Success of Hepatitis Vaccine Important for AIDS Work

By Larry Doyle
UPI Science Writer

CHICAGO (UPI)—The first successful field test of a genetically engineered hepatitis B vaccine lays important technological groundwork for the development of a vaccine to protect against the AIDS virus, researchers said Thursday.

The New York Blood Center reported in the Journal of the American Medical Association that Recombivax-HB, a synthetic vaccine created without the use of live virus, offered protection against hepatitis B equal to that provided by a vaccine derived from the blood of hepatitis carriers.

Aside from being an important step in the fight against hepatitis, the finding also indicates that current attempts to develop an AIDS vaccine may be on the right track, said Dr. Cladd Stevens, a director of the blood center.

"This really opens the possibility of developing a vaccine for AIDS," she said. "Obviously, each one will have to be evaluated on its own, but the technique has been established."

"It's clear that the plasma-derived vaccine was safe," Stevens said. "But clearly there were and are some people who were afraid. Now they have no excuse."

Stevens and her colleagues tested the vaccine on 122 infants whose mothers were infected with hepatitis B. This group was chosen because the likelihood of virus passage from mother to child without vaccination is already known, Stevens said.

Only 4.8 percent of those vaccinated became chronically infected with the virus, compared to the 70 percent to 90 percent which would have been predicted. This rate is comparable to that seen with plasma-derived vaccine, Stevens said.

About 0.3 percent of the U.S. adult population carries the hepatitis virus at any one time, with sexually active individuals and health care workers being at greatest risk for infection.

Hepatitis, like AIDS, is transmitted through the sharing of blood products or intimate sexual activity. It can cause acute illness characterized by fever, nausea and jaundice. The illness is usually mild and flu-like, but can be fatal in about 1 percent of the cases.

Between 6 percent and 10 percent of those exposed to hepatitis become chronically infected and run significant risk of liver disease, including cancer, which can result in death.

In recombinant vaccine technology, scientists chemically isolate the parts of the virus that trigger the body to produce specific antibodies to neutralize it. Other organisms—often yeast or bacteria cells—are then genetically altered to produce these protective substances in quantity.

Since the whole live virus is never used—as it is in plasma-derived vaccines—the chances of infecting someone with a recombinant vaccine are nil.

"This is a special concern with the AIDS virus, obviously, because the original virus is so devastating," Stevens said. "And in essence a typical vaccination by definition induces a long-term infection, which you wouldn't want to do with AIDS."

Several research institutions around the country are working on acquired immune deficiency syndrome vaccines using recombinant technology. One researcher, who did not wish to be identified, said he was heartened by Stevens's finding.

Stevens's finding.

"We were pretty sure it would work, obviously," he said. "But there was a chance it wouldn't, and if it hadn't, we would have definitely been in trouble."

Recombivax-HB, licensed by the Food and Drug Administration in July 1986, was first developed because the pool of available blood donors—hepatitis carriers who were primarily homosexuals—was dwindling. But unfounded fears that the plasma-derived vaccine might also spread the AIDS virus accelerated its development.

Jail Inmate Calls for Investigation of Deputy

HOUSTON (UPI)—A Harris County Jail inmate suffering from AIDS-related complex said Wednesday he was injured by a deputy who was enraged because he and other inmates sang hymns and prayed Sunday night.

Eleven other inmates later signed a statement supporting Xavier Murray's account of the alleged incident.

Harris County Sheriff's Department officials said they will investigate the allegations, but they questioned why the prisoner and his attorney told reporters about it before filing an official complaint with the jail.

Murray, 30, said that the deputy slapped him on the neck and jerked him from the top bunk where he lay Sunday night after several inmates sang hymns and prayed.

The fall caused him to hit his neck, head and back on another bunk and floor, Murray said.

Speaking from a wheelchair during an interview with The Houston Post in the jail Wednesday, Murray said he was made to attend a disciplinary hearing Monday and left on the floor because he could not stand.

Community Center Delayed

Plans for a community center to serve Montrose have been revised following the withdrawal of the Montrose Clinic as a potential participating tenant.

In a special April 15 meeting, the board of trustees of the Montrose Clinic voted to withdraw from participation in the community center. Citing time constraints and the uncertainty of costs to the clinic, it was felt that other alternatives had to be explored.

Dwayne Wells, chairman of the community center committee, reports that without the participation of the Montrose Clinic, the 1110 Lovett building is no longer a viable option for use as a community center.

The committee will meet again in July to explore alternative ways to achieve the establishment of a community center.

Three Teams Tie for Softball Lead

Traffic along the road to San Francisco, site of the 1987 world series, is getting heavy as three teams are nearly tied for the lead in the Montrose Softball League. The Mining Company, Galleon and Montrose Voice have all suffered only one defeat.

