Flood victims await survey

By BEN DeSOTO

Harris County Flood Control officials are racing to complete the analysis of a hydraulic survey on a controversial section of a drainage system in southeast Houston.

Residents in the Sagemont area near I-45 are claiming improvement work done by Houston Lighting and Power (HL&P) on the ditch in 1975 and by the Texas Highway Department in May 1979 has caused excessive water to flow into Turkey Creek, causing poor drainage and heavy flooding.

Several families in the Scarsdale, Wood Meadow and Sagemont subdivisions have filed suit against HL&P, the highway department and the county flood office for creating the alleged problems.

The survey will show whether or not the improved upstream ditch and the widened and deepened culverts have allowed too much water into the subdivisions.

An official with the flood control office, Don Hendricks, said he has received several calls from citizens citing a farmers almanac prediction for heavy rains in the gulf coast area for Oct. 24.

Baers' Agricultural Almanac predicts stormy weather for Oct. 20-27. The 154 year-old almanac correctly predicted the heavy rains in September.

"We're laughing on the outside, but we're crying on the inside about that prediction," Hendricks said.

Hendricks said the County Commissioners Court has allowed their employees to draw overtime and are now working on clearing the Turkey Creek system of trash and weeds from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Hendricks said even though they have the data about the width, depth and slope of the ditches and culverts to determine water flow, it would take about one to two weeks before answers can be found. The reason, Hendricks said, is the flood control offices lack a computer.

He hopes to have the data computed by an Oct. 17 task force meeting with subdivision residents.

In a previous task force meeting with the residents, county flood control officials heard allegations that the new culverts are a cause of subdivision flooding. They promised to investigate and put a survey crew on the disputed section the next day.

The meeting was sponsored by Congressman Ron Paul's office. At the meeting, residents claimed the old culverts and a bridge formed a natural bottleneck preventing the draining of excessive water from about 432 acres, thus overloading their own drainage system. The county official said the narrower and higher elevated ditch connecting the improved ditch and culverts to Turkey Creek is the bottleneck.

The residents have been flooded four times in a two month period. Residents claim they did not flood to such a degree until the culverts were completed earlier this year.

Commander stresses basic steps needed for UHDC improvements

The UH Downtown College needs three times the amount of special funding it has received for building renovation, Interim Chancellor of the Downtown College, Allen Commander said Thursday.

The UH Downtown College received $4 million in special funds from the Texas Legislature for 1979 to rehabilitate the Downtown College building and to build up teaching resources.

Commander said the state legislature originally appropriated $6.5 million, but Governor Bill Clements vetoed $2 million. He

Watt plans to ask UCPB to examine food contract now

By RICHARD CONNELLY

Staff Writer for The Cougar

Student Association President Ed Watt said he plans to ask the University Center Policy Board (UCPB) to immediately review the UC's contract with Mannings Food Services.

In a memo to the foods committee of the UCPB, Watt complained of two instances where he had received poor service in the Coffeehouse. He later said he had received a number of complaints about Mannings from other students.

Watt said the complaints showed a breach of a "good faith agreement" between Mannings and the board. A new contract, signed this summer, allows Mannings to raise prices without board approval in compliance with an index that takes into account raises in cost to Mannings. In the past, all price changes had to be approved by the board.

Watt said the board gave Mannings pricing power in the hope they would improve services. He wrote in the memo, "A good-faith effort by the UCPB has been misused, abused and the students are getting screwed."

Watt says the new contract takes effort on both sides and he feels Mannings is not making that effort. "I think the new contract is workable," he said. "But right now we're getting poorer service for higher prices."

Mannings increased prices before the semester began, but there have been no increases since, according to Ron White, unit manager for Mannings.

White is new to the UH operation and did not take part in the renegotiation of the contract earlier this year. The contract was negotiated by Bill Scott with the members of the foods committee and executives of Mannings.

Some members of the committee have expressed dissatisfaction with the price-cost index. "I personally would like to see more control on prices," Olga Garza, chair of the foods committee, said. "We thought it would be for the best to give them that power. There's a lot of competition in the area now (McDonald's, Burger King, etc.)."

Sharon Erwin, another member of the committee, said, "I'm not particularly happy with that part of the agreement."

