Crime Stoppers aiding police in investigations

By SHIRLEY KNIGHT
News Reporter

The Houston Police Department's two-month-old Crime Stoppers program, which incorporates citizens' help in solving crimes through the media, has resulted in the arrest and indictment of 24 suspects as of March 12, said HPD Officer John Gilbert, Sergeant in charge of the program.

Crime Stoppers, which was started Jan. 12, allows witnesses of felony crimes to give information to the police by calling anonymously, Gilbert said. The program involves presenting a "crime-of-the-week" to the public through television, radio and newspapers, he said.

UH drama students reenact crimes for Channel 13's Crime Stoppers segment which is aired Mondays at 5 and 10 p.m. The crime of the week is chosen by officers of the HPD Crime Stoppers program, and is usually a felony that they believe was witnessed, but that has no leads in the investigation, Gilbert said.

Gilbert said that through the information obtained so far, 53 felony cases have been solved, including 30 residential burglaries, five narcotics cases, five robberies, and four auto thefts. Other cases involved arson, aggravated rape and forgeries, he said.

Citizens who have information which leads to an arrest and conviction are eligible for informants pay from Crime

Stoppers, Inc., a group of local business people. Gilbert said $4,850 in informants pay was dispersed among 26 citizens who called in the first month. So far this month, $3,050 has been given to informants, he said. Callers are identified by number and never need to reveal their name, he said.

"Citizen reaction has completely overwhelmed us," Gilbert said. 1,000 calls were received the first month, 2,000 calls came in the second month and information was taken from about 85 percent of these, he said. "No other Crime Stopper program in the country is the size of ours," he added.

Many of the calls received by the police are in reference to the crime-of-the-week that is presented to the public on 18 radio stations in Harris County, five newspapers and Channel 13. "A lot of people call in not interested in the informant's money, they just want to let us know about crime in their neighborhoods," Gilbert said.

Sidney Berger, UH Drama Department Chair, and organizer of UH participation in Crime Stoppers, said there have been no problems getting participants for the reenactments so far. "The police give a synopsis of the crime to Dave Ward who writes the script and I cast the reenactment, Berger said.

"We feel if we can jar someone into remembering some of the horrendous crimes we're asked to reenact, we've done a significant service to the community," Berger added.

Sun power may not lower fuel bills

CROSBYTON, Texas (AP) Using the sun's energy will reduce dependence on foreign oil, but customers of the nation's first solar electric power plant should not expect lower utility bills, the project director says.

"At this point, solar electricity will not be competitive with fossil fuels," said Dr. John Reichert. "As energy prices escalate, it will become more competitive."

Reichert helped design and build the solar-powered generator, which began providing electricity to about a dozen homes in this West Texas town of 2,200 Monday.

"Nobody is going to come out with a free lunch," said Reichert, who was preparing to go to Washington to testify before the Senate Appropriations Committee.

"The local consumer is going to pay the same for the electricity," he said in a telephone conversation, "but you have to look at the national scope to see that a great deal of fossil fuel that would be used is not going to be used for electricity."

"It's too bad, but solar power is not going to take us back to the prices of the 1950's."

Reichert's testimony was part of an effort to obtain $33 million from the Energy Department for a full-size, five-megawatt unit. The plant, designed and built over the past five years by about 30 professors at Texas Tech University in nearby Lubbock, cost $5 million.

If approved, the plant would use the sun to produce about 20 percent of its electricity and depend on fossil fuel for the rest.

The Crosbyton plant, a prototype for other similar developments, was scheduled to start producing electricity last Friday but a raging dust storm hid the sun and delayed the event until Monday.

Reichert said he hopes federal officials can be convinced the proposed 10-dish collector would help cut down on the nation's dependence on imported oil.

Poet to read his works in UC

As part of a three day workshop, award-winning poet James Tate will appear in the UC World Affairs Lounge, Wednesday for a one-hour reading of some of his original poems. The program, scheduled for 4:00 p.m., is free and open to the public.