In action on Sunday, May 10, the Mining Company edged by the Galleon 4-3, then went on to slug it out against the Fitness Exchange, 18-1. Michael's handed the Fitness Exchange another loss, 3-2.

Mecca lost to the Galleon 9-2, and then suffered another loss against the Montrose Voice, 14-8, to close the day.

This week's action at Lawrence Field, 7½ and Shepherd in the Heights, sees the Mining Company opening against Mecca at 1:00 p.m. The Voice takes on Fitness Exchange at 2:15 and returns to the field at 3:30 against Michael's. The Galleon and Michael's close out the day at 4:45.

There will be no games on Sunday, May 24, as the league travels to Dallas to play in the Pegasus tournament. A "Casino Night" fundraiser is slated for June 5 at The Ranch.

HTC Plays in Dallas Tournament

The Oak Lawn Tennis Association held its Spring Open on the weekend of May 2-3 and a number of Houston Tennis Club players made a good showing.

Former HTC member Tim Calhoun, now living in College Station, won the A singles championship 6-3, 6-4 over OLTA's Eric Paschall who earlier upset No. 1 seed Scott Lassiter 6-3, 6-3. Calhoun defeated HTC's No. 1 player, Aunty Em, in the semifinals for his shot at the championship. He won the first set 6-1, but Aunty Em roared back and forced a tiebreak as each held serve throughout the second set.

HTC's Rick Hadnot made it all the way to the B championship, in singles and doubles, this year. After winning the singles he teamed with Ronnie Moss to form a new team to take on the OLTA teams. They won their semifinals match over Dr. Jim Goodwin and Haskell-Willms, but were forced to default the title as rain delays caused the matches to end sooner than necessary.

OLTA's Tom Mendez won the C singles finals over HTC member Bruce Willis. Willis won two matches Saturday before facing his old doubles partner Rich Corder in the semifinals on Sunday. While Mendez cruised past No. 1 seed Ronnie Moss 6-1, 6-1, Willis won the first tiebreak 8-6, dropped the second set again on an 8-6 tiebreak, then finally hit two good shots in a row to take the decisive set 7-5.

Lots of interest is being shown by players from Denver, San Diego, Corpus Christi, Dallas, Ft. Worth, Kansas City and other cities in the upcoming Team Cup hosted by Houston Tennis Club, June 27 & 28, as part of Houston Gay Pride Week activities.

Representatives from Miami and Galveston have already contacted director Rich Corder. Interested parties may reach Corder at (713) 524-2151 for details on the tournament as well as regular club play.

No Leads in Fatal Stabbing of Montrose Man

As of Thursday, Houston police still had no suspects in the fatal stabbing of a Montrose man found dead May 14 in his apartment at 1624 Marshall.

Don Schluterman, 32, a supervisor with Texaco, suffered multiple stab wounds to the chest, said Detective Johnny Moore.

Schluterman was found shortly before noon by a co-worker after he failed to show up for work. The body was on the living room floor covered with a large towel.

Although it was speculated that Schluterman knew his assailant, Moore said investigators have "no leads and no theories."

"He could have known the person or answered a knock on the door," replied Moore when asked about the lack of any sign of forced entry at the victim's apartment.

Kent Lederer, a close friend of Schluterman, has posted a $1,000 reward for information leading to the "arrest and indictment" of Schluterman's attacker. Anyone with any information may contact Detective Sgts. Moore or Yardborough at H.P.D. Homicide at 222-3651.

DONALD J. SCHULTERMAN

August 31, 1955—May 7, 1987

Don, you were my best friend.

I came to you with my doubts and fears and you listened. I was unsure and you encouraged me. I was sick and you waited on me with caring and compassion. I made mistakes and you forgave me. I was alone and you included me in your life. Others didn't understand, but somehow you always did. You accepted my suggestions, often unsolicited, because you knew that I loved you and only wanted the best for you.

I am glad that all my family was able to meet you and they, too, know your specialness.

So many will miss you, but surely none more than me.

Military Expands 'Sexual Misconduct' Rule

By Richard C. Gross

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Pentagon insists it is not making a moral judgment in its revised rules on what sort of sex acts disqualify personnel for security clearances, but critics say the broad new action "looks like a witchhunt."

All of the 2.7 million military and civilian employees of the Defense Department as well as civilian defense contractors holding clearances for access to classified information are covered by the new regulation, which includes adultery and sodomy in its definition of "sexual misconduct."

Peter Nelson, the Pentagon personnel security specialist who wrote the new rule, said Wednesday it was needed because previous guidelines were vague and misleading in efforts to weed out individuals who might be susceptible to blackmail by enemy spies. He denied any effort to target homosexuals.

