GOOD MORNING! IT'S THURSDAY, MARCH 30, 1978

PLEASE RECYCLE THIS PAPER

HOUSTON, TEXAS

VOL. 44, NO. 97

Be prepared

Anxious faces line the Harris County Courthouse in downtown Houston. With the deadline for license tag renewal April 1, and approaching quickly, each day's passing is sure to bring more of the same. The courthouse is one of the few places which will be selling tags on Saturday.

Faculty shows financial data

By JAN RICH
Asst. News Editor

Dr. Donald Lutz, Faculty Senate chair, delivered to UH Board of Regents members a list of documents the faculty has gathered or has seen dealing with the investigation into university short-term investments.

Last Friday, Lutz hand-delivered these lists to regents Leonard Rauch, Mack Hanna and Willie Wells, who are investigating the Task Force 8 report. The Task Force 8 report is a critical analysis of UH finances compiled two years ago. Lutz also delivered copies of the list to regent chair Aaron J. Farfel and regent attorney Herbert

"The investigative committee of the board asked to see what information we had so that they would know which questions the faculty had that needed to be answered, and also to make sure that they had all the documents and information we had," Lutz said Wednesday.

By providing this information to regents they would be aware of what kinds of questions should be answered to the faculty, Lutz said.

Lutz also met recently with Farfel and Rauch to discuss the regents' financial investigation and the faculty's role in that investigation. He was told that the regents were emphatically opposed to including anyone other than the regents in its closed, executive session next Monday. Lutz had previously asked the regents to include a faculty member in the meeting when the committee investigating Task Force 8 makes its report to the full board. At that time Lutz said a senate member should be included "even if that report is made in a session closed to the general public."

However, when Lutz met with Farfel and Rauch, he was told the matters discussed in the regents' executive session should be confidential because they could bear on future litigation.

Lutz said he was told at that meeting the regents will, however, respond after the April 3 board meeting to any faculty questions concerning the conclusions the regents report in regard to the financial investigation.

"We are at a point now where the cloud of suspicion surrounding the investigation must be cleared up quickly and completely," Lutz said.

Biker's race noon Friday

Bikers, unite! Sigma Nu fraternity is sponsoring their 13th annual Little 500 Bike Race at noon Friday.

Teams of four will compete on a circular track cordoned off in front of the UC. Each team will be charged a $10 entry fee.

Tickets to the Astros' home games and trophies will be awarded to the winning team. Participants will be able to sign up the day of the race.

Chris Reinhardt, race coordinator, said the contestants may attend a TGIF party at the Sigma Nu house following the race. Local television stations have been notified of the race and coverage is possible, he said.

University Security officers will block off the two parking lots on either side of the Ezekiel Cullen Building until 3:30 p.m. Friday. For further information call 749-1529.

New buses, routes

HouTran plans for updated system

By MARK LANGFORD
Staff Writer

Houston's mass transit system, HouTran, plans to make 1978 a banner year for public transportation by implementing several new projects they hope will improve and expand the city bus system.

The most important of these projects is the acquisition of 151 new buses. Jim Towns, coordinator for the Transportation Advisory Group (TAG), a long range planning group, said 50 of the new buses are already moving and the others will be on the streets in the next few weeks. The additions will bring the bus fleet to 508 buses after 50 older buses are retired.

Each new bus will cost about $86,000, Towns said.

With their expanded fleet, HouTran will offer more service on already existing bus lines and will begin new lines in areas now without service, according to Towns.

These new routes will provide service to the Wallisville, Gulf Freeway, Almeda, Fondren and Antoine areas. New crosstown service will carry riders to the Texas Medical Center, Third Ward and UH from the Bellaire and Braeswood areas.

Other projects designed to speed up the bus system will be implemented soon. One such project is the bus-actuated signal pre-emption system.

With this system, city buses will be equipped with an electronic device that will emit optical or radio signals. These signals will be detected at specific intersections and cause the traffic light to remain or change to green, as soon as possible, until the bus passes.

This system will substantially reduce the delay at traffic signals, Towns said. Once the bus passes, the system makes gradual adjustments to restore the normal signal pattern. A demonstration project for this system will soon be routed along Westheimer from Fountainview to Post Oak, on Post Oak to Richmond, and on Richmond to Montrose.

Another project designed to speed up buses is a nine-and-one-half mile contra-flow lane on the North Freeway. With this system, Towns said, a bus lane will be provided on the side of the freeway opposite the direction of the rush hour traffic. During the afternoon rush hour, for instance, there will be a northbound bus lane on the southbound side of the North Freeway. For the morning rush, a southbound bus lane will be on the northbound side of the freeway.

Besides these measures, efforts are also being made to enhance access to the bus system. The variety of bus stop signs now in use will be replaced with new signs with a "clear, uniform look," Towns said. New information outlets about the bus system will soon open and later in the year bus shelters will begin to appear, he said.

Another HouTran project, the CarShare program, is not working as well as expected, Towns said, adding, "It is still the best system of its kind in America." The CarShare program will improve when a new computer system is installed in the CarShare office. The new computer will match potential carpoolers in just one day instead of the 10 days it now takes.

Persons interested in mass transit are invited to attend the next meeting of TAG at 7:30 p.m. April 13 in the Houston City Council Chambers.

Com school opens new TV facilities

By PATRICIA S. FUHRER
Staff Writer

UH School of Communication's new $400,000 television studio, which will begin production next week, opened its doors Tuesday.

Jack D. Richardson, chief engineer, conducted tours for students in production, direction and studio operations classes.

Businessmen also toured the studio which expects to add an additional $100,000 worth of cameras, tape recorders and editing equipment as funds become available, Richardson said. Donations from individuals or foundations are welcome, he said, adding that he also hopes to have additional university funds.

Students will be able to participate in non-university projects, video-taping them as class projects, and thus, earn money for the department.

Broadcasts from the UH studio can be arranged through local television stations, including KUHT (Channel 8), Richardson said.

"We hope to have outside sources of income," Richardson said. "Other production houses get $150 to $2,000 per hour depending on the equipment used. We can do things no one else can do in the area of special effects and program switching."

During Tuesday's tour, students took turns using cameras in the studio and experimenting with picture composition and special effects in the control room.

UH's television studio is not an actual television station because it lacks an FCC license for a transmitter, Richardson said.

"We don't have a transmitter because Channel 8 has the university license."

SA senator files complaint

A Students' Association senator filed a complaint with Student Court Tuesday concerning the appointment of Yocel Alonso to the Student Service Fee Planning and Allocation committee.

SA Sen. Bonnie James said she submitted her written complaint to Chief Justice Butch Cersonsky. The Student Senate could not legally approve Alonso's appointment to the committee because there was not a quorum present at the time the vote was taken Monday night, James said.