"The index can be jimmied around a bit," Bert Woodall, another member of the committee, said. "There's a lot of leeway. But we'll be looking over their shoulders and that should have a chilling effect."

Woodall added the board would have had to mandate "whopping price increases" for the fall anyway just to keep up with inflation. "We were faced with a 14 percent increase. We knew there would be an initial substantial increase in prices."

Scott called the index the "lesser of two evils." "It was a damn hassle to keep putting all the price changes through the board," he said.

said the $4 million funding is the largest special appropriation the Texas legislature has given to an institution of higher learning.

Commander said 75 percent of the funding will go into building renovation because most classrooms and labs in the building need to be rebuilt and the plumbing is in need of repair. He said the condition of the UH Downtown Campus Bookstore is "totally inadequate."

"The Faculty here have been operating on a shoestring budget," Commander said. He said because the salaries for the Downtown College faculty are comparatively lower than for those of the Central Campus, the Downtown College has trouble finding and keeping faculty members. He said the turnover rate for the Downtown College faculty is high.

Although some of the floors of the Downtown College have been renovated recently, Commander expressed hopes the rest will be renovated soon. He said each floor cost about $1 million for renovation.

Faculty members at the Downtown College teach an average of 15 hours per week, which is more than that of most other colleges, Commander said. Commander said he would like to have more faculty members to

Editorial:

Public interest not served by PUC

The political process in Texas is a complex, sophisticated system that is beyond the grasp of many of this state's citizens. Because of this, big business and special interest groups are able to take advantage of the public and do so at almost every opportunity.

During the last two weeks, the Texas Public Utilities Commission has been conducting hearings on a monumental rate increase request from Houston Lighting & Power. What has transpired is not an impartial rate hearing, but bureaucratic shuffling of HL&P documents by a governmental body that has no concern for Texas residents.

When the Texas Public Interest Research Group began cross-examining several witnesses for HL&P, they found grossly inadequate research had been done by the PUC's own staff, enabling HL&P to ram-rod their information through.

TexPIRG raised several important issues about HL&P's methods of operation, specifically that HL&P had acquired a construction certificate before actual construction had begun on the Allen Creek Nuclear Plant so as to justify the proposed rate increase.

The PUC acknowledged that TexPIRG had raised important points, but suggested that TexPIRG file for a separate hearing. But who is supposed to be investigating HL&P if it is not the governing body that speaks to utility rate increases? Isn't HL&P a utility company that is supposed to justly serve the public interest?

What of the PUC itself. When challenged to verify or challenge HL&P figures, PUC staffers had to admit that they were unable to check calculations made by HL&P's expert witnesses.

There are many ways to stop government investigations in this state, as evidenced by the many historical references to Texas politicians being able to buy or fix elections. Perhaps the same is true with state commissions. Or perhaps the real problem is a lack of funding or interest on the part of the very citizens that commission like the PUC are set up to protect.

What is known is that HL&P will be able to get away with something due to the lack of investigation by this particular commission. And once again the public gets the short end of the stick.

Not all campus cops bad

One finds all manners of strange things kicking around on campus at four in the morning — rats, cockroaches, campus cops and editors.

Because of my rather unorthodox study habits, I've had occasion to meet a few of the UH Police officers who patrol the area in the early morning hours. By that time of night, most people are pretty mellowed-out, so the conversations have been casual and friendly.

This is a big contrast from what happened at the UC last week. A crowd — a fairly large one — got rather perturbed with the way two students at a dance were being handled by campus cops, who supposedly were there to keep peace. At the risk of understatement, let's say that things were "tense" between the officers and the crowd of students.

In the aftermath of this incident, it's easy to get on the bandwagon and say that UHPD was wrong. And that has been done. But lest we forget, I think it's important to take note of the officers you never hear about — the ones who do give a damn, and who don't get their jollies by harassing students.

Yes, I have actually encountered officers like this, and believe it or not, they used to be the majority. Many are just out of college, and I even knew one who was taking classes here.

I've gotten into a few discussions (and friendly arguments) with the late-night officers about the identity crisis UHPD now is going through. Where do the police fit into the grand scheme of things at the Central Campus? What should campus cops do? What should they not do?

