Magner with protesters

Professor, class protest classroom conditions

By STEPHANIE WARE

Staff Writer for The Cougar

Dr. Richard Kasschau and his introductory psychology class met on the front lawn of the administration building to protest the conditions of their classroom.

The class usually meets in Agnes Arnold Auditorium 1, but the deterioration of the auditorium and a continual delay in repairs has forced action from the professor and his students.

On March 18, 1976 Kasschau prepared a memo endorsed by other professors who teach in the auditorium, detailing the condition of the auditorium and the estimated cost of repairs. The memos were sent to the now deceased vice president of Facilities and Planning, Clifton Miller.

"I received a letter commending me on taking time to recommend thoughtful solutions to the problems on the hall, but nothing was ever done," Kasschau said.

The seven-page memo was redrafted and resubmitted to Associate Chancellor Andrew Rudnick on April 19, 1978.

The lighting, slide projector, carpeting, student seating, public address system and overhead projector are some of the problems listed in the memo. The major problem is the roof and ceiling, Kasschau said.

"When it rains, I have to move the podium. There is a stream of water coming down in the middle of it," Kasschau said. He also said paint and plaster is falling off the ceiling onto the seats below. "We had a guest speaker last week and when he finished speaking there were white flakes in his hair."

The repairs were placed on a priority list below new carpeting for the dean's office. But no money was allocated to fix the auditorium, according to the memo from Kasschau to Rudnick.

An invitation to discuss the problem at Thursday's protest was issued to top administrators, including Rudnick; Tony Colson, associate provost;

Joseph Schroeder, director of Audio Visual Aides; and Gerald Goodwin, associate professor of history who taught a class in the auditorium.

However, only one administrator showed up. Provost George Magner spoke to the crowd and made a commitment to have the repairs done during the summer. "Some items have been fixed and the roof will be fixed before the summer session," said Magner.

But the still dissatisfied students said they want results and asked Magner to look at the auditorium for himself. Magner said, "The place is a mess and I will tell the people in maintenance I said so," he said over the $600 sound equipment purchased by Dr. Kasschau.

He also said the administration approved $30,000 for repairs and another $30,000 would be set aside for additional repairs. One student said "I hope so, I don't see anyone hesitating to take tuition." Another commented "everybody will be gone by then."

Magner again sympathized with the students and said he will do everything possible to get the repairs done. "I am a bureaucrat myself and I get fed up with bureaucracy. If the repairs are not made, come back." The students promised they would.

Association formed to improve input

Approval sought by police officers

By PHYLLIS SMITH

Staff Writer for The Cougar

UH police officers have formed an association to help solve morale problems in the department and to open up communication with Police Chief George Hess.

"We feel we have a problem in the department and now we can't keep it in-house any longer," Ronnie Turner, president of the UH Police Officers Association, said. Turner is a six-year veteran of the UH police force.

The association, which has 24 of the 32 active officers as members, was formed for three reasons, according to Turner.

"The first reason is there is no morale in the department whatsoever. Second there is no communication with Mr. Hess. And the third reason is because of the large turnover and no job security in the department," Turner said. He said since Jan. 1, six officers have left the department.

Turner said Hess has refused to speak with him about the association "with no reason whatsoever."

Turner said he called Hess' secretary Wednesday, April 18, to set up an appointment with Hess for the following Friday. Thursday Hess' secretary called Turner to change the appointment to 3 p.m. that day.

Turner said he told the secretary he could not meet with Hess then because he wanted to meet with the other executive officers in the association before meeting with Hess. The association's other executive officers are Steve Meyers, vice president, and Tom Wood, secretary-treasurer.

Turner said Hess asked him later that day why they could not meet that afternoon. Turner said he repeated his reason to Hess, and said he wanted to discuss the association with Hess. Hess then told Turner he did not want to discuss the association and refused to give an explanation.

Hess was out of town and unavailable for comment.

Turner said he hopes to have the association members complete a questionnaire by early next week which will evaluate both the good and bad points in the department.

The questionnaire will be similar to one which the Wichita Falls, Texas, Police Officers Association has used.

Turner said he hopes to submit the results to Hess in two to three weeks. If Hess refuses to accept the association, Turner said "we will be forced to go over his head" and take their complaints to the chancellor and the Board of Regents.

"We're not trying to run Hess out of his job, we're just trying to open communication with him," Turner said.

Turner said in a staff newsletter to the department issued about two months ago, Hess stated he did not think meetings with the department staff were necessary at this time. "There have been two staff meetings where everybody in the department was able to meet with him (Hess) that I can remember," Turner said. Hess came to UH in December, 1977.

"We just want to talk to him and air our complaints. We're not going to buck every memo or policy change, we just want to have some input," Turner said.

UH Police: 'No job security'

"Now, everything comes down from him (Hess), and nothing goes up to him."

Turner said several UH officers tried to form a police association in early 1978, but there was no interest. He said that nearly 90 percent of the new officers recognized the morale problem, and recently approached several of the senior officers to see what could be done.