"We're not making a moral judgment on whether that behavior is right or wrong," Nelson said. "We're concerned that people conduct themselves in a mature, adult fashion whether they are heterosexual or homosexual. We're not merely focusing on one particular group or another."

Homosexuality vs. Fundamentalism on Trial

SAN DIEGO (UPI)—Potential jurors were quizzed about sex and religion Tuesday as jury selection began in the criminal trial of a fundamentalist Christian woman accused of stealing her son from his gay father.

Betty Lou Batey, 43, took son Brian, now 16, away from Frank Batey in September 1982 and hid him with members of her Pentecostal church in Texas and Colorado for 19 months before surrendering to the FBI in Denver in April 1984.

Mr. Batey had been given custody of Brian by San Diego Superior Court Judge Sheridan Reed after Mrs. Batey repeatedly refused visitation privileges.

"This case will involve emotional issues of sex and religion," said Mrs. Batey's attorney, Michael Farris, of the Washington, D.C. based Christian group, Concerned Women for America.

Farris asked 19 potential jurors if they knew any homosexuals.

"Do you have any strong feelings if homosexual men should have custody of young boys?" asked Farris.

The majority of the potential jurors answered in the negative.

"Do you have any friends who are Pentecostal or fundamentalist Christians?" Farris also asked.

Mrs. Batey has said she feared Brian would be harmed by Mr. Batey's "homosexual lifestyle."

Deputy District Attorney Robert Boles was not happy with the ruling.

"The necessity defense is full of trash," said Boles. "All the defense will do is throw mud."

Farris asked the jurors if they could break the law in order to save a child from a burning building in violation of a "no trespassing" sign.

All answered "yes."
Mrs. Batey faces a year and a day in prison if convicted of the charges.

The "principal impetus," he added, was a set of recommendations from a Pentagon commission that reviewed the 1985 Walker family spy ring scandal. The rule also comes amid charges that Marine guards at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow were used by Soviet woman in sexual ploys to get KGB agents into the facility.

Critics rejected that explanation. "This business about one's private life being exposed to blackmail is a lot of crap," snapped lawyer Richard Gayer, a San Francisco gay activist. "Russian spies don't use blackmail except as a last resort. They get secrets by paying money for them."

"This looks like a witchhunt rather than a security check," agreed Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., who joined Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., in writing to Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger April 27 and charging the new rule "has cast doubt on the fairness of the Pentagon's treatment of homosexuality."

Schroeder, head of the House civil service subcommittee, urged Weinberger to supplement the regulation with a statement "that consensual, non-commercial homosexual activity between adults is not 'sexual misconduct,'" according to Andrew Feinstein, the subcommittee's staff director.

"There are few people who could not be disqualified (for security clearances) based on those rules," Feinstein said, warning that the regulation could allow the Pentagon to "send out people looking in people's bedrooms."

The new rule, which went into effect in January and was published without fanfare in the Federal Register April 8, is an expanded and more detailed version of a regulation that went into effect in December 1979.

It sets forth five broad categories of "acts of sexual misconduct or perversion indicative of moral turpitude, poor judgment or lack of regard for the laws of society" under which an individual can be disqualified for clearance to classified information. There are 10 sub-categories.

Conduct that could disqualify an individual includes sex with a minor, child molestation, incest, harassment, prostitution, bestiality or self-mutilation.

It also covers "adultery that is recent, frequent and likely to continue," transsexualism, transvestism, exhibitionism, voyeurism, spouse-swapping, sodomy or group sex orgies.

The result is this anthology, in which 29 contributors, through stories, essays, verse and artwork, have made heard the voice of a too-often silent minority.

THE MEN WITH THE PINK TRIANGLE, by Heinz Heger, $6.00. Thousands of gays were thrown into Nazi concentration camps for the crime of homosexuality. Heinz Heger is the only one ever to have told his story. Here is a chilling recollection of one of the most frightening chapters of our gay past.

WORLDS APART, edited by Camilla Decarnin, Eric Garber and Lyn Paleo, $8.00. These collected science fiction stories present a wide array of imaginative characters, from a black lesbian vampire to a gay psychodroid. Here is adventure, romance, and excitement — and perhaps some genuine alternatives for our future.

Here's Troy Perry, Gospelslinger

By Steve Warren
Special to the Montrose Voice

Troy Perry was a gay activist before the Stonewall rebellion and, God willing, he'll still be one when the AIDS crisis has passed. By that time his power base may have shifted from the spiritual to the political arena.

"I know anytime I wanted to translate 'my following' into a political base, I could," he says in response to a like worded question. "The time has not been right. I do a lot of prayer, and I have to wait until the right moment. But if when that time comes, and it will, I'll hit it hard on. . . ."