There are two concepts of what a campus police department should be. The first is the so-called "professional law enforcement" direction which emulates a city police department. (Unfortunately, Karl Malden never is there when you need him.)

The second is the more passive role of being a "security" department, patrolling buildings and providing escorts to people who are mistrustful of us late-night roamers.

UHPD seems to be taking the first course. However, I've never been able to figure out why the two are mutually exclusive. Why does being a peace-keeping force necessitate a general mistrust and occasional disdain of students?

Whether the two can go together depends on UHPD policy and on the officers on patrol. Unfortunately, the high turnover rate in the department means that new officers are coming here all the time, and that automatically inhibits any rapport between cops and students.

However, many of the individual officers, especially those who have been on campus for a while, are good at balancing law enforcement with community service. And as incongruous as it may seem, some even enjoy talking with students on a personal level.

There are two things I don't like: drinking cold coffee and admitting error.

Tuesday's story on the incident at the UC accurately reflected all sides of the story: those of the officers involved, of the students they arrested, and of those who witnessed everything. Unfortunately, the eight-word headline did not, and it was not the fault of the reporter. The headline reflected only what the students and the witnesses said, and did so without attribution.

Contest adds to spirit

By PATRICK HUBBELL

The campus is getting excited in anticipation of the meeting with the Aggies this weekend. No doubt the outcome will be as dramatic as waiting to see whether Daniel will crawl out of the lion's den alive without getting mauled. To prepare for the event, I have devised a contest to generate more interest. Last year the contest appeared before the UH-UT game to reward the most original idea to generate spirit. The winner was to receive an all-expense paid vacation to stay overnight in College Station, courtesy of the treasury of PC's Travel Committee. Second place received a two-night stay. The prize went to the person who suggested sticking two large oranges on the uprights of the Texas Memorial Stadium and filling it up with vodka to make a real Texas screwdriver. Unfortunately, the fraternities soaked it up before the ground could.

This year's contest is to design classes for the ideal Aggie to attend. Some suggestions are:

1. Geology lab 124: Natural Rock Formations — student will become familiarized with mineral deposits and structural formations. Lab models include a bowl of soggy cornflakes left standing overnight.

2. Military Science 1104: Marksmanship — Field classes will introduce student to proper use and handling of rifle. First class will familiarize student with the weapon. Remainder of the semester will be spent showing student which end to point.

3. Art 1160: Fundamental of Drawing — Covers basic techniques of drawing with emphasis on composition, volume, line quality and coloring inside the lines.

4. Civil Engineering 4020: Bridge Design — Stress of materials and sheer and tensile strengths covered. Materials required: Erector set and Tinkertoys.

The winner of this year's contest will become honorary grand marshal of the Marching Owl Band of Rice U. for their half-time show when they take on the Ags Oct. 23. If the winner survives that, he or she will receive a pair of official Aggie storm-trooper boots to keep Bevo flop from musing up the britches when we take on the Longhorns.

Car-Go van awaits passengers at UH

Asst. Vice Chancellor considers revamping of Car-Go program

By RICK SMITH
Staff Writer for The Cougar

The fate of Cougar Car-Go in November will be decided in the last week of October, according to Julie Norris, assistant vice chancellor.

"Right now we have around 30 to 35 subscribers," Norris said, "but we need at least twice that many for the program to succeed."

Several changes are under consideration to help the Car-Go program become self sufficient, Norris said.

As originally set up, Car-Go consists of buses chartered from the 7-K Transit Company making three runs in the morning and afternoon taking students to and from UH to Baybrook and Alameda Malls.

The only change now in effect is the use of a van instead of a bus for the 6 and 8 a.m. runs because those two runs have the fewest riders, Norris said.

One of the changes being discussed is a plan to reduce the number of trips from three to two in an effort to cut expenses, Norris said.

"Only about one or two persons ride home on the 6 p.m. run," Norris said, "so we hope by cutting back where we can, Car-Go will become self-supporting."

The transit company is currently talking with their drivers about the feasibility of condensing the number of runs, Norris said.

At present students have to buy monthly subscriptions for the Car-Go service, but Norris said changes are imminent in this area also.