The UH association is affiliated with the Combined Law Enforcement Associations of Texas (CLEAT). Turner said the UH association is in the process of getting a charter through the state.

There have already been several association meetings, according to Turner. He said the meetings are open and interested individuals are encouraged to offer suggestions or complaints.

Each member is required to pay $1 per month for dues. Turner said the dues will help meet the various expenses and possibly help buy equipment to donate to the department.

Commentary:

President Carter due respect from media

By MARK POWER

Wednesday evening President Carter spoke to an assembly of journalists on the capabilities of the U.S. intelligence community to effectively monitor Soviet compliance with the proposed SALT II accords.

Though the text of his remarks were of the utmost importance to national security and to the possible ratification of the accords, this journalist was sparked by his presentation of the issues.

Time and again during his administration, the president has come under attack from the media for seeking the trust of the American people through his actions. Wednesday, he asked that journalists believe "the bottom line on monitoring compliance with the treaty" is that the United States is more than capable to do so, despite indications from sources otherwise. This was one more example of the political style of trust for which Carter has been assaulted in the media.

The president's plea to the media to believe in his good judgement led me to remember some of the statements made in the post-Watergate era of political reporting.

The best was a full-page editorial that appeared in the New York Times extolling the efforts of then-President Ford to heal the wounds created by the moral outrages of the Nixon years. In effect, the Times was appealing to the citizens to have faith in the presidency as an institution.

In a democracy where the electorate supposedly expresses their faith in an individual by placing him in elective office, why does the "fourth estate" consistently blame that individual for all failures of government, and consequently undermine all faith in him?

As cases in point, I cite the failure of Congress to pass adequate legislation on energy; the failure of Congress to assess the seriousness of the Iranian crisis; and their failure to support the president's successful quest for peace in the Middle East.

Throughout activities on all three issues, it was not the President that was failing to provide leadership or take action, but rather the Congress for inexplicable reasons that undermined all three issues. And as a journalist, it is inexcusable in my mind that the media would exercise such selective coverage as to mislead the public.

On energy, the Congress was handed constructive legislative proposals from the White House, yet succumbed to the all-powerful petroleum lobby. Congress bastardized the proposals into watered-down useless regulations. And the petroleum lobby has the gall to blame the president for the current energy crisis and supposed lack of incentives for exploration?

As to the Iranian revolution, the executive branch attempted to inform the Congress of the "imminent possibility" of instability in the region as early as February 1977, but the media seemed to overlook this fact when the Iranian oil supplies dried up.

And it is ironic that the Congress was well-publicized in their lack of faith that Carter could ever be enough of a diplomat to accomplish having two of the oldest warring peoples sit down at a table in the same room, much less sign a peace treaty. It was only after the Camp David summit that the media placed any faith in the president's diplomatic abilities. Perhaps we should have taken cue from the fact that Sadat and Begin had unshakable faith in Carter's abilities.

I do not wish to make a hero out of the president, but rather to point out the respect due his office, knowledge and stature. It is time the media took a more responsible role in covering the politics of Washington, and stop treating the man from Georgia as an outsider.

So when the president makes a value judgement on national security, asking me to have faith in his judgement, I will try to contain my cynicism. Besides, there are too many journalists out there doing it for me. Perhaps they need to listen to the Watergate tapes to be reminded of how far we have come from the horrors of the past.

Letters:

Student boos 'three cheers,' pities narrow-mindedness

To the Editor:

I am writing this letter in response to the "three cheers" that appeared in the Daily Cougar, on April 25, regarding the tuition increase for foreign students. I cannot help but feel pity for these three students who obviously have a very narrow mind. I am outraged at this kind of attitude because it is clear that those people have only a very slight idea, if any at all, about the reasons why foreign students are paying less than out-of-state American students. Let me give you some information that I am sure you do not have, that is, the reason why some of us are paying $14 per credit hour.

There is an agreement already made between the United States government and some foreign countries, before a student comes to a university in the United States, as to the percentage of that student's education in the United States that will be paid by the United States and by the Student's government. The agreement is, in the majority of cases, made specially with those countries which produce oil or where there is a great deal of natural resources that the United States can profit from, which, as you might see, although I doubt it very much, is very natural for the American government. There are very few Americans, like you cheerers, that are very happy with the possibility of a tuition increase for internationals, but I have seen hundreds of open-minded and concerned Americans who do not share your opinion. Perhaps it is that they have had some kind of contact with international students and have realized that we are persons besides foreigners, and that they have learned a lot from our rich cultures and this has in turn, broaden their ideas about us.