"I happen to be a registered Democrat, but I've learned over the years I have friends in both parties," Perry says, explaining why he avoids partisan politics as much as possible.

The Rev. Elder Dr. Troy D. Perry, to use his earned, elective and honorary titles, founded the Universal Fellowship of Metropolitan Community Churches (UFMCC) in his Huntington Park, Calif., living room on October 6, 1968. "I didn't view it as a political act at the time," he laughs, "but everybody else does."

"I was just a preacher who had been called to the ministry, and even when I took out my ad (in The Advocate for the first service) it was a political act because I gave my home address. . . . My roommate, Willie Smith, just went off the deep end. He said, 'How crazy can you be? You mean you've taken out an ad in a gay newspaper and gave our home address? . . . The police are gonna come in and raid it right off the bat.'"

"But I did it out of ignorance. I didn't know that you couldn't do things like that. I was starting a church and I was thinking like a preacher, not even a gay preacher, but just a preacher and my thinking was the way you gotta do it is to let people know where you're at. . . ."

The police weren't among the 13 at that first service, but they showed up some time later when the church had outgrown Perry's living room and was worshipping at the Huntington Park Women's Club.

"One day the LAPD showed up out of their jurisdiction," he recalls; "two police officers in plainclothes. They came in and immediately went to the bathroom, the toilet, to hang around. I asked the biggest, burliest usher there to go throw them out and to tell them to either come in for service or get out of the building, I didn't care which, but to get out of the toilet."

"... They sheepishly got out of the toilet and left."

Backing down from confrontations isn't part of Perry's modus operandi, although starting confrontations in a just cause is. No course in modern gay history is complete without his life story, as detailed in his 1972 autobiography "The Lord Is My Shepherd and He Knows I'm Gay." He was born in Tallahassee, Fla., in 1940, and became a Pentecostal preacher when he was 13. He married at 18 and fathered two sons, trying to suppress the homosexuality he had been aware of from the age of five, when "Tarzan turned me on."

At 23 Perry came out fully, giving up family and career in the process. He had a difficult time, including a suicide attempt, between finding out who he was and what he was to do about it.

Perry cites two incidents as central to his political awakening. The first was in 1968.