"Seeing that there would not be a quorum present when the vote was taken, I personally asked Senate Speaker Vic Quintanilla for a quorum count, and the motion was seconded," James said in her complaint. "But he refused to recognize my motion."

Quintanilla said Tuesday he was not obliged to conduct a quorum count under parliamentary procedure.

James said, however, that once a quorum is questioned, no official action can be taken until it is officially resolved that a quorum is present. James said she consulted parliamentary experts in the speech department and the unabridged Roberts' Rules of Order.

Cersonsky was out of the city Wednesday and unavailable for comment.

Carter's Civil Service reform needed

Earlier this month, President Carter sent a package of Civil Service reforms to Congress. The president's proposals strike at the heart of the federal bureaucracy, calling for changes in hiring, promoting and firing of federal employees.

The old comic strip character Pogo probably best summed up Carter's dilemma: "We have met the enemy, and he is us." It's a case of Carter siccing the government on itself, telling it to get tough with itself. No one is questioning whether this is necessary, but presidents since Franklin D. Roosevelt have made valiant attempts at cutting down the bureaucracy, and have failed.

Currently, a supervisor for a federal agency can transfer or promote an employee much easier than firing him. The alleged "merit system" for bonuses has become little more than a gauge of a federal employee's longevity. As a result, the federal government can easily take in new people, transfer and promote them, raise their pay after they've been around for a while, and will not get rid of the dregs. All of this is done with no regard to the competency of the individual employee.

As Carter put it, "You cannot run a farm that way, you cannot run a factory that way, and you certainly cannot run a government that way. We have lost sight of the original purpose which was to reward merit. More than 90 percent of all federal employees get a so called 'merit' rating, and last year out of about 2 million employees, only 226 lost their jobs for incompetence or inefficiency."

Carter's plan also calls for splitting the Civil Service Commission into two smaller agencies: one to help the president manage the mammoth federal work force, and another to deal with matters of employee merit. This second body would also act as a quick appeals board for fired employees, and would deal with employee grievances. Hiring of new employees would be taken out of the hands of the Civil Service Commission and given to each individual agency.

The aim of the plan is simple—get federal employees competing against each other for bonuses, each trying to out-do the next person's public service record. It's a return to the old Puritan idea of individual hard work and individual benefits. But can Carter swing the federal monster back to that ideal?

If it indeed can be done, now is the time to try. The federal government affects our everyday lives much more than it did in any previous generation. More regulations are being written by people no one ever heard of or which touches them, and more people want it made efficient.

editorial

Carter was elected on a campaign of making government more effective. He has already taken small, token efforts toward this by cutting back on the size of the presidential staff, combining or eliminating a few agencies and demanding that federal regulations be written in plain English instead of bureaucratic jargon. But the president's newest package represents sweeping changes in a system entrenched in 45 years of self-perpetuating sluggishness. It will be tough to change, and Carter's staff realizes this.

Washington Post writer Haynes Johnson analyzed the situation accurately: "What we are now seeing is a political struggle, not new but certainly intensifying, over how to make Washington both less obtrusive and more effective. It's one of the biggest, and most critical, battles of our times, and not only for Carter and his administration."

Make politicians aid miners

To the Editor:

Do we never learn that "politics make strange bedfellows?" Members of the most diverse leanings, political systems, can and often do find common cause in a worker vs. profiteer situation. The shame is that, while proclaiming the rights of the working citizen, still they want that citizen to hear nothing but what they themselves want heard. Resorting to violence in this case has done nothing constructive—those who once believed that the mine workers had a right to safe working conditions still do, and vice versa.

Though all American workers have the same dream of security and safety, and should recognize the need for turning out a fine product or service for a reasonable wage, I fear that the powers unseen will maneuver us into the position of the passengers in the de Maupassant story, "Ball of Fat." They were perfectly willing to sell out the generous (though carnally inclined) Elizabeth to save their own comfort and pious respectability, and in turn for her efforts, they gave her the cold shoulder and were unwilling to share any benefits with her.

Will we, to save our comfort, sacrifice the efforts of the miners—and, by the way, the farmers—or will we take the opportunity, the foundation they are laying, and make a concerted effort at last for the goal of a reasonably safe and secure livelihood for all? We may not be able to get directly at the owners of the mines and the industries which pay—and give benefits—as little as they think they can get away with, while they prosper in their high-priced homes and spas here and abroad, but we sure can get at the politicians who play their game, not ours. Vote! Vote!

To the Editor:

On reselling some of my last semester's books to the University Bookstore, I was alarmed to find the way that students are taken advantage of. The books were only three months old and were in new condition, but for most of them I received less than 10 percent of the original price.

In the bookstore, used books sell for around three-fourths of their new price.

This hurts two people: the student selling the books and the student buying over-priced used books. In the former case it is hardly worthwhile selling the books at all. In the latter case the student has the cost of buying books reduced by only a very small proportion considering that only new books are available.

I had thought that this reselling system was intended to aid students. Now I see it is only a method for taking advantage of the students' situation.

Story took cheap shot

By DAYLE PUGH

A rather curious item appeared in the Cougar on March 9. It was a report by Jan Rich on a "recent" talk given by a local attorney, Richard "Racehorse" Haynes, to an audience consisting almost entirely of law students in Max Krost Hall. The reason this is curious is that the talk took place on Feb. 6 as was reported and described by the Cougar on Feb. 7. Given the nature of the second article and the fact that it was published more than a month after the talk, one must wonder: Was this double reporting responsible journalism, or was it just a cheap shot at law students?

Ms. Rich in her tardy report implies that law students stand in awe of "one of their profession's top money-makers" in the person of Mr. Haynes, and that they wish to emulate him down to his conservative suit and "Texas drawl." Well, Jan, you couldn't be more wrong. Mr. Haynes is a successful criminal lawyer and we respect him for that just as you must respect successful journalists, but we are not blind. We have our own values.

But, of course, discrediting lawyers as money hungry and unethical is old hat, so Ms. Rich includes another theme. She calls law a "male-dominated profession" and she is quite right. The current situation in law, like other professions, is regrettable, but because of the efforts of many progressive women and men this is at long last changing. At the UH law school sex is not considered in determining admissions, and this year's entering class was approximately 40 percent women. Not very long ago, the national average was about 2 percent; we have come a long way.

commentary

Nonetheless, Ms. Rich refers to the "few women scattered throughout the lecture hall" and leaves the impression that Mr. Haynes made a condescending and sexist remark toward those women which "received a thunderous laugh from the dozens of men in the room." Come on Jan, what gives? There were many women there, the remark concerned dealing with sexist attitudes and belittled such attitudes, and the talk wasn't even in the lecture hall, it was in the lobby.

We law students are far from perfect, but I for one highly resent this misleading and cheap journalism. The law school is as rich in diversity of attitudes as any other educational institution, and those of us who attended the Haynes lecture were equally diverse.