In case you did not know, which I am sure you did not, we are not paying $14 per credit hour out of charity from the United States, but because the American government is getting more in return from our countries, since it is the American foreign policy never to give anything without expecting something in return (which in most cases is oil or a commitment from our countries to remain pro-American in spite of everything). In your letter you mention that for some time some foreign groups were denouncing imperialistic actions of the United States. I am certain that you were referring to the Iranians. Now let me tell you that, since we are living in a democratic country where everybody is free to voice his opinion, so the Iranians were within their full rights to denounce their discontent with American intervention in Iran. I do not see any reason why they should have remained silent. I am personally very glad that they finally succeeded in their struggle. Now the Iranian government has increased its oil prices, which has definitely made the Americans not a bit happy. Is this the reason why you are cheering at the tuition increase? Because now you have to pay more for gas so that your late model cars can take you everywhere forgetting the cries of the oppressed people in our countries and their need for reforms? If that is the only reason you are so happy about the tuition increase, I cannot help feeling sorry for you!

Hike shows responsibility

To the Editor:

For the last several weeks the Daily Cougar, in editorials and letters, has fashioned a hefty case against raising tuition rates for foreign students. From these articles one might suspect that those of us who support this price rise are either some type of fascist isolationists or the American version of an Islamic Iranian. Setting aside the melodrama, let's investigate this situation with some semblance of reason.

State schools, including UH, are made possible not only through tuition collected each semester but more importantly from tax revenues from all Texas residents. Whether in the form of a school tax, state property tax (or its replacement), and whatever other duties levied, the result is that as a Texas resident I have been paying and will continue to pay "tuition" ad infinitum. Thus to be more equitable in spreading this actual cost of an education, it seems only logical that non-residents pay an accelerated rate during their brief stay here.

Furthermore I see this move by the legislature as evidence of a move to more responsible fiscal policies provoked by the Proposition 13 and balance the budget fever among voters. Perhaps our legislators are finally realizing that there is no such thing as a free lunch... somebody always pays the bill. If only the writers of the Daily Cougar could be likewise afflicted.

Bob Vecera

Ally indifferent to raise

To the Editor:

This letter is in response to the one appearing in the April 26 issue of the Cougar regarding foreign students tuition hike.

I am a foreigner studying at UH. My feelings towards the tuition hike is indifferent. If Texans feel that our fees should be raised, that's your decision, your legislature and your state. However, why are all of us judged against the actions of one segment of the foreign student population?

All of us do not share such feelings towards the United States. It is surprising that such an attitude prevails in some of my colleagues at the university with their supposed intelligence who have the audacity to stereotype all foreign nationals. Let me extenuate that some of us foreigners are also your staunch allies.

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syrian air force jets patrolled the sky over Beirut Thursday as a cease-fire arranged by the U.N. peacekeeping command silenced Israeli and Palestinian guns after four days of the heaviest fighting in southern Lebanon in more than a year, U.N. and Palestinian spokesmen said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation may be "in for an explosion of price increases" if progress isn't made in reducing inflation during the next two or three months, says a top administration official. That assessment from Barry Bosworth, director of the Council on Wage and Price Stability, came as the government prepared to release its latest consumer price report.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices increased another 1 percent in March, led by sharply higher prices for food, housing, clothing and gasoline, the government said.

It said gasoline prices rose 3.8 percent, the largest monthly jump in nearly four years. Both housing and food costs were up by 1 percent.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation has been introduced in Congress that would require a 10-year prison sentence for persons convicted of trafficking in over 100 pounds of marijuana.

Rep. Billy Lee Evans, D-Ga., introduced the bill Wednesday, saying marijuana trafficking has become a major problem and new research shows marijuana is more harmful than previously thought. Federal law now provides a maximum five-year penalty for persons convicted of trafficking in marijuana the first time and a maximum of 10 years for a second conviction.

Slicing the monetary cake

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A new government survey found that smoking among teenagers has fallen by 25 percent since 1974, Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. said today. Califano also disclosed that another HEW poll found an estimated 17 million Americans tried to quit smoking last year, and 3.5 million considered themselves successful in kicking the habit.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements said he supports a bill to abolish the state's prevailing wage law, which he said forces the public to subsidize labor unions.

"In this state, the prevailing wage law simply protects unions from having to compete with merit shop contractors who abide by the free market system," Clements told a news conference. "There is no merit to the argument that quality of building will drop off if the law is repealed."

An estimated 5,000 construction union members converged on the capitol last week to protest repeal of the law. The wage act requires contractors to pay employees the local prevailing wage on public construction projects.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texans would pay $1 more for automobile inspections, with most of the money going to raise retirement benefits for state police, liquor agents, Capitol guards and game wardens under a bill passed by the House on Thursday.

Senators now must decide whether to accept House changes, including the one financing the pension increase with higher vehicle inspection fees.

The Texas Legislature recently approved a 5.1 percent increase in faculty salaries. The money will be distributed through a system of merit evaluations that must be fair, honest and objective. As always, there simply is not very much cake to go around, and among some of the people who must decide how it is to be sliced, there is disagreement.

It has been decided that some faculty members are more deserving than others. But the method used by the English department to do this has been called into question. And although the rift has been resolved to some degree, the events should be chronicled, because the attitudes and ideas of the faculty and administration are inevitably felt by those they serve—the students.