"We hope to have two- and three-day tickets available for the students who have classes only on Monday, Wednesdays and Fridays, or on Tuesdays and Thursdays," Norris said, "but we don't know how much these will cost."

Another possibility is a one-day ticket to accommodate the student who for one reason or another needs a ride on just one day.

All the penny-pinching will be for nothing if more students are not attracted to the program, according to Norris.

"We are working on increasing the number of riders using Car-Go," Norris said. "To do this we are offering a free two- or three-day pass so a student can try out Car-Go and see what it is like."

Students wishing to take advantage of this free opportunity to try Car-Go should sign up at the transportation office located in Room A-3 in the lobby of Ezekiel Cullen.

"We need some indication from the students about what schedule they might use their free pass on so we will have adequate transportation," Norris said.

decrease the average work load.

There are currently 4600 students enrolled in the Downtown College. Commander said the student population is growing about 5 percent per year. He said the student population is mainly composed of high school graduates and people from the downtown business community. The college has an open admissions policy and has no graduate program.

Although the UH Clear Lake College is comparable in student population to the Downtown College, Commander said the Downtown College receives less funding because no graduate courses are taught here. He said graduate course credit hours receive more funding from the state, than lower level credit hours.

"Several students come here with learning deficiencies," Commander said. He added that students who fail the entrance exams to the UH Central Campus often go to the Downtown Campus to overcome the areas they are deficient in.

Dr. Jerrold Packler, associate professor of business management and technology at the Downtown College, said he sees the Downtown College as emphasizing more practical and job-oriented aspects of studies than the Central Campus.

Packler said persons from the business community teach several courses at the Downtown College.

Commander said he has spoken with UH Systems Acting President Robert C. Maxson concerning the role of the interim Downtown College Chancellor. Commander said he agreed with Maxson that the acting chancellor should not attempt to institute any major changes in the structure of the Central Downtown College administration. He said as interim chancellor his major concern is to insure that the faculty receive adequate source funding.

Commander is a candidate for the permanent Downtown College Chancellorship. He said the search committee for the Downtown College Chancellor, "will look for the best leadership."

Orienteers match skills using compasses, maps

By STEVE ROTHSTEIN
Features Writer for The Cougar

The meet held last weekend by the Houston Orienteering Club (HOC) was so well run that Texas A&M plans to use it as the model for its meet to be held next spring, according to the orienteering coach at that school.

Ron Sandvick, an orienteer from the Bay Area Orienteering Club in San Diego, stated that he doesn't usually compete in meets sponsored by ROTC units because of poor organization. However, he said he was surprised how well this meet was organized. Sandvick, on a tour of orienteering meets in the U.S., scored highest in the blue course, the most difficult. He will finish his tour at the U.S. Nationals in New York.

Margie Redman, another San Diego orienteer, accompanying Sandvick on his tour, said that it was one of the best meets she had ever attended. Redman won the orange course for her division (female over 19 years old). The orange course is of medium difficulty and the most popular.

Captain Doug Duvall, the UH orienteering coach, said he heard only praise for the meet and the way it was run from the approximately 300 people who competed.

The competitors came from high schools, colleges, Boy Scout troops, and independent clubs. A few individuals competed who were not affiliated with any orienteering organization.

Duvall said the club made about $1200 profit from registration fees and concession sales. The club will use these funds to go to other meets this fall.

Although the club is ROTC-sponsored, anyone in the Houston area may join.

The meet was the third annual HOC meet and the first to be sponsored by the Houston area club.

The club is also trying to sell T-shirts to earn more money for future competition. Anyone interested in purchasing a shirt can contact the Club in the Military Science Department at 749-4394.

Escalators out to lunch

If you've ever questioned why the stars twinkle or why the sky is blue then your next earth-shattering query will probably go something like this: Why don't the escalators ever work in Agnes Arnold Hall?

While muttering these very words, men have tumbled down the steel steps of the broken escalators at A. A. Hall, better known as Avenue of Annihilation. Actually, the problem is not quite as dramatic as aforementioned, but it seems that somehow the escalators have worked out something with Murphy (author of the profound Murphy's Law). Just when everything has gone wrong, the escalators break down and add to your misery. Of course, offhand you might be inclined to offer a solution such as, take the elevators. Wrongo! Have you ever tried cramming 150 students into an elevator in Agnes Arnold Hall? Now do you understand? Not only are they very small, they are very unreliable. This elevator has the audacity to go against every principle known to a Houstonian.