I encourage Ms. Rich to look beyond her preconceived notions in her journalistic endeavors; she might be surprised at what she finds.

Editor's note: Pugh is a student at Bates College of Law.

new Summary

From the Associated Press

JERUSALEM—Prime Minister Menachem Begin told the Israeli parliament Wednesday that the United States wants Israeli forces to stay on the West Bank of the Jordan River after an Arab-Israeli peace agreement.

BRASILIA, Brazil—On the second stop of his four-nation tour, President Carter spoke Wednesday on human rights and nuclear nonproliferation, two touchy subjects between the United States and Brazil's military government. Controversies over Brazil's human rights policies and its move toward nuclear power have chilled relations recently between the two long-time allies.

SAN ANTONIO—An unidentified man fell about 600 feet to his death from the observation deck of San Antonio's Tower of the Americas shortly before noon Wednesday, police said. Officers said the death apparently was a suicide, the third since the downtown tower opened during HemisFair here in 1968.

HOUSTON—U.S. District Judge John V. Singleton Jr. granted immunity Wednesday in exchange for the testimony of police officer John Thomas Olin, 27, before a federal grand jury investigating the shooting death of a Louisiana youth by police.

University heads to confer at Clear Lake City meeting

Administrators and educators, including UH System President Philip G. Hoffman, will meet for a three-day conference April 12 through 14 at the UH Clear Lake City Campus.

Heads of the nation's upper level universities will gather to look at the prospective and current status of educational institutions.

Judge Harold Crosby, president of Florida International University; Dr. Robert Spencer, president emeritus of Sangamon State University; Dr. Glenwood Creech, president of Florida Atlantic University; Dr. Fred Taylor, president of the College of the Mainland; and Bryce Jordan, president of the University of Texas at Dallas will address the conference.

The conference will open at 4:30 p.m. at the Sheraton Kings Inn on NASA I. The proceedings of the UH/CLC meetings will be published by the American Association of State Colleges and Universities.

Deadline approaching for Jackrabbit Rally

Rejoice all self-proclaimed mercenaries, adventurers and daredevils, because a modern day pony express-style race is coming April 15 and 16.

Although competitors in the first Texas Jackrabbit Rally (TJR) need not fear Apaches, they will have to dodge the Texas Highway Patrol as they traverse the roads between Houston and El Paso.

The person who successfully maneuvers his or her four-wheel vehicle from Houston to an El Paso checkpoint and back within the 42-hour time limit will receive $1,000.

Entry fee is $25 per vehicle and the deadline for applications is April 1.

All entrants must be 18 years of age by April 15 and be attending a Texas university, college or junior college.

Connie Wallace, UH assistant dean of students and fraternity advisor, said she likes the idea because it promotes friendly competition, but offers a word of warning.

"I would encourage any individual to think twice about entering the competition—they are facing quite a risk." Accidents, speeding tickets and resulting insurance rates are the major deterrents.

Entrance forms and further information may be obtained from Tom Delaganis at 748-0530. TJR is sponsored by Phi Kappa Theta fraternity and Tuborg Beer.

Navigation teams take two places

The UH Orienteering teams took two places in the Class A cross-country navigation meet March 18 and 19 at Southern Arkansas University in Magnolia.

The Red Team, consisting of Captain T. Wier, Richard Rodriguez and Paul Gonzales, placed third in the 5,700 meter course.

The Orange Team of Edward Duranczyk, Joaquin Perez, Donald Schrock and Victoria Price placed fourth on the 3,500 meter course.

Duranczyk took first place in the men's category, and Price took first in the women's category.

Orienteering teams navigate an unmarked route through the woods with only a map and compass. The teams must find road marks in sequence to verify they were there.

About 300 competitors from 32 universities, schools and clubs from 15 states participated in the two-day meet.

The Red and Orange teams will compete in the third ROTC Regent Championship April 22 and 23 in Manhattan, Kan.

Summer program

Two fields opening for deaf

This summer, UH will conduct a freshman-year program for 30 hearing-impaired high school graduates to explore the science and engineering fields.

Science and Engineering Orientation Program for the Hearing Impaired (SEOPHI), funded by a $50,000 National Science Foundation grant, is the only program of its kind in the Southwest. It will consist of eight weeks of pre-engineering summer orientation beginning May 30. Participating students will begin the fall semester on a one-to-one basis of instruction and self-paced study units.

Industrial job placement during the spring semester will allow the students to obtain financial assistance and gain practical experience.

"Hard-of-hearing or deaf students traditionally have not pursued science or engineering degrees," Dr. Manjula Waldron, assistant professor of electrical engineering and co-director of the program, said.

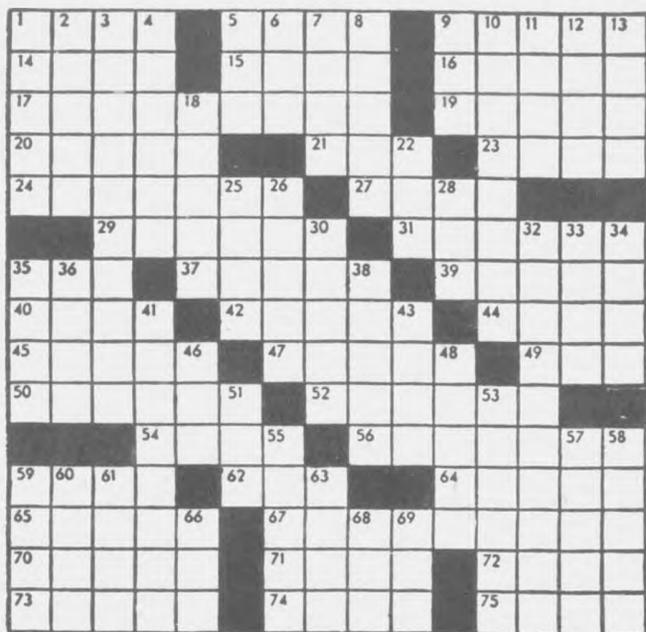

"SEOPHI, which was designed by UH faculty members, is not a success-failure program, but rather a research orientation program. We want these 30 students to realize that they aren't restricted to the traditional liberal arts fields," Waldron said.

Applicants should show a potential in math and science and must meet the UH entrance requirements. Deadline for fall enrollment is April 15.

Directors of the program plan to set up a buddy system for the students to help them get around campus and adjust to college life. Students who know, or would like to learn, sign language should contact Waldron at 749-4531 or Joe Henson at 749-2396.

UHS says 5 assaults may be related

Five women have been assaulted and robbed on the west and southwest side of campus since Feb. 1. University Security believes the incidents were probably committed by the same man.