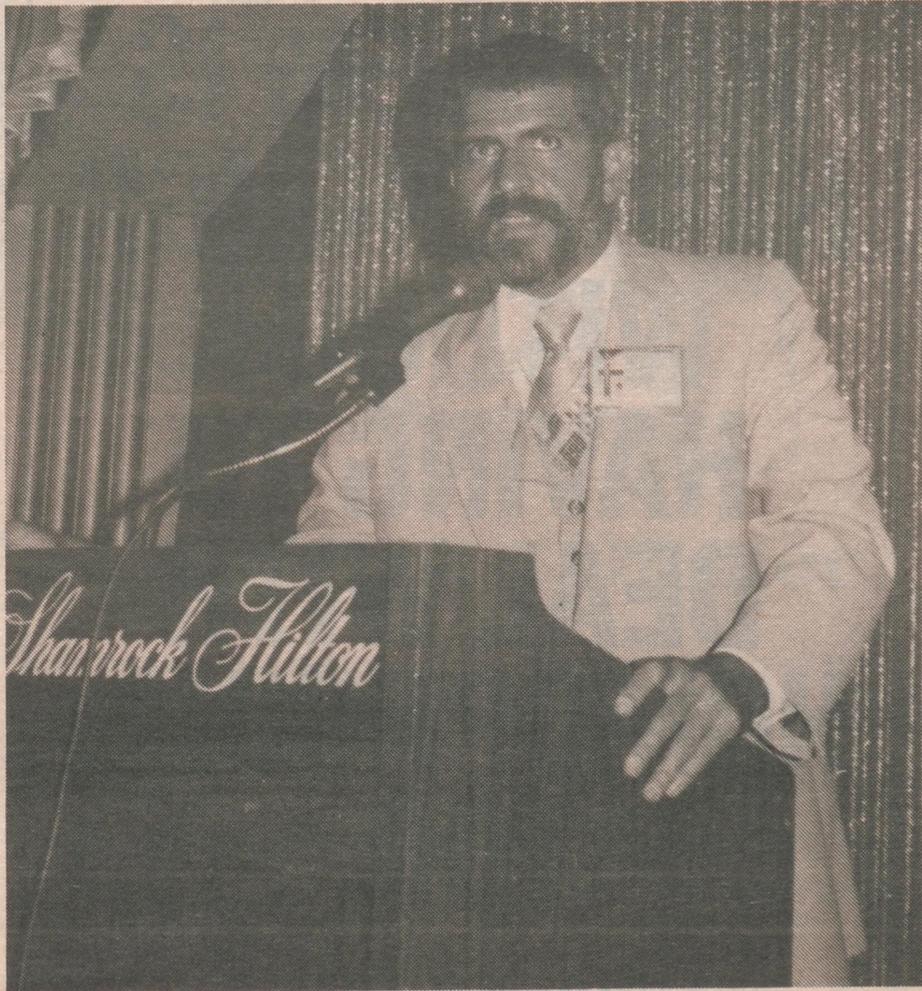

"My gay activism started when a friend of mine was arrested in a gay bar in Los Angeles," he relates. "That sparked the birth of MCC, plus it sparked my attention to the way police treated gay people. . . ."

"When my date and a friend of ours were arrested for 'lewd and lascivious conduct,' which no longer is even a law in the state of California . . . about ten of us loaded up into cars, led by Lee Glaze, ignorance rolled away from the tomb of truth, and let truth spring forth. . . ."

A few weeks later he led pickets for three days outside the Los Angeles office of States Steamship Lines to protest their employment policy after they had fired a man in San Francisco for being gay.

the owner of the old Patch, which was a gay bar in Los Angeles. He got up in his bar after the arrests were made and asked if there was a florist there. He bought all the flowers, loaded down these cars with them. . . ."

"It was crazy back then, it wasn't politically correct, but it worked. We swept into the police station . . . and Lee said, 'We're here to get our sisters out of jail.' The police officer asked, 'Who are your sisters?' and he said, 'Tony Valdez and Bill Hastings.'"

"They were scared. It was the first time the police did not know how to react. They were used to faggots. They were used to queers. They were used to pansies. . . ."

"That started me, and one thing led to another and continues on. It hasn't stopped yet."

Another incident the following year pushed more of Perry's buttons.

"We had a gay brother who was beaten to death in our city and I went to the inquest, and that really was . . . where I consciously became politically active. . . . (He had been) beaten to death by the police in an old hotel in downtown Los Angeles where males used to go for impersonal sex. . . . Supposedly he fell out onto the freeway being taken to the hospital. The police claim he kicked the door open and fell onto the Hollywood Freeway."

The verdict: justifiable homicide.

"I've never gotten over that, listening to that story," Perry says, visibly moved as he repeats it. "And I thought, God, there but for the grace of God goes Troy Perry. . . . That was on Good Friday, 1969. That's when I got up in my church and said, 'We have to see the stone of

In protesting the "Gestapo" tactics of the LAPD, Perry eventually led a demonstration outside the home of Chief Ed Davis, now a state senator whose attitude toward gays has changed. "And I do support Ed Davis," Perry says now, "of all the people running from his district, one of our most conservative districts. Ed has proved to be a friend as time has gone by."

Perry also crusaded for gay rights legislation in California and Los Angeles. To this end he undertook his first public fast, which lasted ten days, in June 1970.

"I would fast in front of the Federal Building. I discovered one day that that was federal ground and LAPD couldn't come on and arrest me. It would take a federal marshal to arrest me, and we learned how to deal with them you just call them up and tell them you're gonna do it. You never ask permission, I learned a long time ago."

"It was never fun to fast," he adds. "It hurts a lot, but it reminds you why you're there. . . . Don't ever let anybody tell you your stomach quits hurting after three days. That's a lie of the devil."

Perry's longest fast was 16 days, to raise money to fight California's notorious "Briggs Initiative" in 1978.

"I announced that I wouldn't eat again until I raised $100,000 seed money. . . . The lord had spoke to my heart and told me this was a real moral issue, not the way John Briggs and Anita Bryant were trying to portray it, and let me know what I was to do. . . . On the sixteenth day of my fast of just drinking water for 16 days we went over the top with $104,000."

This technique may sound dangerously close to Oral Roberts' "God will call me home" extortion, but Perry points out the significant difference: "I said this is a matter of morals. I said, people have to know how serious we are, we who are part of the gay and lesbian community. I refuse to eat again. If it means my death, it means my death."

"That's not the way Oral did it. Mr. Roberts said God told him 'I'll kill you if you don't raise this money.' God didn't tell me that. . . . This was my offering. . . . I knew I would receive the money. I didn't know how long it would take, but I knew with all my heart that the gay community and our heterosexual friends would respond."

Abigail van Buren and Jane Fonda were among the "Friends of Troy Perry" who took out full page ads encouraging donations.

In 1977 Perry was one of 14 lesbians and gay men invited to the White House to discuss our political agenda with Jimmy Carter's assistant, Midge Costanza.

