial aid administrator to apply on the free "Application for Federal Student Aid." This is the form used for all federal student aid programs. The department guarantees that each participating school will receive the money it needs to pay Pell Grants to eligible students.

The Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grant provides another mechanism for making awards to students. SEOG is different from the Pell Grant in that it is managed by the financial aid administrator of each participating college. Each school receives a set amount of money from the department, and when that money is gone, there are no more SEOG funds for the year.

In 1982-83 the DOE will provide 440,000 students with $278,400,000 in Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grants. Students will get up to $2,000 a year under this program.

Grant programs are designed to help the most needy students get a college education. The Pell Grant, in particular, is targeted to help those students whose families earn less than $12,000 per year. Grant aid is not meant to cover all college costs, but is expected to be combined with a reasonable contribution from the student's family and individual self-help, generally in the form of loans, private scholarships and work.

Another type of student financial assistance is the College Work-Study Program. Designed to provide on- or off-campus jobs for undergraduate and graduate students who need financial assistance, work-study is usually managed by the college financial aid administrator. Some 950,000 students will receive $528 million under this program in 1982-83.

A great deal of publicity has been generated lately on federal student loans, particularly the National Direct Student Loan Program. Although not all colleges participate in the NDSL program, 3,340 of them do. This program takes available low-interest (5 percent) loans that students must begin repaying six months after completing school (either by graduating, leaving, or dropping below half-time status). Up to 10 years is allowed to repay the loan. Application is made to a school's financial aid administrator who manages the loan fund. The fund is a revolving account, designed to allow a school to continually make new loans as existing loans are repaid. About 800,000 students will receive NDSLs in 1982-83; 10,000 more than in 1981-82.

Recently, Secretary of Education T. H. Bell signed a regulation which provides incentives for an institution to reduce the default rate of its NDSL program fund. A college which has a default rate over 25 percent is asked to turn responsibility for collecting the debt over to the federal government.

The Guaranteed Student Loan Program, much in the news lately, makes available low interest loans to students, with the federal government paying the interest while a student is in school. These loans are made by a lender (such as a bank, credit union, or savings and loan association) and insured by either the federal government or a state guarantee agency. This, the largest student aid program, will make available over $9.5 billion in loans during the 1982-83 school year.

Undergraduate students can borrow up to $2,500 a year and graduate students can borrow up to $5,000 under GSL. The total debt an undergraduate can carry is $12,500. For graduate or professional study this figure is $25,000. A student borrower whose family income is less than $30,000 automatically qualifies for an interest-subsidized loan. Students whose family income exceeds $30,000 may still be eligible for GSL interest benefits if the college's financial aid administrator determines that the student has financial need.

A new loan program started in 1981, called the Auxiliary Loan (or PLUS) Program, allows parents, independent students and graduate students to borrow up to $3,000 a year. There is no income cutoff for eligibility. The interest on PLUS loans will be lowered from 14 to 12 percent sometime in October as a result of lower average U.S. Treasury bill interest rates.

Edward M. Elmendorf is deputy assistant secretary for student financial assistance of the U.S. Department of Education.

On strike

I bellow with the Buffalo herd. I soar with the Seahawks. I ride with the Cowboys. I run with the Packers. I drill with the Oilers. I sail with the Buccaneers . . . I'm on strike with the strikers.

I'm not just striking because it's vogue. I have demands that must be met before this columnist continues the season.

First, I want more money. If I told you what I was paid — never mind.

Second, I want my own space in the newsroom. An office, a desk, a chair, how 'bout pencil and pad for Pete's sake!

Third, I want more money.

Fourth, I want the editors to print some of the thousands of letters we receive every day praising my efforts in the literary field.

Fifth, I want more money.

Sixth, I want my column to appear as written. No more hatchet jobs by the editors, please. I'm sick and tired of having the editor call me into his office, and with a big grin, rip to shreds a piece that took hours to write. "Too sexist. Do it again, ha ha ha." The scum.

My seventh, eighth and ninth demands are similar to my first, third and fifth demands.

Entertainers

I'm serious. This is America, the land of the strikingly beautiful! I'm an entertainer. Football players are entertainers. All entertainers get a piece of the gate — or rather a percentage of the gate — excuse my sexist ways.

During the summer, tons of people read and enjoyed my vacation column. I've paid my dues.

They think they can take advantage of me around here. They think I'm just some dumb columnist — no feelings, no self respect. Just go out there every week and beat your brains out for the Gipper. Who the hell is the Gipper anyway!?

Well I've had enough. But I must stay calm. I must strike.

Today, outside my apartment, I saw a man about 70 years old carrying a sign over his shoulder. I ran downstairs excited at the prospect of meeting one of my comrades.

"What team do you play for?" I asked, grabbing his hand to shake.

"What?" he said. "Leave me alone. What are you, some dumb columnist or something, get away from me." Then, with a mighty swing, he stuck the sign into the ground. "For rent," it read.

Space for rent

I was crushed, but it gave me an idea. This space is now for rent. Twenty dollars per column inch. Don't send the money to the editor, send it straight to me. Send what you write to the editor, but I can't promise you'll recognize it by the time it goes to print.

In conclusion, I would like to apologize to all my faithful fans. But this neglect for my total worth is worthless. The players' strike gave me the courage to do what should have been done long ago. I am not just some stupid columnist they can treat like some dumb jock. Wait a minute, that didn't come out right. What I mean to say is that I'm not stupid and I want more money. I'm serious. This column will not appear today if my demands are not met. Wait a minute...