UHS received complaints on Feb. 1, March 6, 13, 17 and 27 from five women who were assaulted and robbed while going to their cars, in their cars, or leaving their cars. The suspect could conceivably be the same person, according to UHS Investigator Leonard Horton.

The suspect has been described as a dark black male, with a trim build, in his early 20s. Witnesses said he is between 5 feet 10 inches and 5 feet 11 inches tall and weighs 145 pounds. He has smooth features, a short afro and was described as a "neat dresser."

The suspect sometimes carries a small caliber pistol, according to Horton.

Horton and his partner, investigator Ronald Turner, are currently working on the case.

Convicted officers relieved

(AP)—Three former Houston policemen, after being sentenced to one year in prison for the civil rights violations of Joe Campos Torres, spent the night with their families, refusing interviews, and, according to their attorneys, apparently relieved by the outcome.

The former policemen, all with outstanding prior records, were ordered to serve one year in a federal prison on a misdemeanor civil rights charge, and given a 10-year suspended sentence on a felony count.

U.S. District Court Judge Ross Sterling, in announcing his sentences, said, "This was a situational offense which we will never encounter again. A long period of confinement will have little effect on the Houston police department, where I think the real problem lies."

The sentences were handed down against Terry W. Denson, 27, Stephen Orlando, 22, and Joseph Janish, 22.

The case arose in May 1977 when Torres, a 23-year-old Mexican-American laborer, former member of the Army Ranger unit and self-styled karate expert, was arrested during a disturbance at a Houston tavern.

Three days later, the body of Torres, clad in Army fatigues and heavy combat boots, was found jammed against some of the debris that drifts down the muddy water of Buffalo Bayou that flows through a section of downtown Houston.

Medical examiners said Torres drowned.

Bob Bennett, defense attorney for Denson, told the Associated Press, "He just doesn't want to be interviewed now. He has been under a hell of a strain.

"I guess the sentence by the judge today was like a patient where the doctor told him he didn't have cancer, but did need a major operation.

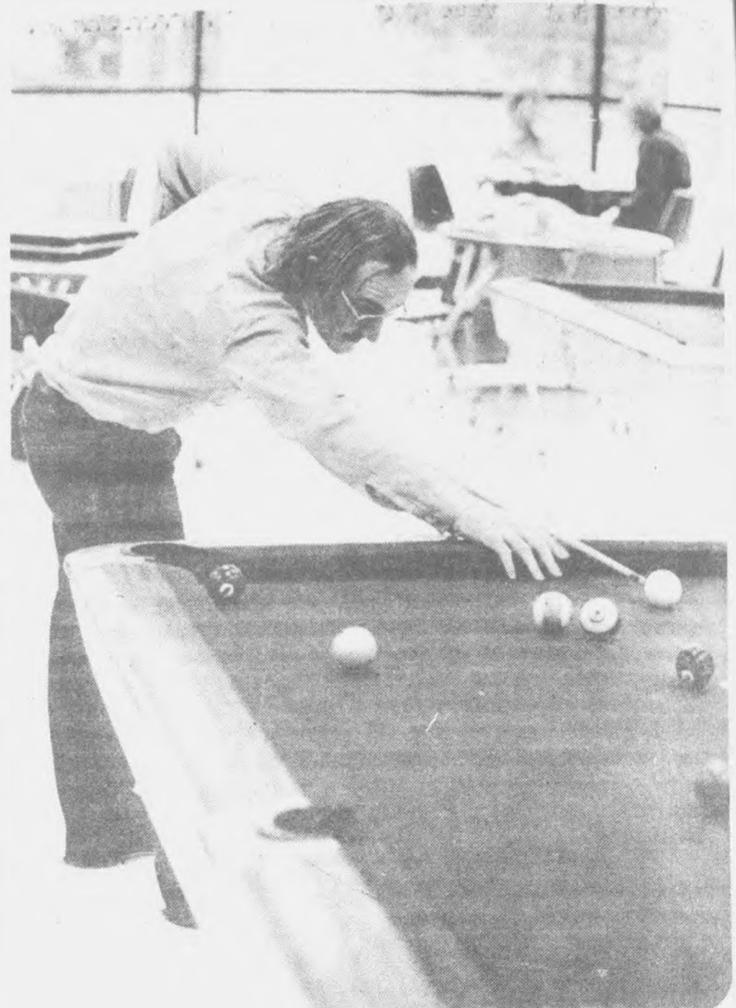

"I will tell you that Terry Denson has insisted throughout he had nothing to do with the death of Joe Campos Torres. I believed him. And two juries have believed him. This was a case where some guys had a slight lapse of judgment with some tragic circumstances and in no way was a case of police brutality," Bennett said.

UH, Strasbourg trade

The president of the University of Strasbourg, H.N. Trocme, is visiting the French department to negotiate an expansion of the Strasbourg program to include a formal exchange of faculty and students between UH and the French university.

The existing program allows UH students to attend the University of Strasbourg, located on the Rhine River in southeast France. The 16th century university, one of France's most important colleges, has an enrollment of approximately 20,000 students.

Presently, upperclassmen with a 2.5 or better average and two years of college French are eligible for the program. A fee of $2,700 covers tuition, housing, social activities and program excursions. Also included in the fee is a one-week tour of Paris.

The curricula includes 300- and 400- level courses in French and other languages, literature, civilization, political science, philosophy, history, art history, music and theater. Students earn 36 hours credit for the five-week orientation period and academic year from September to mid-June.

The application deadline for next year's program is April 1. Interested students should go by the French department, Room 405, Arnold Hall, or call 749-4810.

NASA director to speak

Dr. Christopher C. Kraft, director of the Lyndon B. Johnson Space Center, will speak on the space shuttle program at 8:30 p.m. April 14 at the University of Houston Clear Lake City Campus.

Kraft has been involved with NASA since 1958 when he was elected to the space task group assigned to Project Mercury. He was also flight director for the Gemini missions and directed the design and implementation of the Mission Control Center in Houston.

The free lecture is open to the public. For further information call 488-9288.

New Castaneda falls short of prior work

By JOHN ATKINSON
Arts and Amusements Editor

THE SECOND RING OF POWER
Carlos Castaneda
Simon and Schuster, 316 pages.

The intrepid Carlos Castaneda has returned once again from his continuing saga along the path of becoming a Yaqui Indian sorcerer, or brujo. "The Second Ring of Power" sees the ever-curious Mr. C entwined in a series of subtly constructed, yet truly mystical activities.

I had the great fortune to hear the imminent sociologist on Pacifica a few years ago, and he stated very flatly that all of the adventures chronicled in his series concerning his "sorcerer's apprenticeship" are true. So if you really buy everything the man has encountered and experienced throughout the last four best-selling books, this book may be your next in an instructive series of monographs about a new-found religious persuasion; or merely a journal of extraordinary experiences told through the eyes of a wild-eyed graduate student, getting caught up in something he never bargained for.