In addition to the poetry reading, Tate will conduct a workshop Thursday afternoon at 2:00 on the third floor of the Roy Cullen building and on Friday he will hold private interviews with interested students.

Tate is a contemporary American poet who has won the Yale Series of Younger Poets Award for his first book, The Lost Pilot, in 1967.

The workshop is being sponsored by the English and Creative Writing Departments, Program Council, the National Endowment for the Arts, and the Student Association Enrichment Committee.

Tensions increase in Polish labor confrontation

BYDGOSZCZ, Poland (AP)—Communist Party Chief Stanislaw Kania warned Tuesday that Solidarity's call for nationwide strikes in this debt-plagued Soviet ally "cannot be interpreted otherwise than a call for self-annihilation."

The big independent union, in a direct challenge to the government, threatened a four-hour warning strike Friday and a general strike next Tuesday unless Kania's regime fires officials responsible for the police beating of labor activists in Bydgoszcz.

Kania, in a speech carried by Warsaw Radio, responded that Poland's "most dangerous economic crisis...is coinciding with a deep political crisis," and asked:

"How can one call for strikes in this situation? Who has the courage to make out of a local incident a national cause threatening with catastrophe?"

Kania told a meeting of agriculture officials that Poland's current debt to the West was $27 billion "and we have to undertake more."

"Our socialist homeland is in the most urgent need... Export is dropping because of decreasing production. This diminishes possibilities to buy food and increases our debts."

The Common Market nations are considering more Western aid to Poland, and Britain's Foreign Secretary, Lord Carrington, said the Poles need more than $1 billion to tide them over to July.

Mieczyslaw Rakowski, Poland's deputy premier in charge of union affairs, accused Solidarity's leaders of trying to become the "new owners" of this Warsaw pact nation, where Soviet-led maneuvers are under way.

Rakowski issued the challenge as he prepared for critical negotiations with Solidarity leader Lech Walesa.

Walesa threatened to resign unless his proposal for a two-stage strike plan was adopted and stormed out of a meeting Monday when his plan appeared headed for defeat. But Solidarity's policy-making national coordination commission backed his plan 35-3 with two abstentions Tuesday and Walesa returned.

"Now is not the time to cry-There'll be enough time to cry later," Walesa told the commission members. It was an appeal for unity on the eve of talks with Rakowski Wednesday in which he will demand the firing of officials responsible for police beating union activists in Bydgoszcz.

However, Rakowski declared in a newspaper interview reprinted by many Polish dailies that Solidarity's demands were "always worded in the most categorical terms."

"All in all, those growing conflicts aim at infringing the social peace. Looking at things objectively, they are pushing Poland toward an even worse situation, an economic catastrophe."

Solidarity demands the firing of Deputy Premier Stanislaw Mach, the deputy governor of Bydgoszcz, the local police commander and the regional prosecutor, whom it accuses of responsibility for the police beating 23 union activists who refused to leave a provincial government meeting last Thur-

day. The meeting was chaired by Edward Berger, who said he will submit his resignation at the next meeting of the Bydgoszcz Provincial People's Council. Solidarity has not demanded Berger's resignation, however, and it was thought unlikely his quitting would ease the situation.

InCAR gives its side of scrap with CARP

By the International Committee Against Racism

We are members of the International Committee Against Racism (InCAR) hear at UH. We are a multi-racial organization dedicated to fighting racism — we believe racism is used to divide working people and students and is used to justify massive cutbacks in public services and education. InCAR is also an anti-imperialist organization — we fight against the U.S. government's attempts to exploit workers in other countries.