In evaluating its faculty, the English department's personnel committee began with the criteria suggested by the college of Humanities and Fine Arts — teaching, university service and research and publications. Before anyone was evaluated, a detailed set of standards was drawn up. It outlined the weight to be given to a particular number of publications and the amount of university service rendered. The committee's attempt at objectivity was apparent.

In addition, a machine-scored evaluation of the faculty by the students was used to determine the quality of teaching offered in the classroom. According to English department chair John McNamara, the faculty was rated from very good to superior and, as a department, did better than other departments in Humanities and Fine Arts and better than departments in other colleges as well.

But rather than using five categories of ratings, as proposed by the college, the English department used only three. That is when the trouble began.

McNamara says the department used the three category system—superior, good and adequate—so the evaluations could make reasonable and defensible distinctions among the large number of faculty that the English department must rate.

Awards dinner set for Monday

The UH Annual Awards Day ceremony will be Monday at 11 a.m. in the UC Arbor.

Distinguished individuals will be honored for their achievements in academics, leadership and service at UH.

Omicron Delta Kappa, a national honor society, will be hosting the ceremony. However, the awards will be sponsored by the group that nominates each individual for an award.

A banquet will follow the ceremony at noon in the Houston Room of the UC.

When these evaluations were forwarded to the Humanities and Fine Arts Personnel Committee, which reviews the evaluations of all departments in that college, they were deemed unacceptable. "Everybody else tried to make a five-level graduation," said Dr. William Hawes, "The college personnel committee could not accept it." Hawes is chair of that committee.

Dr. Karl Webb, acting dean of Humanities and Fine Arts, wasn't too pleased either. He requested that Hawes poll the members of the college personnel committee to see if they supported lowering the evaluations of the English department one level in all categories.

Hawes told Webb in a memorandum dated April 11, the college personnel committee supported such a move and the dean's column and the personnel committee's column on the merit evaluation forms should reflect the lower rankings.

According to McNamara, members of the English department's personnel committee consulted an attorney who said such a uniform downgrading of the evaluations would be a violation of the Fair Employment Act.

At a meeting on April 16, with McNamara and others from the English department, Webb agreed not to downgrade the evaluations.

Although he still does not approve of the English department's procedures, and informed Provost George Magner of such in a letter two days later, Webb also agreed that the department would be allocated its merit money, probably on a per capita basis, and granted the department freedom to divide up the money according to its own procedures.

McNamara says that neither he nor the English department have an axe to grind with Dean Webb. He says it is just that the people in the field should be the ones to

UH to offer third-year Czech in fall

In a move towards a degree plan in Czech Studies at UH, Professor Theofil Halama will offer third-year courses in Czech next fall.

First and second year courses are already taught at UH and have been in existence since 1973.

UH already has the largest Czech enrollment of all universities in the United States.

"Czechs play an important role in the development of our state," William Soucek, first year instructor at UH, said. "The Czech community represents an important ethnic segment of our state population and it is entirely proper to preserve its cultural heritage." Soucek, along with Halama and UH Czech Club president Stephen Spacek, was instrumental in obtaining the third level special problems course.

"There are about 15 students interested in taking the third level course next fall," Spacek said. "Three or four of those students wish to pursue a degree in Czech studies if a 400 level course comes about in the near future."

The third year course will emphasize composition, advanced grammar and literature research. The first two courses are designed to familiarize students with the pronunciation of Czech through exercises on tape and to give the student a strong foundation in basic conversational Czech. Reading and writing skills are also developed. On certain days, Czech history, art and folklore are emphasized.

Students currently enrolled in Czech are pleased with the courses offered now. "I've learned a lot and I wouldn't trade the experience for the world," second-year student Earl Chumchal said. "Since I am of Czech ancestry, this course has been helpful in teaching me about my heritage."

Sam Garner, another second year student, said the Czech classes have helped him to gain insight into the lifestyle of a foreign culture. "The times that we have history and reports about Czechoslovakia are very interesting."

All Czech courses at UH satisfy core elective requirements and foreign language demands for the entire slate of degree plans UH offers.

Enrollment in Czech Studies also guarantees free membership in the UH Czech Club. The group participates in many extra-curricular activities, such as the Rosenberg Czechfest and the UH Mikulasska (Christmas) celebration.

"We're very pleased with the progress made in Czech this year," Spacek said. "It looks like the UH Czech program, concerned with preserving the third most spoken language in Texas, is headed for high times."

Senate approves new budget, paves way for limited spending

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate gave its endorsement to a 1980 budget that would hold the line on federal spending and pave the way for a balanced budget in 1981 and a $55 billion tax cut the following year.

Senators accepted President Carter's challenge to fight inflation by holding down increases in federal spending and went him one better. They voted to limit spending to $532.6 billion, or $6.7 billion below the president's recommendation.