In the other four books, ("The Teachings of Don Juan: A Yaqui Way of Knowledge;" "A Separate Reality: Further Conversations with Don Juan;" "Journey to Ixtlan: The Lessons of Don Juan;" and "Tales of Power," Castaneda has traveled much ground since the early days of walking in the marketplaces of small Mexican towns in search of a Yaqui brujo, a man of power, finding Don Juan (or being found by him), beginning a regime of spartan life, and the frequent ingesting of what he chooses to call psychotropic plants, such as peyote and jimson weed.

If you are now thinking, "Perhaps this fellow blew out all his synapses with psychedelic glutony," try to rescind that stance and take the leap of faith which the author asks us to take: two states of mind exist.

The tonal and the nagual are roughly equivalent to the difference between the dream state and the waking state, save that instead of being two mutually exclusive states which never overlap except when interrupted by waking during the dream state, the person in control of his nagual, or dreaming self, could essentially split into two entities. This sounds pretty much like astral projection.

Castaneda does not label it in that way, but perhaps a bit of labeling might not hurt his cause. Castaneda's experiences in "Second Ring" seem like jousting matches with large doses of ego thrown in. How the author derives power or instruction from the constant push-pull of his relation to the book's other characters is perhaps too esoteric for the author to dissect.

Castaneda initially turns up in the countryside around Sonora while attempting to locate two other apprentices, Pablito and Nestor, whom he had jumped into an "abyss" with at the end of "Tales of Power." Instead, he finds Dona Soledad, Pablito's mother, who first tries seducing the author with "her robust breasts," then attempts to physically force Castaneda into acquiescence.

The author undergoes similar "tests" administered by four of Don Juan's other apprentices: Lidia, Josefina, Rosa and La Gorda. These are the characters with whom Castaneda experiences the most action, and as they are all sorcerers, the actions are of an extraordinary nature.

Each of the group seems to serve a particular function for Castaneda. The best manner I can briefly come up with in capsuling all of this complicated dogma is that there are chinks in the apprentice's "armor," and that the trials which Castaneda endures strengthen him.

Chances are that if Castaneda is appealing to you, the books already sit on your shelf. But if some adventurous reader yearns to explore the mysterious world of Yaqui sorcery as chronicled by Mr. C., this simply is not the best of books to begin with.

'Object' person and art of Luis

By H.N. GRAHAM

THAT OBSCURE OBJECT OF DESIRE
Director: Luis Bunuel; writers: Luis Bunuel and Jean-Claude Carriere, based on the novel "La Femme et Le Pantin" by Pierre Louys; producer: Serge Silberman; A First Artists Release; exclusively at the Greenway 3.

The plot is very simple. Mathieu (Fernando Rey, a rich middle-aged French businessman), meets and becomes romantically and sexually attracted to Conchita. Conchita, although claiming to love him, refuses to make love with him on the grounds that if she allows him to take her virginity he will no longer love her.

"That Obscure Object Of Desire" may well be Luis Bunuel's masterpiece. The film is hilarious, daring and icy. The laughter the film draws is a bit uneasy, as you can recognize parts of yourself in either one of the two characters.

Conchita is played by two actresses, with a voice by a third, Carole Bouquet, Angela Molina and Jeanne Bertheau. It

LONE WOLF

Michael Murphey's new album, Lone Wolf, is quite different from most of his earlier albums. It's still Michael Murphey all right, but he seems to have lost some of his "joie de vivre" along the way.

The lyrics especially reflect this loss. In one song, "Nothing Is Your Own," that phrase is repeated constantly throughout the song, with the addition of "Except Your Life" in the last line. The entire album circles around this theme with repetitive refrains, melancholy titles and generally pessimistic lyrics. Some examples of his titles are "No Man's Land," "Loners," "Arrows in the Darkness," and "Hard to Live Together."

Some of the titles are a bit misleading. In a cut entitled "Paradise Tonight," Murphey sings,

*When I feel the fading light
It's good-bye and God speed her*

Murphey

Tonight I won't need her I'll be in paradise tonight.

Murphey goes on to say that the next morning his head will be reeling, but that he would be doing things his "own way."

Some of the tunes are very pleasant, and as usual, the words are well put together. The album itself is worthwhile, but for heaven's sake, don't listen to it when you are already depressed.

was a risky way to do things—Bouquet is slim and delicate, while Molina is full figured and sensual—but by using the two quite arbitrarily, sometimes with one actress starting the scene and the other one finishing, and by having Mathieu never notice the difference between the two, it ends up making the point that after the desire overcomes Mathieu, the object of that desire, Conchita, does indeed become obscure. And what seemed at first a terribly heavy-handed way of emphasizing the changeability of Conchita, it works remarkably well, and even seems subtle under Bunuel's steady hand.

The real world keeps erupting into the world of this film, with various acts of terrorism and violence. It serves as a sort of punctuation device, and though the incidents are happening all around Conchita and Mathieu, they are never noticed by them. At the end, the two are engulfed by one last great explosion. It's like the period at the end of a long paragraph.

Bunuel, at 77, has made films for 50 years now, and all of his works stand out for the originality, clarity and honesty of his view of life. But "That Obscure Object Of Desire" has the rare feeling that this time the filmmaker has transcended even his own limits. The result is a film so rich in meanings and implications, that any written description will seem very pale when compared to the film itself.

'Fury' only manages 'B' status

By H.N. GRAHAM
Arts and Amusements Writer

THE FURY

Director: Brian DePalma; writer: John Farris, based on his novel; producer: Frank Yablans; A Twentieth Century-Fox Film release.

The best way to enjoy "The Fury" is to totally turn your mind off. The screenplay is so full of holes it is ready to sink, and there is no emotional identification with any of the characters that would put a point to the sufferings they go through.

What the film does have is a crazy, demonic energy behind it, mostly the results of Brian DePalma directing the film. It is possibly a misplaced energy, but DePalma makes the film not only bearable, but curiously affecting.

Recognizing the sheer stupidity of the plot, DePalma just pumps in sequence after sequence meant to be viewed, and not heard. The film's opening sequence, an Israeli terrorist raid on a sunny Arabian beach, starts the suspense narrative rolling along, and DePalma keeps it moving for the next two hours. It was a good way to do it, for if he had slowed down a minute, the holes in the plot would have stood out like craters on the moon.

The plot is about Peter Sandza

(Kirk Douglas), who worked for a secret government agency headed by John Cassavetes, until Sandza's son was kidnapped by that agency because his son had all sorts of telekinetic powers that Cassavetes thought would make a nifty international weapon.