Seeing him on television that night resolved the last doubts any of his Southern family had about his homosexuality, he says, and when he visited four months later, "They threw barbecues and fish fries all over the woods. It was like, if I was good enough for the President I must be all right."

It's hard to name a significant event in the gay movement Perry has not been involved in. Phil Donahue has had him on eight times to discuss various issues. "He and I know each other quite well," Perry says.

"He and his wife, Marlo Thomas, are recipients of our Human Rights award from MCC this year, and will be in Miami to receive the award on Saturday, July 25. We feel like they have done more for gay rights in the media than any person. They've never backed away from the issue and have always been extremely positive."

That award will come during UFMCC's biennial general conference, which will be held July 19-26 in the Deauville, the Miami Beach hotel where Perry led a "lay in" during the 1972 Democratic convention to get an audience with the just nominated George McGovern. He learned later that McGovern had been on the way to speak to him when he left.

Besides that conference, which he expects to be "low keyed," Perry is involved in organizing the October 11 National March on Washington.

"I feel like we've got to get to Washington, D.C.," he says. "It is time for us to have a much more visible march than we had the last time. I'm the one who penned the phrase, 'For love and for life, we're not going back.' I based it on a scripture, 'Our God who has given us life, also gives us liberty.'"

"The day the Supreme Court ruled that we didn't have any rights, that the states could do anything they wanted to against us, I was never so irritated in my life. That's when I said, 'It is now time for another massive demonstration, America.' And I found there were other people feeling just the way I was."

Falwell Says PTL Needs $7 million to Keep Doors Open

FORT MILL, S.C. (UPI)—The Rev. Jerry Falwell said Thursday the scandal-ridden PTL must raise $7 million by May 31 and more than $20 million during the next three months or it will be forced to "close the doors."

Despite having promised earlier not to "beg for money on the air," Falwell made a plea for donations during the ministry's daily "PTL Club" television show.

"We must raise at least $7 million between today and May 31 or this entire ministry will be in dire jeopardy," Falwell told viewers. "We need the most sacrificial gift you can send."

"If you don't want this ministry to continue, just ignore me," Falwell said. "If you want this ministry's doors to stay open, you write to me today."

Falwell said the ministry owes the television stations that carry its program more than $8 million and must make significant payments on the debt by May 31 or the programs "will cease to be on the air." "If we are going to honor our creditors we need to raise at least that by May 31st and probably 20 to 25 million over the next 90 days," he said. "We have no alternative. We either do that or shut down."

Falwell's plea comes six weeks after another TV evangelist, Oral Roberts, reached a $7 million fund-raising goal. Roberts had told his faithful that he would die by April 1 unless the goal was met.

Falwell said the ministry owes its primary creditor, church-builder Roe Messner, more than $10 million. Messner ordered his workers to stop work and board up the unfinished portion of the $27 million Heritage Grand Towers hotel at the PTL's Heritage USA resort Wednesday.

Falwell said the ministry has lost between $1 million and $4 million a month in operating costs during the past year. He did not specify how much of that had occurred since the March resignation of founder Jim Bakker in a sex scandal that touched off the "holy wars."

"It is taking everything we can do to make payroll tomorrow," Falwell said. "We will make it but just barely. From that point on, we have nothing. We can make it somehow but we're on very thin ice."

Falwell told viewers that the "exorbitant salaries and bonuses" paid to PTL executives during Bakker's reign had been discontinued. Falwell said he would provide details of a financial audit to every contributor within the next few weeks.

"We have put in a lot of checks and balances to ensure that all monies are applied just as donors intended them to be," Falwell said.

Falwell took over the ministry March 19 at the request of Bakker, who resigned after admitting that hush money had been paid to a former church secretary following their 1980 sexual encounter.

A group of PTL contributors have called for Falwell, a fundamental Baptist, to step down from the predominantly charismatic ministry. But Falwell said, "I'm in for the duration now."

"I've come to the conclusion that God himself put me here," Falwell said. "I have a job to do and God will hold me responsible for doing it or not doing it."

AZT Is Disappointing Many

DALLAS (UPI)—The AIDS fighting drug AZT has proved disappointing among patients in Dallas and San Francisco despite successful clinical trials, researchers report.

Thirteen of the 37 patients treated with the drug at the Parkland Hospital AIDS clinic have died, clinic director Dr. Daniel Barbaro told The Dallas Morning News in a story published Wednesday.

However, Barbaro conceded that 11 of the 13 patients who died had been receiving AZT, or azidothymidine, less than four weeks before their deaths.

Last September, Burroughs Wellcome Co., the drug manufacturer, said only one patient in 144 had died during a seven-month clinical trial, compared to 16 deaths among 137 patients receiving a placebo.