InCAR gave a forum on U.S. intervention in El Salvador on Mar. 13 at UH. Just as there is the struggle between the left wing and the right wing in El Salvador, there is that same struggle here in the U.S. The right wing is made up of groups like the KKK, Nazis and "Moonies" (also known as CARP)

Perhaps you have seen them, swarming around at the UC., giving away thousands of expensive looking newspapers and generally making pests of themselves. The "Moonies", named after Korean fascist Sun Yung Moon, are paid right wing organizers. Their group is funded by both the Korean CIA (KCIA) and the American CIA. Their press talks of making the U.S. number one, backing the U.S. military in El Salvador and backing Reagan in his "get tough" policies internationally.

At our forum, the Moonies came in numbers and were asked to leave. They were asked to leave because they are pro-fascists — they supported the butcher Shah, who murdered and tortured millions; they support every fascist regime in Latin America, and right now they not only support the fascist monsters in El Salvador, but also call for more military aid! When these slime attempted to disrupt our meeting, they were thrown out.

Although this was a victory, the real victory will come when they are kicked off the campus by masses of students, teachers and campus workers.

The U.S. ruling class is heading closer towards war each day — we in InCAR want to build a movement across the U.S. to smash this war drive. It is not in our interest to fight workers in El Salvador or anyone else so that the U.S. bosses can get more oil. But it is in our interest to organize a movement on the campuses against racism and imperialism.

Attend the INCAR showing of "Revolution or Death" (film on El Salvador struggle) on Mar. 27 at UH and join InCAR.

commentary

CARP tells different side of confrontation

By the Collegiate Association For the Research of Principles

It is time to expose the mentality of the members of the International Committee Against Racism (InCAR) at UHCC, who deceptively pose as supporters of the Salvadoran people.

According to available literature and handouts, InCAR claims to be anti-racist and anti-imperialist. They also claim to be a multi-racial organization. Their main aim is supposedly to "fight racism in all its forms" and to create "multi-racial" unity.

The Collegiate Association For The Research of Principles, CARP, is a group which also is dedicated to fighting racism in all its forms and creating multi-racial unity. To the innocent bystander, it would seem these two groups could and should easily work side by side.

On one occasion, InCAR announced a general meeting which was "open to all". CARP members attended. However, before the meeting began, a vote was taken to establish who in the audience shared the same views and opinions as those sponsoring the meeting. Since CARP members simply attended the meeting to hear and evaluate the group and their motives, they did not raise their hands. A motion was then passed to limit this "open to all" meeting to supporters of that group only. CARP members were asked to leave, and they complied.

Then, on Friday, Mar. 13, InCAR sponsored the forum, "No U.S. Intervention in El Salvador." Again, CARP members attended. Around 8 p.m., InCAR members began arriving. At this point it was overheard that CARP members would be kept from attending the meeting, and that the doors would be barricaded. This action was never carried out, and the meeting began, CARP members present. The meeting was called to order and the leader of the group informed the audience the CARP members were present. She went on to describe CARP, its members and motive, with as much abusive language as she could possibly muster. Again, a vote was taken whether or not CARP should stay, and a motion passed against CARP. The vote was not clearly a majority by "Roberts Rules of Order," to say the least.

But in an instant, InCAR members aggressively approached CARP members. One CARP representative stood up and asked to know the reason CARP was being asked to leave. Without responding, InCAR members proceeded to forcibly eject CARP members from the room. Because of this unlawful infringement of the freedom of CARP members to attend this "open to all" meeting, CARP members refused to leave. Violent kicking and punching ensued, even leading to the physical injury of one CARP member. This attack was again stopped only upon the arrival of the police. After questioning both sides, the police told CARP members that because, legally, only the UC manager or the police have the authority to evict any one party from any public meeting forcibly, assault charges could be filed.

From these and several other smaller incidents, such as one CARP member being denied the right to purchase InCAR literature, it can be clearly seen that InCAR's actions are in fact contradictory to their apparent motives.

If, as they claim, InCAR is opposed to racism "in all its forms," then why were CARP members denied the right to attend InCAR's "open to all" meetings? Simply because their political viewpoints differ? Let's not play another game of semantics. Anti-racism (in all its forms) means non-prejudice. A truly anti-racist group, which InCAR claims to be, will not limit a person's rights and freedoms simply based on his or her own beliefs.