For one thing it slows down during rush hour traffic. It seems that when you're in a hurry it either takes for ever for it to come to your floor or moves at a snail's pace once you get in.

Your next solution would probably be to take the stairs. Have you ever tried walking up four flights of stairs with 150 students armed with 20 lb. books? With that thought in mind I'll be even more frank.

Not long ago, a venerable old professor told me he had a heart attack while climbing the stairs in one of the buildings on campus. Now, he uses the elevator. But what if the elevators break down in that particular building and he

Castillo speaks on issues to UH Young Democrats

Mayoral candidate Leonel Castillo told UH Young Democrats Wednesday that he would rather have the Justice Department's investigation of city officials "fought in court and not on the campaign trail".

Castillo, former Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization, was responding to a decision by the U.S. Justice Department to postpone the investigation until after the November 6 elections.

The former commissioner was not in Houston when the alleged wrongdoings occurred and therefore said "I don't know what happened". Castillo also said he will not run a dirty campaign unless he is personally attacked or involved.

Wednesday's Houston Chronicle quoted Mayor Jim McConn as saying U.S. Attorney J.A. "Tony" Canales should proceed with the probe of alleged corruption in city hall and either clear or indict those under investigation.

Louis Macey, another mayoral candidate, and Nobel Ginther, who recently withdrew from the race for health reasons, have also asked the U.S. attorney's office to resume the federal investigation.

Castillo said if he were elected mayor, he would appoint more women to head city departments. "Out of 25 department heads in the city, only one is a woman and that is because the chief of that department was indicted," Castillo said.

Concerning the police department, Castillo said he would get a tighter grip on the department and when investigating police brutality, the officers involved would report to him and not to a department chief.

Castillo said he used this method as Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization where a number of officers were indicted or permanently suspended from the department after using unnecessary force in apprehending illegal aliens.

Castillo also said Houston should not annex any more area because public services will deteriorate even further. Castillo said if he is elected, he would consider de-annexation of the Clear Lake City area.

Castillo is scheduled to speak at noon Friday during a mayoral candidate symposium at the Bates School of Law.

UH cheerleaders sponsor campus pep rally today

UH cheerleaders are sponsoring a pep-rally today to promote spirit for the upcoming clash with the Aggies.

The theme for the pep-rally, which will take place at noon on spirit hill in front of Ezekiel Cullen Auditorium, is Support the Cotton Coogs.

Last week's pep-rally in Moody Towers had more than 100 participants, this week UH cheerleaders are hoping for an even larger turnout.

The rivalry with A&M has sharpened in the last three years. The Aggies will be looking to avenge last years defeat to the Coogs who went on to play Notre Dame in the Cotton Bowl.

Mayoral candidates speak; hosted by student groups

Several Houston mayoral candidates will speak at Krost Hall on the UH Central Campus today in a program sponsored by campus organizations.

According to Phyllis Frye, leader of the Friends of Gays, one of the co-sponsoring groups, the program will be from noon to 1:30 p.m. Frye said candidates Louis Macey, Leon Castillo, Betty Graham White and Debbie Leonard are the confirmed speakers. Houston mayor Jim McConn has not indicated if he will appear.

Frye said there will be a general introduction to start the program; followed by each candidate's five minute speech. At 1:00 p.m., a thirty minute question and answer session will begin.

SWC preview

'Pick-em' games tomorrow

(AP)—Oklahoma has the offense. Texas has the defense. This one should register on Richter Scales as far away as Alaska.

It's always been no place for the weak and meek but there is something special about the 74th renewal of the Oklahoma-Texas rivalry Saturday in the Cotton Bowl.

Both schools are unbeaten and unscared. Oklahoma (4-0) is No. 3 ranked and averaging a nation-leading 45.5 points per game. Texas (3-0) is No. 4 and leading the country in total defense and third in points allowed.

Heisman winner Billy Sims of Oklahoma is leading the country in scoring with 11 touchdowns for 66 points. Barefoot John Goodson of Texas is leading America in field goals with 12.