So Sandza is trying to track down his son, with the aid of his lover Hester (Carrie Snodgrass), and another telekinetic youngster, Gillian (Amy Irving), while Cassavetes is going around conducting illegal surveillances, trying to track Sandza down, trying to corrupt Robin Sandza (Andrew Stevens) and otherwise make the world safe for democracy.

As I said, the plot is stupid.

The ending is pure DePalma, with everyone becoming dead, abused or corrupted. The energy thrown into the film is enormous—it just shoots along through sequence after sequence: the Israeli terrorist raid gives way to the chase of Sandza through the back alleys of Chicago, which gives way to the ending sequence with death and dismemberment being dished out every which way.

The photography, by Richard Kline, is incandescent. He makes the frame shimmer as if it is being illuminated by neon bulbs.

The score, by John Williams, is his best yet, wonderfully subtle and far reaching at the same time.

The acting is uniformly fine, with Kirk Douglas throwing himself into his role in a way he hasn't done in 10 years. Irving and Stevens look suitably photogenic as the pair of kids with powers. And Cassavetes is the perfect villain in his black suit, black gloves and dead left arm in a black sling. If someone wanted to do "The Lucifer Story," Cassavetes would be perfect for the part. The man has the presence on the screen of John Wayne, but it is a totally evil, though joyfully so, presence.

Carrie Snodgrass, absent from films since her big hit with "Diary of a Mad Housewife," is back doing her usual good work. You keep wishing she wasn't just in a supporting role.

The film is actually nothing more than a superior B-movie, enjoyable if you can only remember that it doesn't totally make sense and doesn't want to. As for DePalma, somebody give the man a good script.

originality of Walt Disney are legendary, and the consistency of instantly forgettable movies produced since his death by the studio he founded may come to rival that legend.

The plot has Christopher Lee and Betty Davis kidnapping one of the supernaturally powered children from the previous Disney feature "Escape from Witch Mountain," and various good people joining in to serve them their comeuppance.

It's not as bad as it could be, but it isn't good, either. The Disney Studios have gotten out of the film business. Nowadays they produce a marketable product in a given length of time—one release for Easter, one for summer, one for Christmas.

If you settle for mediocre films that offer no surprises and go nowhere, this is for you.

Fellow Beer Persons,

Have you ever thought of becoming a Dean of Beer like me, Siglinda Steinfüller? It may be easier than you think. Just answer these two easy questions:

1. Have you found that if you don't have pizza once a week, you lose your appreciation for Italian art?
2. If you don't have time to party, does studying clog your brain?