In contrast, CARP meetings are open to all, regardless of their individual philosophical or political opinions.

Also, a truly anti-imperialist group, which InCAR claims to be, will not speak out against one imperialism and ignore another. By attacking U.S. policy in El Salvador and ignoring Soviet intervention there, via Cuba and Nicaragua, InCAR is clearly showing that when they say they're anti-imperialist, they're really anti-American.

These kinds of contradictions are prevalent throughout InCAR literature. For example, InCAR catalogues the "junta" and the extreme right-wing group together, but in reality, the "junta" is in no way connected to the right-wing fascists. The United States, supporting the "junta", is trying to institute a land reform policy, in order to more equally divide the land in El Salvador. This policy totally disagrees with the leftists plans for that country, and conflict has arisen. InCAR totally misrepresents the true situation.

InCAR stresses the idea that the U.S. is "creating" another Vietnam in El Salvador. For their information, it was the Soviets who "created" Vietnam, and it is through Soviet aid in the form of troops and weaponry that the conflict in El Salvador has been instigated. Once again, InCAR manages to misrepresent the truth, therewith creating confusion in the minds of UH students.

Why isn't InCAR opposing Soviet intervention in El Salvador? Simply because they support this kind of activity. If the leftists (FDR) come into power in El Salvador we will not have another Vietnam on our hands, but another Cambodia.

InCAR, by attacking U.S. policy in El Salvador, is promoting the kind of confusion and upheaval on American university campuses which is serving to hasten the establishment of a Marxist-Leninist dictatorship in El Salvador. This is what the people in Vietnam were against and this is what the El Salvadorean people are against. Although InCAR claims to be "for the people" of El Salvador, in reality they are supporting the deception of those people by Marxist propagandists.

The people of El Salvador are fighting for freedom from a suppressive government. If one looks at history, one can see that Marxist-Leninist based governments have definitely been suppressive. Under a Marxist regime, people are required to adapt a Marxist way of thinking. This is the reason so many deaths, over 100 million, have occurred under Marxist rule.

A group such as InCAR does not reflect the principles of honest, open expression that forms the roots of an academic community. This group is therefore dangerously deceptive to the students at UH and other campuses around the United States of America.

System ignores choice of computer committee

To the Editor:

The following observations are in reply to an article in The Daily Cougar of March 9, 1981. This article reported the approval of the acquisition of a large computer by the UH Board of Regents. While this computer will certainly be beneficial to this campus, there are a number of points which require clarification and — or amplification.

It is generally agreed that the computing services on campus, in particular those for instruction and research (academic computing), are woefully inadequate. However, substantial improvement requires the expenditure of several million dollars. An Academic Computer Users Committee was established to determine what kind of computer(s) should be bought. After more than two years of intensive consultation, meetings with vendors, etc. this committee came up with explicit recommendations, one for each of various levels of funding. The committee based its recommendations on a survey of about 200 faculty and staff members who (at a substantial cost in time) attended seven vendor presentations and wrote specific evaluations based on the anticipated needs and requirements on campus. The computer configuration which emerged as most desirable for academic computing was that of a weakly connected group of intermediate computers (e.g. VAXII), dedicated primarily to interactive computing, in addition to a larger computer, used to a greater part for batch processing of large jobs, mainly for research. (The present Honeywell 66-60 under this plan would be used primarily for administrative computing.) The number of VAXII's as well as the size of the larger computer was to be dependent on the level of funding. Additionally, the specific needs of the department of computer science, with about 1000 majors the largest user of instructional computing, were recognized in the recommendation that it obtains its own computer (VAXII) to satisfy its unique and specific requirements in the areas of research and instruction even if the level of funding was to be low.