The Senate approved the budget on a 64-20 vote after three days of debate.

The Senate-passed budget would allow defense spending in fiscal 1980—the 12 months beginning Oct. 1—of $124.3 billion, a slight increase over 1979 after inflation is considered. That is $1.1 billion less than Carter proposed.

But spending for most other government programs would be held to current levels. After inflation is considered, that would mean less spending for dozens of programs, including public service jobs, highway construction and aid to state and local governments.

The Carter administration's budget chief praised the Senate's action, saying it "has exhibited responsible restraint. . . ."

Even though the English department appears to have won this battle, the war may not be over. It is possible next week, according to sources in the department, an investigation into the disparity between English faculty salaries and the salaries of other departmental faculties will be called for.

Feature Writer for the Cougar

What's in a name? Be it D'Ailly, d'aille, allix or Allee, as in Dr. W. Arthur Allee, the origin of that name and others will come under closer scrutiny a month from now.

A retired UH professor and long-time genealogy buff, Allee has helped to plan and will guide a family tree hunt to England, leaving Houston on May 24.

The purpose of the trip, according to a Thiel Travel brochure, is to visit all possible sources of information in London which may lead to a "crystallization of pedigree." Tour members will have access to research spots and readers' permits through Allee's membership in the Society of Genealogists.

After spending two weeks in London doing record search work and sightseeing, one week will be allotted for individual sleuthing in surrounding shires, or counties. A highlight of the trip is a special invitation to attend a genealogy meeting and spend the night at Prinknash Abbey, home of Benedictine Monks.

Allee became interested in his own origin when he read a partial genealogy done by his cousin 25 years ago. He helped the cousin to fill in facts about his own immediate family, and then realized he "just couldn't leave it alone."

He began his own search for family members in the United States, uncovering both royalty and scandal. "It doesn't matter to me if I'm ever connected to royalty or not, in fact I'm told that most Americans are in some way or other related to royalty."

Allee displays a page of the family history compiled by his cousin, titled "Waifs and Strays." He explains, "These are American Allees who couldn't be connected directly to the family."

Allee says, "I really want to get the Allee family tree in the United States straightened out." He waves an arm bearing an international time zone watch, and points to stacks of letters and documents, adding, "It drives you nuts. You think you've found the matching names, then you discover they're 100 years apart."

The gray-haired professor knows he will never be able to put all the pieces together, so he has decided to freshen his approach by aiming at the "European connection."

Between conducting daily "how to" study classes and personalized guidance for tour members, Allee hopes to solve some mysteries of his own. He believes that he is descended from the son of a Huguenot minister who fled France to escape religious persecution. A "missing link" in England would help him to connect that original Allee with those who finally came to America.

The unmarried Allee meanders around his own immaculate home, proudly pointing out travel mementos from his eight trips to Europe.

Allee says that the "Roots" craze has accounted partly for increased American interest in genealogy. "People are becoming more and more aware of the importance of tracing their ancestry. To me it's interesting just to know where I came from."

"Having once committed myself to the aesthetic side of it which I love and would totally commit to and care desperately about, once that's all over and said and done, I'm a total hooker. Whatever it takes, I'll do it."

Sound cold, hard-bitten or cynical? It's just Wayne Rogers including whoever happens to be listening in his world. He is as easygoing a guy as his extremely popular "Trapper John" character from the perennial TV favorite, "M*A*S*H."

Rogers hasn't really had to sweat comparisons between his TV character and the comparatively naive character which he plays in Frank D. Gilroy's "Once in Paris," a film reviewed mercilessly on the other side of this page. He is one of the best things about the comedy-drama, a skein it shares with his television vehicle.

One basic difference between the two may be the rapport which Rogers and the cast of "M*A*S*H" (Alda, Maclean Stevenson, Gary Burghoff, etc.) had with their comedy dialogue. The philosophy of the show was to play to each other. "If I made them laugh, they laughed. If they made me

Rogers wants to do more features, but if the right vehicle for TV comes along, he's willing. He has some guidelines for what he will and won't do though. "I don't wanna do something silly, otherwise I could do Captain Kangaroo, y'know. I think that that's all basically on the same level. The thing that's good about 'M*A*S*H' is that it is an intelligent show, it doesn't fall into the silly category."

There is certainly nothing silly about the nice but calculating Wayne Rogers.

Theater, music fill weekend

The winding down of arts on campus seems to be a gearing up as a full slate of artistic events happen this weekend on campus.

"The Robber Bridegroom" concludes its run at 8:30 p.m. tonight and tomorrow night in the Lab Theatre. The play has plenty enough humor, bluegrass and Americana.

At 8 p.m. tonight in Cullen Auditorium, the UH Wind Ensemble will be in free concert. Featured will be works by Aaron Copland and Ralph Vaughn Williams.

Celloist Warren Lash and pianist Betty Ruth Tomforde will give a free faculty recital at 8 p.m. Saturday in Dudley Recital Hall of the Fine Arts Building. Mozart, Beethoven and Brahms are on their program.