Burroughs said patients must take the drug from four to six weeks for it to be effective.

"The results are statistically significant after the first four weeks, and less noticeable early on," said Kathy Bartlett, Burroughs spokeswoman.

The results in Dallas suggest that the drug will be most effective among patients who begin taking it soon after the onset of the acquired immune deficiency syndrome, Barbaro said.

Barbaro told the Dallas Morning News that in the early clinical trials of AZT, no more than 120 days had elapsed from the onset of the first opportunistic infection—pneumocystis carinii pneumonia—until the drug was administered.

"I think what we have realized is that AZT is going to be very effective in a subset of patients who basically are early diagnosed and relatively well," Barbaro said. "It is not going to be able to reverse the process that has gone on a long time."

Researchers at San Francisco General Hospital reported only one death among 70 patients who began taking the drug since November. But 32 of those patients have had to discontinue AZT treatment because of side effects or new infections, hospital officials said.

AZT suppresses red blood-cell production. The side effects include fever, nausea and severe headaches.

AIDS and Memory

By United Press International

Memory loss may be among the first manifestations of the virus that causes AIDS, researchers from Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer City reported recently.

Physicians treating AIDS patients have long recognized that many AIDS patients suffer from progressive dementia and personality changes.

In reviewing the medical records of 112 patients with AIDS, the researchers found 29 cases in which dementia—of which memory loss is a primary feature—developed before a formal diagnosis of AIDS was made.

About 25 percent of AIDS patients suffer from memory impairment, called AIDS dementia complex, according to the physicians. They said images of the brain show people with the complex suffer atrophy in certain parts of the brain.

Sloan-Kettering researchers theorize the neurological system may harbor the HIV virus that causes the disease soon after it is introduced into the body.

Leo Should Try to Find the Right Balance

By Mark Orion

Your Horoscope from the Voice

For Friday evening, May 15, through Friday morning, May 22, 1987.

ARIES—You may not always be the most practical sort, but practicalities are what concern you right now. Taking care of business can clear the air for a real pleasure trip, so dig in and dig yourself out. There's a proposition coming when you're done.

TAURUS—The traditional and predictable appeal to you. You feel a need to hold on to what is. No rocking of the boat, please, just a nice even course over smooth waters. Put on your preppy duds, grab a drink, and settle down. Smooth can be nice.

GEMINI—Make a wish and take a chance. This is a time for having fun and being frivolous. The lighter side of life is looking up and smiling. Gemini in the summer? Balance for the balance. Save your seriousness for later.

CANCER—You'll know where you're going, and in fact, half of your fun will be in planning where that is. It may be a weekend in the country or a month in the Greek Isles, but you'll be enjoying a change of scene. Make your choices and go.

LEO—Loving yourself is fine but not at the expense of maintaining good relationships with those you love. Be careful you don't overdo it. Be good to your mind and body, but let someone else do the same for you.

VIRGO—Good Luck. Plain and simple. You're in for a big reward. It's not something you haven't earned or deserved, but it does feel like something falling in out of the blue. You'll know just what to do with it when it arrives.

LIBRA—You've got the strength of Taurus, and the sexiness of Scorpio to add to your mellow Libra ways. That makes you quite a person. Someone near you may have a hard time recognizing who you are. Let them know just how versatile you can be.

SCORPIO—When things are going well for you, and you're doing, looking and feeling your best, you may find resentment from a quarter you least expect. Not everyone has it as good as you, and this can cause problems. Smiles and kind words help. Don't let them get to you.

SAGITTARIUS—Join in. Whether it's business or fun, your ability and enjoyment in working and playing with others is at a high point. As usual, you'll get back as much as you put in, so put in all you've got and get back something more than yourself.

CAPRICORN—You feel as if you're walking against the current of life. People keep surprising you. Situations arise that you're totally unfamiliar with. In your disorientation you may tend to overdo and lose sight of what's happening. Go slow.

AQUARIUS—Put on the brakes, and watch out for a bully. Slow down, and let someone know if they're abusing you or misusing you. Don't get stuck in a bad habit just because you're in a hurry. Being used could be the basis for some of your problems.

PISCES—Your sensitivity will take a playful and even humorous turn. Whether you go as far as practical jokes, or simply laugh at the release you're feeling, fun feels like a lot of fun. Jolly good show, you jolly good fellow!

Guess Who's Coming to Dinner

The Innocent Bystander
By Arthur Hoppe

Call me a bleeding-heart liberal if you will, but I think we all should do what we can to break down the social barriers that divide us. That's why I invited Hepple Gibbs over to the house for dinner. Hepple isn't like one of us. He smokes.

Naturally, I did my best to make him feel welcome.