In the late spring 1980 it became apparent that the computing services were deteriorating unacceptably. An emergency request for one VAXII was approved (by the Chancellor's Office) with unprecedented speed. Additionally, the present Honeywell was upgraded (acquisition of a third processor). The new VAXII was installed in fall 1980; by now most of the courses of the department of computer science are taught on it and other departments will soon follow.

Given this history, it is highly surprising that the System administration recently decided to ignore the recommendations of the Academic Computer Users Committee and to buy a single big computer. Under the presumed level of funding, about $2.5 million, the committee recommended a network of three VAXII's (including the one already installed) and one larger computer (but not as large as the one now ordered). There are several objections to this decision as it was reported in The Daily Cougar.

1. It is not very diplomatic to indicate to a rather large group of individuals on campus that their work and the resulting recommendations are useless. If their work was going to be ignored anyway, the members could have spent the amount of time (literally thousands of hours) on more worthwhile matters.

2. The Academic Computer Users Committee consists of a number of people who are eminently qualified to assess the computing needs of this campus. It is not clear how qualified the system administration is for this task.

3. As was clearly pointed out in the report of the committee, one large computer will not satisfy all computing needs, not even all instructional needs. Specifically, the department of computer science as well as some departments in the School of Engineering crucially depend upon a computer under their own control, as certain subject matters require differing computing environments (e.g. operating systems, graphics, etc.)

4. The solution to our computing needs as adopted by the administration is essentially one of the early seventies. By the time the new big computer will be fully operational, this campus will be ten years behind in computing. Universities should be at the forefront of research and the overwhelming trend is toward distributed processing and away from a single, central, monolithic, all-purpose computer. Virtually all good universities have reached this conclusion; most of them have acted accordingly. It was encouraging to note that the Academic Computer Users Committee had the vision and foresight to recommend a solution which is consistent with this national trend. Unfortunately, it appears that the administration prefers to give us a solution from the past instead of one for the future.

In summary, the recent decision to acquire a single large computer is uninformed, unimaginative and counterproductive. If the administration wants to improve UH, it should follow the recommendations of experts. There is of course the possibility that we are wrong about the level of funding. If indeed the university can afford a $2.5 million computer in addition to satisfying the more basic needs of the computer science department and others, then so much for the better.

Johannigman scores All-America in swim meet

By TIM McKIAN
Sports Editor

America Diane Johannigman, Houston's women tankers finished 19th out of 77 competing schools in the AIAW meet this Paced by the swims of All-past weekend at the University of South Carolina.

Johannigman, UH's only three-time All-American, scored All-America in four events. The Cincinnati, Ohio native put in a personal mark of 57.57 in the 100-yard backstroke. She scored a 26.08 time in the 50-yard butterfly and touched at the 2:01.64 mark in the 200-yard butterfly.

Finishing 14th in the 50-yard butterfly, teammate Ann Jardin landed right behind Johannigman with her time of 26.09.

The Coogs' 800-yard relay team of Johannigman, Jardin, Lisa Burnes, and Juliet Archer also scored All-American as they completed their attempt in this event with a UH varsity record of 7:34.27.

"I think the girls gained a lot of experience going to nationals," Assistant Coach Kathy Kenal said. "This year's national was probably the toughest national so far. The last couple of years you'd have 50 in every event and this time we had 27 or 30 so the quality is much better."

"When you consider there were 77 schools there, 19th is not bad at all," she continued.

This meet ended the season for the lady tankers. They should remain in good shape over the summer by way of the coaches summer training program. While recruiting and next year rests on the minds of the women, the men are preparing for their biggest meet of the year. They will compete in the NCAA Championships Thursday through Saturday at the University of Texas Natatorium. Coach Phil Hansel feels his team is ready for the competition.

"It's a little hard to predict when you get the top male swimmers all over the world together," Hansel said. "When I say top swimmers from all over the world, probably we're just missing the iron curtain countries."

UH qualified 10 individual meets and 3 relays which will compete this weekend. Hansel feels this is an all time Houston high.