But Texas also can be explosive offensively. Sophomore A.J. (Jam) Jones is third nationally rushing with 138 yards per game.

Oklahoma can also be stingy defensively. The first team has yet to allow a touchdown.

This game is as close as the series has been since World War II. Both teams have won 16 games and a tie.

Texas was a five point favorite early in the week but oddsmakers quickly dropped it to one point.

"We're not quite as good as we've been," says Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer but the Sooners have been good enough to beat Iowa 21-6, Tulsa 49-13, Rice 63-21 and Colorado 49-24.

"We're going to have to be improved offensively," says Texas Coach Fred Akers but the Longhorns have been improved enough to beat Iowa State 17-9, Missouri 21-0 and Rice 26-9.

Akers says "I can't imagine anyone not looking forward to playing this game."

Switzer says "There's no other matchup this year like it in collegiate football."

The nationally televised meeting will get underway at 2:50 p.m. CST with 72,032 fans in the Cotton Bowl. The game has been soldout every year since 1946.

Scalpers have been asking and getting over $100 a ticket in Dallas. The price is expected to go up as the kickoff nears. Scalping is legal in Texas.

Switzer and Akers, teammates in college at the University of Arkansas, have faced each other three times as head coaches. Switzer's Oklahoma team defeated Akers' Wyoming club 41-7 in the 1976 Fiesta Bowl, and the Sooners won 31-10 last year with Akers at the Longhorn helm for the first time.

And, while the eyes of Texas and Oklahoma are on the annual Red River roughhouse between the two state schools in the Cotton Bowl, there will be some vital Southwest Conference football matchups Saturday, particularly the joust between Baylor and Southern Methodist.

Southern Methodist can stretch its SWC ledger to 3-0 with a victory over the Bears. Baylor could make its record 3-1 with a win before an expected 60,000 fans Saturday night in Texas Stadium an hour or so after the Longhorns and Sooners battle it out across town.

Rice and winless Texas Christian plays for cold scraps in Houston but defending champion Houston puts its unblemished bib on the line in College Station against the frustrated but talented Texas Aggies.

Arkansas is at Texas Tech to play the rejuvenated Red Raiders.

Baylor is rated a one-point pick over SMU while the Houston-A&M game is a "pick'em." Rice is a four-point choice over TCU and Arkansas is a field-goal favorite over Texas Tech.

Baylor has burning memories of blowing a 21-point lead to the Mustangs in Waco last year before losing 28-21.

Coog golfers in second place at LSU tourney

By DONNA PEARSON
Sports Writer for The Cougar

The Centenary golf team rallied from its second place berth to take over the lead at the LSU Intercollegiate Golf Tournament, at Sherwood Forest Country Club, in Baton Rouge, La.

The UH Cougars were leading in Wednesday's first round with a team total of 281, eight strokes ahead of Centenary. UH's senior golfer, Terry Snodgrass, had the UH low score for the day with a 69.

Centenary's team total for the two rounds was 567. UH lies eight strokes back while University of Florida had 577, with Clemson and Oklahoma State shared the fourth place spot with totals of 579.

The other SWC schools, Texas A&M, University of Texas and Southern Methodist are also competing in the prestigious tourney. A&M stand fifth with a score of 581, UT 605; and SMU, 612.

Hal Sutton of Centenary is the individual leader in the medal play tourney with a 138, while UH's Snodgrass was behind by only one stroke. Sutton shot a low 68 along with Oklahoma's Willy Wood to lead the tight field. Sutton's long drive of 317 yards on one hole helped him gain his lead.

UH's individual scores for the second round were Blaine McCallister, 73; Fred Couples, 75; Greg Chapman, 76; and Ray Barr, 78. Par for the course is 72 for 18 holes.

The 16 teams will compete in the final round of 18 holes today.

Volleyballers hosting tourney

By BRENDA ALVARADO
Sports Writer for The Cougar

The women's volleyball season reaches the high point of the year as the Coogs host their 13th annual Invitational today and Saturday. The round-robin pool play begins at 9 a.m. Friday and will continue throughout the day. The final pool play gets underway at 8:30 a.m. Saturday, with the finals beginning at 7:30 p.m.