Hostomsky and Sutherland lead cross country to victory

By DOUG DODSON
of The Daily Cougar staff

Men's cross country coach Howie Ryan faced a challenge at the beginning of the 1982-83 season. He lost three of his top runners from last year and was left with a team supported by eight freshman.

Few coaches could be pleased with those odds.

A funny thing has happened, though. The cross country team is doing something it isn't supposed to do — win.

Led by senior Steve Hostomsky and freshman Jim Sutherland, the men's team exploded out of the starting blocks to record a win last week at the Texas A&M Invitational. The previous week Sutherland took first place in a meet with Lamar University, and Hostomsky took fifth place.

"Jim is a good distance runner," he said. "He is in very good shape. At Lamar, he didn't kill himself in the beginning of the race, and he ran well because of it.

"Right now I'd have to say Jim is our top freshman runner. (Rich) Byrne and (Steve) San Antonio, though, are right behind him. If they can run as good as Jimmy did, then I'll be satisfied."

Even though Ryan's team has met with initial success, he still believes this season will be a year for his young runners to gain experience.

"We lost some key people from last year's team like Andy Halpin and Earl Zilles," he said. "Zilles was the only one from last year's team to go to the nationals, and he figured to be our best runner this year, but he decided he didn't want to run. This is just going to be a rebuilding year for us as a team."

Sutherland has been a pleasant surprise so far for Ryan, but the Coog head coach is putting most of his faith in the running ability of sophomore Kyle Wright and co-captain Hostomsky.

"If Kyle and Hostomsky do the job they are capable of, we could hopefully finish as high as third or fourth in the conference," he said. "If we can do that, we may be able to get a berth into the nationals."

Ryan believes in the importance of bringing along his freshman runners at a slow pace, because of the adjustment needed when going from the high school to the collegiate level.

"We try not to put too much pressure on a freshman — it's a slow learning process," he said. "There is more training and quality work, longer distance running and adjusting to school.

"Four years ago we had the same situation. A lot of freshmen with no experience were on the team. The next year we went to the nationals."

Ryan says there is no substitute for working out with the team and running in the meets.

"Freshman look up to other runners like Hostomsky," he said. "Those upper classman can relate to them to not worry about workouts, but to put the emphasis of their efforts into the meets.

"The mental part plays an important role too, but the bottom line is he has to be in good physical condition.

Players, coaches needed for newly-formed rugby squad

In 1881 a young man named William Webb Ellis at the Rugby School of England created the sport of rugby, which until Ellis' time was merely a form of soccer. Since rugby's humble beginnings, the sport has flourished throughout the world.

Two UH students, Mike Salmons and Nick Mongero, hope to bring rugby to the University of Houston.

"We both played on teams in Missouri," Salmons said. "But when we got to Houston we discovered that a university with 30,000 students didn't even have a rugby team."

The ambitious duo are hoping to recruit new members for a UH rugby team.

"We have about fifty or so people already," Mongero said. "But only about 20 percent have experience. What we would like is to find more people who have some playing experience or who could be a coach."

Salmons and Mongero urge anyone interested in helping or playing to call them at 749-4842 or 749-2197.

use the restroom; and be alert, your body language is very important — an attacker is more attracted to a preoccupied person than to an alert and aggressive one.

There are presently 15 radio-controlled emergency call boxes available on campus. Nine additional boxes will be installed within 30 days, Miller said. When the doors are opened the police dispatcher is notified automatically of the call box's location. Even if the caller is unable to talk the dispatcher will send assistance.

Officers are available to lecture to campus groups on crime prevention. Arrangements may be made by calling 749-2297.

UHPD service-oriented

The approach to campus security adopted by the University of Houston Police Department has contributed to the declining crime rate, a department official said last week.

Assistant Chief John Miller said that UH police are "service-oriented" and concerned with the needs of the campus community. In fact, he pointed out, many UH police are part-time students themselves.

Many officers are attracted to the idea of working with a smaller police department in a university setting, Miller explained.

Miller said his department is enhanced by the officers of "good quality" on the staff. He disagreed with the sometimes-expressed opinion that UH police officers are "rejects" from other law enforcement agencies. UH police are as qualified as other officers in Texas, he stressed.

UH police are state-commissioned officers, qualified to arrest offenders on or off campus when crimes are committed.

Miller said officers are continually refreshed in basic skills and exposed to new crime-fighting techniques.

that implement the new Organizational Funding Board. Under the amendments the SA president must appoint two students to the board.

The funding board, created last spring, is responsible for distributing funds to student groups which are not funded directly by student service fees. Albert Peterson and Pat Condon, the SA fiscal and governmental committee chairman, were approved by the senate as appointees to the board.

Unlike the funding committee it replaced, the funding board is responsible to the Student Service Fee Planning and Allocation Committee. The fees were previously distributed by the Campus Organizational Allocation Committee, which was under the jurisdiction of the SA.

but he does not think taking part in the violence will help. It is more likely he would end up being a victim than aiding his country, he said.

Ghalayini stressed that he has not suffered the pain of war as much as the people now living in Lebanon. "The worst of it is what has happened recently," he said.

He visited Beirut in 1979 and found the city much worse than when he left. "It's very sad. Hardly anything is left unscarred."

The fear of losing a friend or relative is constant these days. "It used to be you could distract yourself when there wasn't much going on — when you didn't hear about it every day in the news."

"It's really hard not to think about it all the time now," he said.

"At the same time, you're helpless. There's not much you can do from over here." He

But Ghalayini said the Lebanese have a strong spirit. "They just want to have their country back and live a normal life," he said. "If the Lebanese are given a chance, they'll put the country back together."