"In order to even participate in this meet you have to virtually swim a world class time to even qualify," Hansel said. "I think we've got several individuals who have a chance to score, that means getting into the top twelve, which is a very good feat. There's a possibility, if everything works right, we might be able to score on one or two of these relays."

According to Hansel, this team is very competitive and they are probably the best quality team of men UH has ever sent to national competition.

"The facility at the University of Texas is one that we've swam in often enough that we're familiar with it," he said. "We should have a lot of things going for us as far as expecting a top performance."

Man on the Run

Dr. Joseph Buckley is a busy man. The Dean of UH's College of Pharmacy compresses the activities of an administrator, instructor and researcher into one busy schedule.

A glimpse into one of his non-stop days reveals a man signing grant proposals, handling correspondence, conducting telephone consultations and meeting with students and faculty—practically all at the same time.

In the course of one three-hour visit with our photographer, Buckley saw 10 students, received nine phone calls and balanced visits and phone calls with an interspersing of letters and memos. The flow of people, accompanied by the background music of a constantly ringing telephone, stopped only for lunch, grabbed on the run in a colleague's office.

College life is no vacation. Being a handicapped student does not make it any easier.

Despite having no legs or arms (except for one finger), UH student John Hoffman has mastered skills not considered normal for a person in his situation.

With his one finger he can unlock and open the door to his dorm room, throw the knife he keeps in his back pack (center), and swim the length of a competition pool (rear right).

His out-going personality shines like the headlight he added to his wheelchair. His corny jokes and weird songs could drown out his chair's horn (another custom addition). However, he does have his quiet side (upper far right) as he talks with friends during dinner in the cafeteria.

Spending time with John Hoffman is not like spending time with a handicapped person or a cripple, one friend said of him, his enthusiasm and dedication outshines his lack of arms and legs (lower far right).

WHEN YOU DEAL WITH ILLUSION DAY AFTER DAY,

It is an illusion. To get it, we had to build a model, light it from the inside, light it from the outside, position it on the actual building site (in this case, in Dallas), and then photograph it.

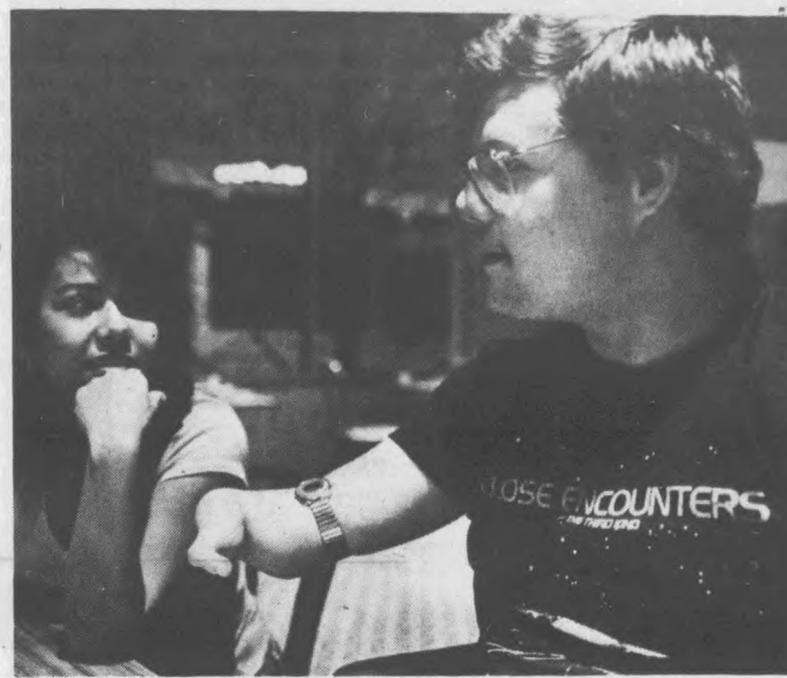

WILLIAM M. BURWELL, INC. has been building scale models and display models for the past eight years (formerly as Kinetic Systems, Inc.). Over these years, we have developed a technique and quality that is recognizable by the industry as being the finest. Increased client demand has opened several new positions in our firm in the field of model and display crafting. We are currently interviewing for craftsmen experienced in a variety of materials and techniques who are interested in working full time. Coogs sink Pirates, 4-3, 5-2

The UH baseball team swept a Tuesday doubleheader from the visiting Southwestern Pirates by scores of 4-3 and 5-2.