The matches will be played in Melcher, Hofheinz and the Men's gyms, I and II.

The Invitational is one of the largest women's sporting events this year and brings more than 300 women athletes from 20 universities. Attending the tournament are the 7 outstanding teams that competed in the AIAW (Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women) Volleyball Nationals in 1978. The teams competing are Texas-Arlington, Southwest Missouri State, Purdue, Pittsburgh, Texas A&M, Ohio State, and Alabama.

Last year the UH women's team placed 10th in the nation and 3rd in the region. Volleyball coach, Ruth Nelson said, "We had a good season but we didn't do well nationally because we lacked the experience."

This year the team has shown their capabilities by taking first place in the Lamar Invitational. "We are presently ranked number one in the state and ninth in the nation, leaving the Lamar tournament in second place," Nelson continued.

The nine member squad of roundballers are in the eyes of their coach a "best group of athletes." Nelson said, "They all have their own assets, as a whole, we have a lot of depth on the bench, and anybody can come in and play all around."

Members of the team and participants in the UH Invitational are Donna Dusek, Rosie Eichenhorst, Glenda Halamickek, Cindy Gregory, Marcia Horsman, Rose Magers, Darlene Meyer, Sheryl Moore, and Pattie Richard.

"Our overall goal in the UH invitational will be to try to do better than last year," Nelson commented, "We're at least going for third, then for second, and then for first." Nelson believes that saying a team is going to win is not enough. "You've gotta have some type of goal immediately," she said.

It is difficult to predict volleyball since the momentum goes up and down, but if the UH team is able to control their mental fundamentals, it may be a year for nationals.

Adult tickets for the UH Invitational are $3 for the pool play games and $5 for the finals. Student tickets are $2 and $3.

Metcalf's Aggies favored to win SWC basketball championship

(AP)—Southwest Conference basketball teams can't even begin practicing until next week, but SWC coaches were already applying the pressure Thursday on Texas A&M Coach Shelby Metcalf and his heavily-favored Aggies.

"I just hope these other coaches know what they're talking about. I just hope they're right," Metcalf responded at a luncheon to kick off the 1979-80 season.

The season ends here in late February with San Antonio hosting the SWC tournament for the first time. The tournament had a successful two-year run in Houston.

To a man, the SWC's other eight coaches were picking the experienced Aggies to win the SWC, especially when they could needle Metcalf in front of the large luncheon crowd.

"I think Texas A&M is the team to beat. I think they are a possible Final Four team. So, Shelby, the bug is on you," quipped Baylor Coach Jim Haller.

"I think it will be the best race in the history of the Southwest Conference, other than A&M going through undefeated and winning it," said Houston Coach Guy Lewis.

"Metcalf will beat you as bad as he can beat you. It shouldn't be called the Southwest Conference tournament. It should be called the A&M Invitational," said Rice Coach Mike Schuler. "If he doesn't win it all, you Aggies can fire him."

Southern Methodist Coach Sonny Allen, whose Mustangs are expected to be one of the SWC's top teams this year, didn't let up on Metcalf: "We feel that if we play up to our potential, we have a chance of finishing second behind the Aggies."

Texas Tech Coach Gerald Myers, who was in Metcalf's position when he had 6-foot-8 star Rick Bullock, noted that Metcalf returns 6-foot-11 star Rudy Woods and told the Aggie coach, "Shelby, it's the big price you pay when you have a big man."

Metcalf was one of the last coaches to address the crowd. When he reached the podium, his eyes searched the crowd for Dr. Charles Samson, the SWC president and chairman of the powerful A&M Athletic Council.

"I want to get something straight here," said Metcalf, who is entering his 17th year as the Aggie head coach. "I want you to know, Dr. Samson, that these people are just kidding."

The Aggies finished 24-9 last season as Texas and Arkansas tied for the title. But the Longhorns and Razorbacks each lost several key players, while the Aggies return all five starters. Woods, only a sophomore, leads that group.

NCAA rules prohibit college teams from beginning practice before next Monday. SWC teams begin their season schedules in November.

Escalators at AH take a vacation

is forced to climb those stairs and run the risk of another coronary? (And this one may be fatal.) His class may have to put up with a substitute temporarily, or permanently. So it's not just a matter of not wanting to climb the stairs because we tend to be a bit lazy. Now that you're beginning to get some idea of the point trying to be made here, I'll continue with something just as interesting.