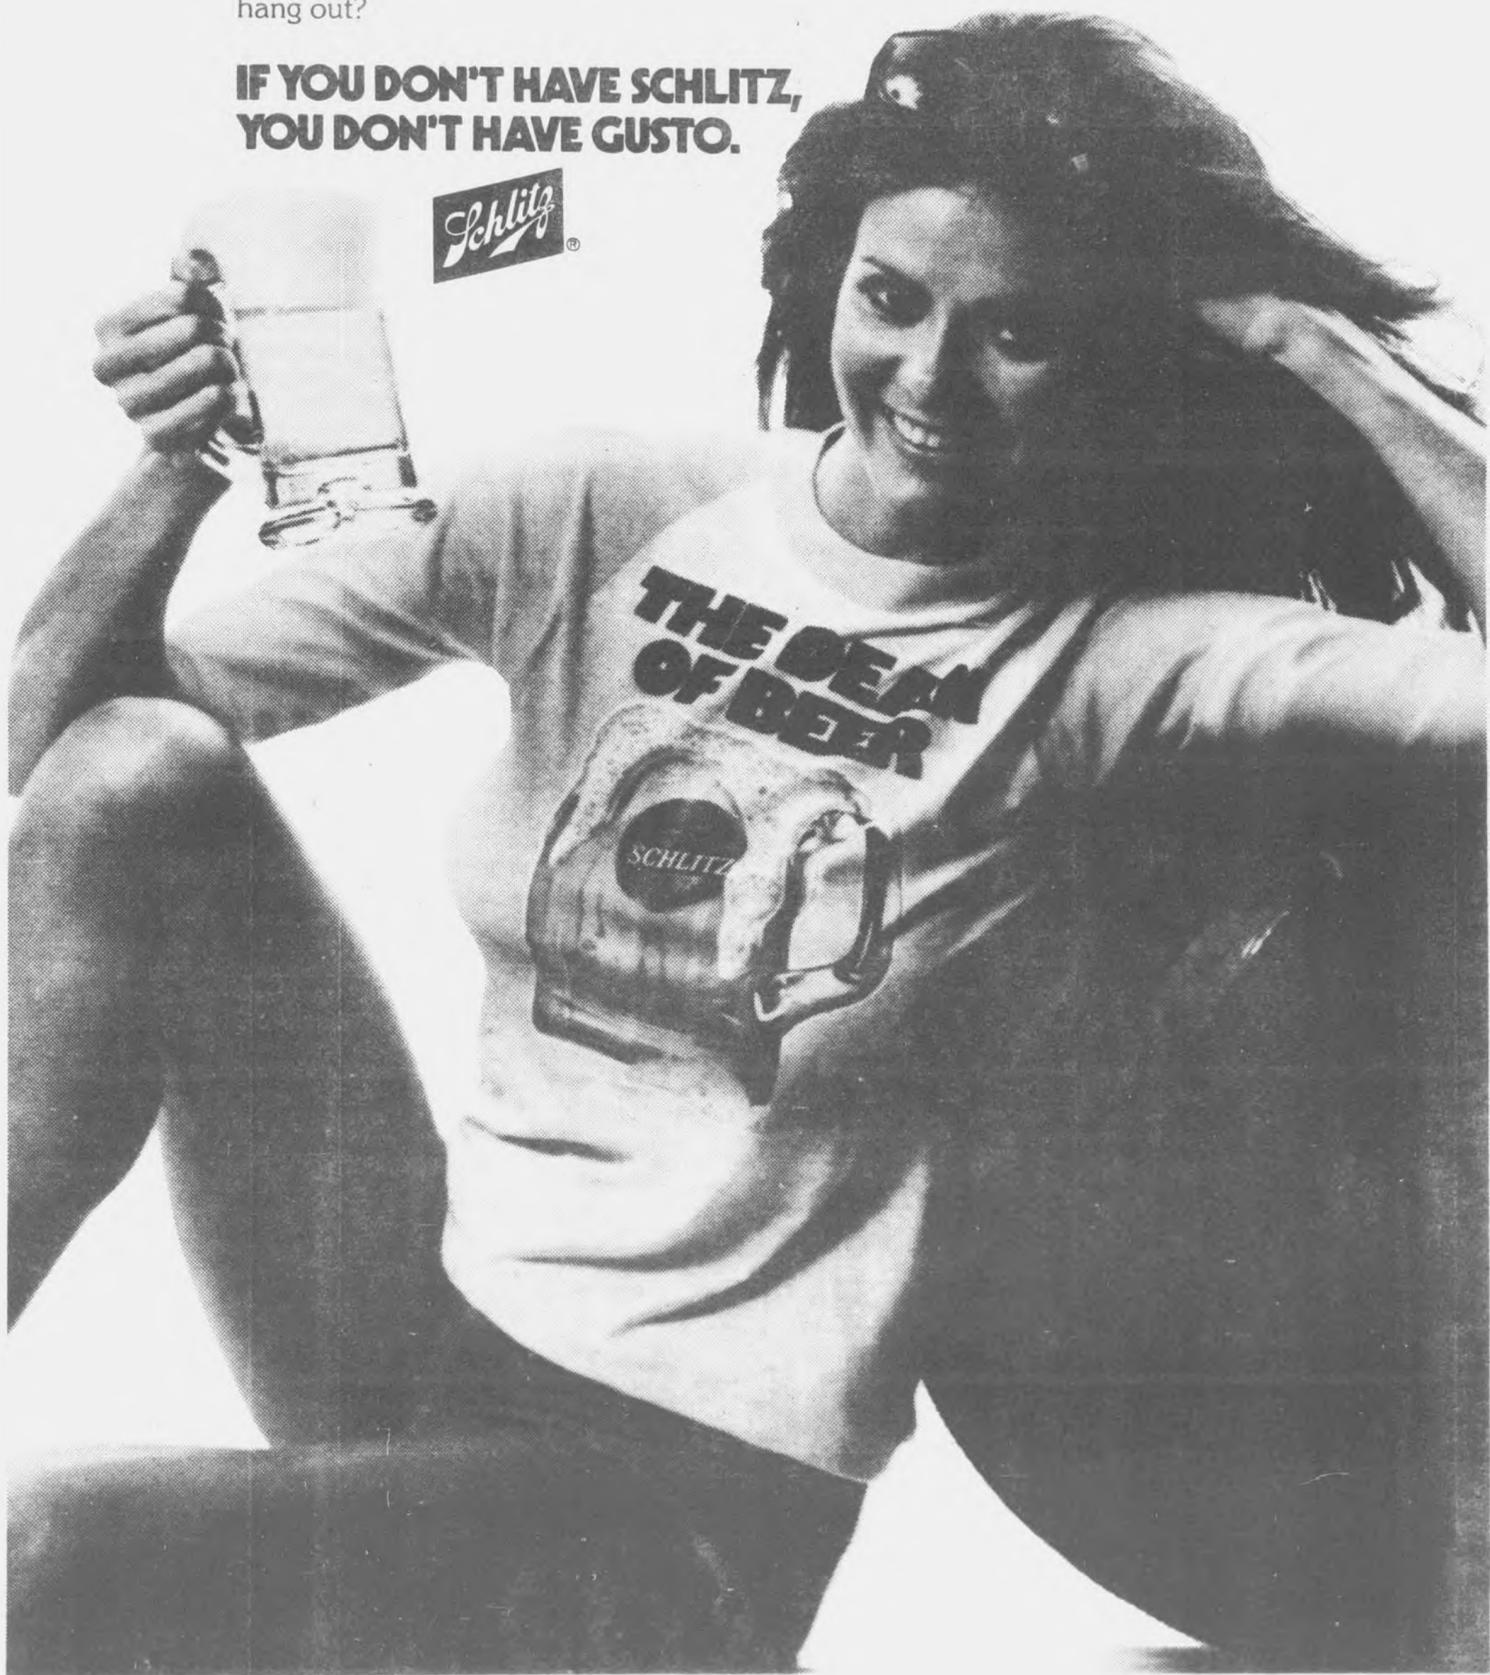

If you answered "YES" to either of these questions, you have the makings of a great Dean of Beer.

Coog secondary improving

By DAVID MUNDY
Sports Editor

UH football coach Bill Yeoman said his team's defensive secondary is beginning to show improvement with experience as the Cougars moved through their seventh day of spring training Wednesday.

"The secondary is looking much more solid," Yeoman said. "With a year behind them, they look more experienced and seem to better sense their situation."

The Cougars ran through non-contact drills most of the day, with senior quarterback Danny Davis participating and looking reasonably sharp, despite his long layoff with a separated shoulder last season.

"The shoulder hasn't really been bothering me," Davis said. "But I don't expect to see any action in the scrimmages or contact drills. Right now, I don't plan on it."

Yeoman said he doesn't believe the team's vaunted running game will suffer, despite the loss of All-Conference running back Alois Blackwell and fullback Dyrall Thomas.

"Sure, it's hard to replace someone like Blackwell and Thomas, but I think we've got some good people," Yeoman said. "We're taking a long look at a lot of youngsters."

Albert Newhouse, Terald Clark, Emmitt King, Allen Polk and Doug West are all jockeying for position in the backfield slots, with Randy Love sidelined after undergoing an operation in the off-season.

"The first few days have been encouraging," Yeoman said. "The team is enthused, and although there is still a lot of inconsistency, the attitude is excellent. The workouts have been going really well."

"Of course, the defensive secondary still needs improvement, but the return of David Hodge didn't hurt. The defensive ends are starting to look better, and Leonard Mitchell has shown a lot of improvement inside," Yeoman said.

Davis lofts pass in practice

Howe doesn't feel age at 50th birthday party

SPRINGFIELD, Mass.—A living and playing legend, Gordie Howe celebrated his 50th birthday Wednesday night with teammates from 30 years ago. Then he played a game with the New England Whalers, only three of whom were born in 1946, Howe's first year in major league hockey.

"I don't feel 50 years old," Howe said Wednesday prior to the Whalers' game here with the Cincinnati Stingers. And he really isn't 50 since his actual birthday is Friday.

The Whalers had scheduled this on-ice party for Friday, March 31, in Hartford, Conn., their regular home. However, the roof of the Hartford Civic Center blew off last Jan. 18, necessitating the Whalers' switching their home games to Springfield. The Whalers couldn't book the Springfield Civic Center ice for Friday.

An incredible athlete, Howe leads the World Hockey Association team in scoring with 34 goals and 56 assists for 90 points. He is already talking about playing next season, when he is expected to be a grandfather for the first time. His sons, Mark, 22, and Marty, 24, play on the Whalers, and Mark's wife Ginger is eight months pregnant with the couple's first child.

Only teammates John McKenzie, 41, Dave Keon, 38, and Al Smith, 33, were alive when Howe scored his first goal in 1946, while playing his first game for the Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey League.

"It scares me, I should hurt more after a game these days than I do," Howe said. "The younger guys end up sorer the next day than I do."