Another "freebie" coming up is the 8 p.m. Sunday performance of the UH Choirs in the Houston Room of the UC. Across the campus at the same time in Dudley Recital Hall is another free recital by guitarist Miguel Alcazar who will be performing modern and renaissance works.

The New Music Ensemble will be performing (free) modern Mexican compositions at 8 p.m. Monday in Dudley Hall.

Violist Lawrence Wheeler and pianist Betty Ruth Tomforde will perform a free faculty recital at 8 p.m. in Dudley Hall Monday.

AMUSEMENT

Hamilton can joke a

By H.N. GRAHAM
Amusements Writer for The Cougar

It was a week ago Wednesday, and George Hamilton was in the process of going everywhere anyone would listen to him to talk about his new film, "Love At First Bite," a comedy with Hamilton playing Dracula.

One of the places was right here on campus, in the communications wing of the new Humanities Building. He was waited on by a black, chauffeur-driven limousine (have to be, right?) and I caught up to him in the lobby between KUHF radio (where he'd been interviewed, after speaking to a class in mass media production) and one of the TV studios.

Hamilton was ambushed in the lobby by about half a dozen young women who all wanted his autograph, one of whom got it on her T-shirt. Hamilton laughed, got a pen, and went to it. He looked like he was having the time of his life.

Radio-TV major Lori Williams, when asked why she was there, didn't have to think about her answer. "How often do you get a chance to see a famous, gorgeous man?" she asked.

And it must be said, Hamilton is gorgeous. He was wearing a well-tailored pin-striped suit. His smile is just as perfect in person as it seems in the movies, and, unlike most of real life, every hair on his head really was in place.

His escort and guide, Dr. William Hawes, steered him into one of the TV studios, where some students videotaped an interview with Hamilton for one of their classes.

The first question was what Hamilton thought about being a sex symbol. His immediate reaction was a large grin, but he went ahead and answered the question seriously.

"It's funny," he said, "But I've been in the business 20 some odd years. I'm graying on the sides. I'm getting too old to be that."

What he thought about Dracula was the next obvious question, a part which seems somewhat at variance with his image.

"I don't think so. Dracula has been in love with one woman for 760 years; you have this tremendous fidelity. It's romantic and old-fashioned, and I'm terribly old-fashioned. What we did in the film is make fun of Dracula, and myself."

Did he have any advice for anyone who wanted in the business? "You better have the heart for it," he said. "It's hard to keep taking rejection, even if you think you make it. When it's right, when it's good, it's the best in the world."

"Sometimes it's hard to take. Some people aren't prepared to winning as well as failure. precarious on both sides of business. I've enjoyed it, even if I've lost."

The interview came to an end. Hamilton thanked the students for their time and whirled out, into a crowd of people who wanted his autograph, or just to see him.

His next stop was the Houston offices to have his picture taken. He was interviewed by me. I brought up his career-long history of bad reviews and animosity from many critics.

This question was enough to make him laugh. "Some of that," he said, leaning back and waiting for the photographer to be ready, "was deserved. It came from a lack of

"The reviews of this one have been uniformly fine. That makes it all worthwhile."

We spoke of his hobby, buying and remodeling old houses. Currently he is working on a southern plantation in Natchez, Mississippi. The thought of Hamilton as the lord of a southern plantation fits quite well, after meeting him.

My final question was if his work is an art. "You start out that way, but you realize it isn't always. Dracula, for instance, had to be classically pure, yet deliver a Mel Brooks line. How much of that is really art?"

By that time, Hamilton had to be somewhere else. He shook my hand, thanked me for my time, and left.

'Paris' loses with script

By JOHN ATKINSON
Amusements Writer for The Cougar

ONCE IN PARIS

Director, producer, writer: Frank D. Gilroy; color; at the Galleria I and II.

"Once in Paris" is the kind of film it is good to have a stick pin along as a date. In this way, one can stay awake. Otherwise...

Wayne Rogers (of "M*A*S*H") stars as the lovable American screenwriter caught up in an affair in Paris as he is trying to salvage a French film production. He is aided in becoming aware of French culture by his chauffeur, Jack Lenoir, who steals the movie from everybody as a world-wise Frenchman.

Pulitzer Prize winner Frank D. Gilroy ("The Subject Was Roses") has herein fashioned a story that could put a mesmerist to shame for sheer sleep-inducing potential. The tale has Roger's character (as naive as a boy scout) throwing away his happy marriage (he thinks at the affair's start) by hopping in the sack with Gayle Honnicutt.

The fool falls for her, and the chauffeur eventually gains the hatred of Rogers by seducing Honnicutt. There is the obligatory recrimination scene between each member of the triangle, followed by Roger's realization that he shouldn't have taken the affair so seriously.

The film has the look (cinematography) of European film with the vacuum-headedness of American film. Rogers is such a basically likable guy that the film is not a total loss.