With all of the bitching that goes on about the lack of parking space around here it looks like something could be done. But is something done? Nooooooooooooooooooooo! Instead we have an increase in handicapped parking spaces. You might retort...well the handicapped need more spaces. This might be true, but the parking spaces I'm speaking of are never parked in. Excuse me. Once I saw someone park there. A student, evidently late for class darted from his car and across campus to one of the buildings. Now you can't tell me he has a handicap other than the one he has in golf. So why, you and I ask, are they there if they are not being used? Well, it's just another one of those unanswerable questions.

You might as well get used to it. There are some things in life we just can't conquer. The escalators and elevators are bound to be a little slow or break down now and then. Even if it seems like they tend to break down more now than then.

And you could look at it this way--it's always makes a good conversation piece (like Nixon and Watergate or The Cuban Missile Crisis).

AMUSEMENTS

'Field' proves best Wambaugh

By JOHN ATKINSON
Amusements Writer for The Cougar

THE ONION FIELD
Director: Harold Becker; screenplay: Joseph Wambaugh; producer: Walter Coblenz; A black Marble production; an Avco-Embassy release; color; multiple locations.

"The Onion Field," opening around town today, is the one film that Joseph Wambaugh seems determined not to let get away.

It is the true story of a police killing in an onion field between Los Angeles and Bakersfield which Wambaugh has scripted himself, allowing no middlemen to botch it (like "The Choir-boys"). Gregory Powell (James Woods) and Jimmy Lee Smith (Franklyn Seales) are a couple of small potatoes robbers who happened to be pulled over by police officers Ian Campbell (Ted Danson) and Karl Hettinger (John Savage).

John Savage

Powell gets the jump on the police, and a kidnapping is the result after Hettinger surrenders his revolver.

The criminals take the cops to an onion field and execute Campbell. Hettinger gets away.

Soon after, the killers are caught and the arduous process of their prosecution begins.

This is what "The Onion Field" is really about, the insanity of the judicial system in this country and the incredible pressures police come under in the everyday performance of their jobs.

Savage gives another fine performance in this film as the cop caught in this, the longest criminal case in California history.

He is called on soon after the incident to go in front of police roll calls and describe the mistakes he made. A memo circulates in the department, pointing the guilty finger at him for surrendering his gun.

The guilt begins affecting his mind. He suffers intense headaches. He gets kicked upstairs to detectives which coincides with many instances of obvious shoplifting, right in front of store employees. His mind manufactures a way to punish itself.

In other words, Savage portrays a broken man who winds up not even being able to keep his story straight on the stand in the seemingly incessant trials.

The film is depressing, but it is a very strong film about the people who are many times affected as much by crime as the victims. The story is straightforward, Hollywood storytelling, but it is this which makes its harsh themes so compelling.

COORS asks the question:

WHAT IF...?

Can a man be great if his name be ordinary?
--Thaddeus Kosciuszko

What if the great men and women of history hadn't had those important sounding names so suited to their eventual achievements? Would they have failed to accomplish all that fate had in store for them?

For instance:
Zebulon Montgomery Pike.
"Pike's Peak." But what if his name had been something else? What would the Colorado high country have done with Maury's Mountain?

Or Hockstein's Heights?
The 1859 gold rushers would not have charged halfway across a continent shouting "Hockstein's Heights or bust!"

Just look at the names that fill our early history. William Tecumseh Sherman. Ulysses S. Grant. George Rogers Clark. Meriwether Lewis. J.E.B. Stuart. Susan B. Anthony. Lucretia Mott. Nobody fools around with people like that.

And with a name like Adolph Coors, what else are you going to do but figure out how to brew a great beer in a better place than anybody ever brewed beer before. Did any of those city brewers ever climb a mile up in the Rockies just to get pure mountain spring water, or grow their own high country barley? Of course not. That's why Coors is special—the only beer that lets you taste the high country. The beer that makes all the others just city beer. Coors. It's a great name.

Taste the High Country.

ADOLPH COORS COMPANY, GOLDEN, COLO.