Raynor Noble got his third win of the season in the first game as he relieved starter Jeff Achilles in the first inning. Noble pitched five and two-thirds innings to post the win. Rob Riley, who won the second game, came on to throw the 7th inning and collected his second save of the year.

Wesley Gregersen provided the Coogs power with his second inning, two-run homer, his 5th of the season.

In the nightcap, UH tallied a run in the bottom of the first when Noble scored from third base on Mike Minturn's single to right field. The Coogs added three runs in the bottom of the second to secure the win. Jeff Jacobson provided second inning fireworks with his two-run round tripper over the left field fence. The homer was Jacobson's 4th of the year.

Jose Rodiles started the nightcap for Houston but was relieved in the third inning after loading the bases. Rob Riley came on in relief and before the inning was over two Pirates had crossed home plate. Riley held Southwestern scoreless for the remainder of the game and went on to fan seven Pirate batters.

The Cougars tallied another run in the 5th inning when Mike Breslin scored off Gregersen's sacrifice fly to left field.

UH's record stands at 16-12. They take on the Minnesota Golden Gophers today in a 2 p.m. single game at Cougar Field.

Men's tennis team keeps win streak alive and kicking

The UH tennis team kept their 1981 win streak alive as they defeated Stephen F. Austin 8-1 Monday afternoon on Hoff Courts. UH has won 16 matches without a loss.

Nduka Odizor, who easily won his match 6-2, 6-1 over Lon Cetnerone, has won 20 consecutive matches this season. UH won the remaining singles matches in straight sets with the exception of Juan Ayala's 6-3, 0-6, 6-4 win over the Lumberjacks' Gary Peppins.

Houston's only loss came in doubles competition when Joel Hoffman and David Gloger fell 7-6, 4-6, 7-5. All three doubles matches went to three sets.

UH plays Texas, Arkansas, and SMU on their home courts—no easy task for any team. Merry remains optimistic.

"NEITHER DO I CONDEMN YOU"

One day a group of religionists caught a sinful woman and brought her to the Lord Jesus. According to their religious law, such a sinful woman had to be stoned to death, but the religionists did not do it. Rather, they brought her to the Lord in an attempt to trap Him. They said, "Teacher, this woman has been caught committing adultery. Moses commanded us to stone such a person. What do you say?" (John 8:4-5). After a time the Lord answered, "He who is without sin among you, let him be the first to throw a stone at her" (v.7). This word pierced their conscience. What did the religionists do? Beginning with the older ones and proceeding to the youngest they went out one by one. They knew they were not qualified to take the lead in stoning the woman to death, for they also were not without sin.

Who, besides God Himself, is without sin? No one. Only God is without sin and thus only He is qualified to condemn sin. Only the Lord Jesus, being God, was without sin and only He was qualified to condemn the sinful woman. But notice how lovingly and gently the Lord expressed Himself to this sinful woman. He asked her if anyone condemned her and she said, "No one, Lord." Then Jesus said, "Neither do I condemn you" (John 8:11).

Like this woman, we all are sinful. But who is qualified to condemn? The only One is the Lord Jesus Himself for He alone is without sin.

Although He is qualified to condemn you, He would not do it. Sin is in the very subjective nature of your being. Only the Lord Jesus can come into you as the life to counteract this sinful nature within you. His desire is to forgive you and deliver you from sin.