It is a partial loss, though. Honnicutt is as bad as she ever was, but the script gets the idiot prize on this film. Roger's character is absolutely unbelievable. One minute he's nervous about what people will think about his asking for a better room in his hotel; the next he is flaunting propriety with a Englishwoman all over Paris, calling his wife to reassure her the whole time.

Wayne deserves better. Hopefully he'll get a shot.

Volleyballers work year-round

By GREGG STENGEL
Sports Writer for The Cougar

Spring is not the time of year you would expect to see Ruth Nelson and her UH volleyball team competing in major tournaments. Nevertheless, the UH coach is the assistant women's national volleyball mentor guiding the Houston Stars, a team consisting of her UH team, and two high school standouts.

Many schools such as Texas Tech, play under the university's name in the spring, yet because the Stars have two high school performers on their team, it is illegal for them to be under the UH name.

Last year, Nelson and her Stars team gained an impressive fourth place finish in the United States Volleyball Association (USVBA) nationals.

This year's Stars team is considered even stronger by Nelson with the return of 10 players and eight new recruits. The leader of the Stars, Nelson, is really a story herself. Her UH teams have finished fourth, third and fifth nationally in the past five years.

Two former Nelson-coached Stars players are presently on the U.S. Women's Olympic training team in Colorado Spring, Colo. The two, Flo Hyman and Rita Crockett are two of the Olympic team's top players.

Nelson has added two new players that should make the 1979-80 outlook even brighter. Cindy Gregory, a member of the All-City Tournament team at Clear Lake High School was also chosen All-District between 1977-79.

"Bringing in a talented player like Cindy is really great," Nelson said. "She can jump over 31 inches which for a freshman is quite good."

The other recruiting prize is Patti Stone from Kellogg, Mich. "She is just an outstanding setter," Nelson said. "A setter is much like a quarterback in football setting up the plays.

"It's one of the positions we have always been weak in because we seem to have a lot of strikers," Nelson continued.

Stone was Kellogg College's most valuable player "and was one of the best players in the country" according to Nelson.

"She was named an All-American in 1977 as a freshman, and as a sophomore, she was their most valuable player. She is the key player I've signed in the past five years," Nelson said.

With the addition of these two talents, Nelson hopes the 12-month a year training will pay off. "All the players are getting great experience playing with the Stars. We have our AAU (Amateur Athletic Union) competition in Chicago the first of June, then we go to Dayton, Ohio for the USVBA nationals, then we train for the Junior Olympics for our players 19 and under. In essence, we play as many tournaments in the spring than during the fall," Nelson continued.

In last year's USVBA nationals, Darlene Meyer, Debbie Sokol and Rita Crockett were named all-rookie team out of the six players chosen from 40 teams. Crockett was chosen Rookie Player of the Year.

"There are a lot of people that don't realize we do so much work during the spring, we work out 7 hours a week, and unfortunately we don't get the recognition I think we deserve," Nelson says.

"We have already been to Texas A&M, San Antonio and Randolph Air Force Base among others this spring. But having our team together on the Stars will make our UH program that much better," Nelson said.

With the work and dedication Ruth Nelson has given to UH volleyball, her recognition is well deserved.

Clubhouse brawls increased in baseball

(AP) — Opera composers Gilbert and Sullivan offered some good advice when they suggested in song that it's best to "Let the punishment fit the crime."

You wonder if baseball was listening.

Management has come down hard on some of its employees early in this young season, inflicting a string of fines for various misdemeanors. You have to wonder, however, whether baseball's rulers have followed that operatic advice from "The Mikado."

First we have the case of Bill Lee, the Montreal left-hander who observes the world in a southpaw sort of way. Lee mentioned quite matter-of-factly during spring training that he has occasionally had a nodding acquaintance with that naughty substance called marijuana.

That disclosure rocked the very foundations of baseball and after careful investigation, Commissioner Bowie Kuhn decided that a $250 fine was appropriate. He ordered Lee to forward the funds, presumably American, not Canadian, to a suitable charity.

Lee, contrary to the very end, went the commissioner $1 better, sending a check for $251 to the St. Mary's Mission in Northern Alaska, which was the charity of the pitcher's choice. The tiny mission cares for Eskimos and Indians. "I hope this keeps them in moose meat," Lee observed.

One of Lee's teammates, outfielder Ellis Valentine, currently is in the middle of a three-day suspension for bumping substitute umpire Steve Fields during a discussion about one of the umpire's decisions in a game in Chicago last Saturday.

Besides the suspension, which will cost Valentine three days of his salary, National League President Chub Feeney also fined the player $500. From that, we can deduce that baseball feels it's twice as bad to bump an ump, even a substitute, as it is to fool with pot.

Then there is the matter of Ken Reitz, Keith Hernandez and Silvio Martinez, teammates with the St.

Louis Cardinals. Disturbed by a lengthy flight delay, the three players did what any sensible citizens would. They tore up the TWA waiting room at the St. Louis airport, inflicting something over $1,000 in damages.