Going into Wednesday night's game, Howe had played in 72 of the second-place Whalers' 74 games. Every time he skates onto the ice, he adds to his bucketful of records, including most seasons, 30; most games, 2,252; most goals, 1,028; most assists, 1,457; most points, 2,483; most penalty minutes, 2,297; most years in playoffs, 23; most All-Star team selections, 23; and most Most Valuable Player awards, 7.

Howe's last NHL goal, No. 786, was on April 3, 1971. Shortly afterwards, he retired to an executive position with the Red Wings. He was lured out of retirement by the Houston Aeros and scored his first WHA goal on Nov. 3, 1973. He went on to become the first man to notch 1,000 goals, bagging the big one on Dec. 7, 1977 in Birmingham, Ala.

Montreal nips

Astros, 3-2

COCOA, Fla. (AP)—Stan Papi and Gary Carter drove in 10th-inning runs with singles Wednesday to give the Montreal Expos a 3-2 exhibition victory over the Houston Astros.

Pete MacKanin opened the extra inning with a double off losing pitcher Tom Dixon. Sam Mejias bunted for a single before Papi and Carter drove in the runs.

Houston scored in the bottom of the inning on a single by Terry Puhl, a double by Dennis Walling and Wilbur Howard's sacrifice fly. Winning pitcher Darold Knowles then stranded the potential tying run on second by retiring Joe Ferguson on an infield grounder to end the game.

Earlier, starting pitchers Ross Grimsley for Montreal and Joe Niekro for the Astros had pitched six scoreless innings.

Montreal took a 1-0 lead as Carter singled, moved to second on an infield grounder, and scored on Larry Parreski's single. Houston pulled even in the eighth with an unearned run.

Netters whip Aggies, 8-1

COLLEGE STATION—The UH men's tennis team defeated Texas A&M 8-1 in a dual match here Wednesday.

The only Aggie win came when Reid Freeman upset UH's Nduka Odizor 7-5, 4-6, 6-2. Odizor had a 19-3 singles record going into the match.

"We really didn't play all that well," UH coach Lee Meery said. "We had to rally in several matches and come from behind to win."

Dennis Cahill had battled A&M's Max King to a 6-2, 4-6 count through two sets, and fell behind in the third set before blitzing King to come from behind and win the set and the match, 7-5. Robert Buchalter and Joel Hoffman did likewise, coming from a 5-1 deficit to A&M's Robin Baker and Jim Grubert to take a 6-4, 7-5 win.

UH, with a season dual-match record of 19-3, meets 17-3 South Carolina today at 1 p.m. at UH's Hoff Courts. South Carolina has already beaten two Southwest Conference teams, Rice and Texas. The Cougars will meet Texas Monday at Hoff Courts.

UT-Arlington sponsors racing championships

The University of Texas at Arlington has announced the seventh annual National College Drag Racing Championship.

Jim Garret, director of the UTA intramural and recreation department, said drag racing started because a couple of UTA students came into his office requesting the event. "It seemed like a ridiculous idea, but it has turned out to be a national championship."

The last six years have seen rapid growth from a state championship to national championships, with cars from as far away as Utah State University, according to Garret.

A hot (fast) car is not necessary since a handicap will be used in all eight classifications.

There is no pre-entry requirement. The only things a racer needs is a motorized vehicle, a current ID card and a $4 entry fee.

This year's event is scheduled for April 22 at Green Valley Raceway in Fort Worth, Texas. Any interested student should contact The Daily Cougar sports desk at 749-4141 for more information.

Soccer club vies in meet

The UH soccer club will travel to Denton this weekend for the third annual North Texas State University Spring Soccer Tournament.

The tournament involves eight teams, divided into two groups. The winner of each group will then play for the championship, with the second place teams playing for the third place trophy.

The Cougars, who are in group B, will play the opening game of the tournament at noon Friday against Midwestern State. The second Cougar contest is scheduled for 2 p.m. Saturday against the team from Nuevo Leon, Mexico. The fourth team in group B is SMU.

The four schools in group A are North Texas, Rockford College, Chicago Circle and UT.

The tournament, which started two years ago, is already taking on major status. "Everyone in and out of the state wants to receive an invitation. This year the tournament includes teams from both Illinois and Mexico, as well as Texas," UH coach Bill Psifidis said.

The Cougars' chances are uncertain this year, according to Psifidis. "I've only seen our first opponent, but I'll have a better idea when I've watched Nuevo Leon in their opening game."

Intramural activities slated

A full slate of intramural activities are scheduled for this weekend.

Softball will go into the second week of the round-robin tournament. All divisions of tennis will be in action and badminton will get underway.

Soccer games are scheduled for Saturday and Sunday.

Golf starts next week at the Hermann Park golf course.

Entrants must show at 12:30 p.m. Tuesday or Wednesday for tee times. The finals will be played Thursday.

The handicap schedule of events for the month of April is available at the Intramural Office, Room 102 Men's Gym. Check the schedule outside the office for respective starting times.

Swimming entries are due Friday. Entry deadline is noon Friday. Return entries to the Intramural Office, or the managers' meeting at noon Friday in the San Jacinto-Sonora Room, UC.

Lacrosse squad battles Baylor

The UH lacrosse club will go after its second victory of the season Saturday against Baylor.

The Cougar's only other victory came earlier this year against the Baylor team. Because this is UH's first year in lacrosse, UH coach Randy Bryan said, the team hasn't been able to match the more experienced teams.

The other clubs UH plays are Austin, SMU, LSU, Texas A&M and Dallas. The lacrosse schedule includes 11 games, four of which the Cougars have already played. Their game against SMU was snowed out.

Hill asks high court to avoid dispute

WASHINGTON—Texas Attorney General John Hill urged the Supreme Court Wednesday to steer clear of the dispute between his state and California over inheritance taxes owed by the estate of Howard Hughes.

California has asked the high court to flex its "original jurisdiction" muscles used to settle certain disputes between states. Lawyers for both states said they expect the judges to render a decision in the case by the end of their term in June.

At stake are millions of dollars in inheritance taxes from the estate of the late recluse millionaire.

California's case was so weak

"you couldn't find it on a radar screen," Hill said.

Hill called the court's attention to the fact that several of Hughes' heirs had entered into an agreement with California subject to the decision rendered by the Supreme Court. He called the action "a barter for the jurisdiction of this court."

Lunch time in the patio of our La Rojeña distillery.

When our workers sit down to lunch
they sit down to a tradition.
When they make Cuervo Gold
it's the same.

Every day at just about eleven the wives from Tequila arrive at the Cuervo distillery bearing their husbands' lunches.

Lunches that have been lovingly prepared in the same proud manner since men first began working here in 1795.

It is this same pride in a job well-done that makes Cuervo Gold truly special. Any way you drink it, Cuervo Gold will bring you back to a time when quality ruled the world.

Cuervo. The Gold standard since 1795.
