Dear Miss Louie.

Why in the world haven't you written me? you must have known that I was looking forward with pleasure, to an account from yourself of the good time and success you were meeting with. I can't help thinking it is partly due to what I said before saying goodbye the night of Bessie's party, Now surely Miss Louie you should know me better than to be huffy about a little mis-applied speech, you know I'm continually learning out that which is of most importance and saying something that might go unsaid.
Now if you want to do the proper thing you will write me a nice long letter all ab o y o u r s e l f. Very truly your friend.