For that little temper tantrum, they were fined an undisclosed amount by the ball club, presumably more than Lee and Valentine paid for their crimes. But then, tossing furniture and busting down sliding doors admittedly is more serious than jostling an umpire or using—don't say the word too loudly—marijuana.

The Cardinal and Expo cases were nothing compared to the blockbuster which the New York Yankees dealt reliever Rich Gossage and designated hitter Cliff Johnson. Both players have been asked to turn over 10 days pay—about $18,000 for Gossage and about $7,700 for Johnson—following a locker room fight.

The Yankees thus ruled that clubhouse shenanigans are more serious than the other violations, especially when your best relief pitcher winds up wearing a cast on his thumb and being sidelined for 6-8 weeks.

Because $18,000 and $7,700 isn't small change, Gossage and Johnson are almost certain to grieve their fines. And when they do, it will be up to the Yankees to make a case.

Why, the club most likely will be asked, was one player fined over $10,000 more than the other? Weren't they equally at fault?

The Yankees' explanation will be that the players are being fined equally—10 days pay apiece. But Gossage makes considerably more money per day than Johnson. Thus, a fine of 10 days pay costs him more because he can afford more.

But that logic doesn't really hold up. The fine for passing a red light is the same for every motorist. The traffic court isn't interested in ability to pay. Shouldn't the fine for two players also be the same?

There is another side to this whole matter. Maybe the Yankees shouldn't be fining anybody. Texas Rangers Vice President Eddie Robinson, defending his players' rule against allowing female reporters in the dressing room, this week pleaded with angry male writers to understand the club's position.

"We can't tell our players what they can do in the clubhouse," Robinson explained.

Does that include not tearing one another's thumb ligaments?

Top field, Cougar exes vie in $300,000 Houston Open

By GREGG STENGEL
Sports Writer for The Cougar

Houston has often been recognized as one of the top golfing areas in the country. The many successes coach Dave Williams and the UH golf team has contributed helped put the Houston area on the golfing map.

Professional golf has never generated the excitement in Houston as in other areas of the country. However, recently with many long hours of work by touring pros such as Doug Sanders, John Mahaffey and Bruce Devlin, Houston has become one of the best stops on the pro-tour.

This year's Houston Open at the Woodlands Country Club April 30-May 6, will draw one of the best fields ever for the event. The tourney's prize money has been upped to $300,000 with charities receiving the proceeds from the Open.

The week of golf will begin April 30th in the 12th annual Harold's Invitational Golf Tournament at Westwood Country Club. This year's tournament honors coach Bum Phillips and staff of the Houston Oilers.

As usual, Harold has lined up a great list of participants such as: Carl Mauck, Bum Phillips, Kenny Burrough, John Mahaffey, Tom Posten, Tommy Krammer and Mayor Jim McConn. All-World Earl Campbell will also be on hand. A 1979 Monte Carlo will be awarded for the first hole-in-one. The public is invited to watch at no charge.

The Houston Open will officially begin with the first round scheduled for Thursday, May 3. Houston Mayor Jim McConn has declared the week of April 30-May 6 as Houston Open week in Houston.

The Woodlands course, considered one of the finest maintained in the country, was unharmed.

considering the recent floods last week.

A celebrity Pro-Am will be held Wednesday May 2 with such notables as former President Gerald Ford, Dale Robertson, Frank Broyles, Larry Mahan, Evel Knievel, Charley Pride, Mickey Mantle, Kevin Dobson and James Garner.

The professionals already committed to the Open include: Miller Barber, Andy Bean, UH exes Keith Fergus, Ed Fiori, Bill Rodgers, John Mahaffey, Bobby Walzel and Bruce Leitzke. Defending champion Gary Player is committed along with Billy Casper, Tom Kite, Kermit Zarley and Arnold Palmer.

Tickets for the Pro-Am and the Houston Open are available at the Top Ticket locations, the Houston Golf Association Office and at the gate next week.

NBC will televise the third round on Saturday from 4 to 5 p.m. and the final round on Sunday from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m.

Student is abducted, robbed by armed man in parking lot

The UH police report that a UH student was the victim of an aggravated robbery Tuesday afternoon in Parking Lot 4B.

The student was uninjured in the incident, according to Jay Evans, UH police captain.

The student told UH police she was walking to her car when an unidentified black male approached her from behind and told her to get into her car. The student said the suspect had a gun.

According to the police, the suspect told the victim to drive along Elgin Street, then to the 3900 block of Drew Street.

The student reported that at this time the suspect cleared out the inside of the car, and took her jewlery and $8 cash. The student estimated her total loss at $340.

Evans said the suspect than reportedly left the scene.

The victim described the suspect as 24- to 28-years-old, and wearing a green shirt, blue jeans, dress shoes and a leather beret.

The UH police have no suspects at this time, but are continuing the investigation.