"Come right in, Hepple, and make yourself at home," I said. "And speaking of feeling at home, look what I did: I went out and bought you an ashtray."

"Thanks," said Hepple. "Am I the first to arrive?"

"Well, I didn't want you to be embarrassed by those who might be insensitive to your—ah—needs, so I thought we might just dine en famille as it were," I said. "And I want you to have a cigaret anytime you feel you have to have one, right here in the house."

"Thanks," said Hepple.

"Except when we're eating, of course," I said. "Because I have absolutely nothing against smokers. Some of my best friends are smokers."

"But you wouldn't want your daughter to marry one?" suggested Hepple.

"The reason Malphasias isn't here," I said, "is that she was suddenly called to go visit her grandmother—although she is at a very impressionable age, and you know how easily young girls are influenced."

"And you thought I might hook her?"

"No, no, of course not. Not intentionally. It's just that it's such a terrible thing to be a smoker. I mean who wants to be scorned by society, shunned by friends, a burden on your loved ones and your community and the victim of every passing scourge? Tell me, Hepple, have you tried to quit?"

"No," said Hepple.

I was surprised. "But don't you realize you're shortening your life?" I said.

"Yes," he said, "and 'tis a far, far better thing that I do than I have ever done."

"You and Sydney Carton," I said.

Hepple put a hand over his heart and a noble expression on his face. "Instead of being a derided and outcast minority," he said, "we smokers should be hailed by one and by all as a small band of selfless heroes who are sacrificing ourselves for the prosperity and well-being of the rest of you."

"By polluting the very air we breathe with the noxious fumes from your lungs?" I asked politely.

"No, by shuffling off this mortal coil just as we reach the end of our productive years," he said. "Think of the inheritance I'll leave to the next generation."

"Like what?"

"Like all the social security payments I made over the years," he said. "It's not we smokers who'll bankrupt the system."

"Maybe so," I said, "But..."

"It's the healthy old people who are mucking things up by selfishly insisting on going on living at exorbitant costs to their families and their government," he said, his voice rising. "You won't catch us honest smokers bleeding the country dry by living off the backs of the young."

"Now, wait a minute," I said.

"You won't see us burning up their precious fossil fuels as we clog up their highways in our motor homes. You won't find us loitering in their way in the shopping malls or holding up the express line in the supermarket while we fumble for our change. We'll be gone."

"I suppose you want a medal, Hepple," I said.

"Speaking as a smoker," Hepple said, "my only regret is that I have but one life to give for my country."

Well, that's the last time I have a smoker to dinner. They're getting uppity. Besides, if Malphasias heard Hepple's diatribe, I know what I'd get for my birthday: a carton of Camels.

What is Gay/Lesbian Pride?

Commentary by Ray Hill

We have never fully defined the term "gay and lesbian pride." Those of us who are proud can give a personal definition. Those of us working on pride and self worth can identify a goal out there somewhere that we hope to reach. But other than an amorphous "feeling good about oneself and others in the community," the idea of gay and lesbian pride lacks a clear understanding.

I propose here to venture one. Since the whole idea of pride in ourselves and our community has developed in my adult life time, I get the best understanding by comparing who we were with who we are.

Twenty years ago we were dishonest. We lied about who we were to one another. We used fictitious names or first names only for fear someone would trace us down and embarrass us at home or work with the truth. We pretended at home and work to be what we were not. It is difficult to be proud stuck in a web of lies and fear. Most of us have worked through all that and can be proud of our honesty.

We were distrustful. Since we know we were telling lies we correctly assumed those around us were too. Gay men and lesbians could not be trusted, everyone knew that. The men were cowardly and weak and the women unfeeling and self serving. Everyone had an agenda hidden from those around them.

One trusted preachers, cops, and politicians, but not queers. It is not strange at all that as we became more honest we became more trusting and those who hate us (preachers, cops and politicians) became less trustworthy.

We were irresponsible. We did not complicate our lives with committed caring relationships because it was easier to walk away from gay or lesbian friends than get involved in their tortured lives. Now we make the families we wished we had all our lives out of the men and women around us. Surrogate families grew out of the realization that many of those other people were never going to understand and it was really easier to make a family out of those who do.

We were lonely because we lived one-to-a-box lives trusting no one, fearing everyone, feeling ourselves unworthy, seeking release in abusive sex, hiding pain with drugs and alcohol, pretending wealth with a plastic fashion facade that could not stand close scrutiny. We worked too hard to be noticed but avoided being too exposed to the inquiring eyes of others.

If you have made it through those contradictions you have something to be really proud of.

AIDS or our response to it exemplifies the real justification of our pride. While government, the health care industry, and society as a whole are being grossly negligent on the issues of caring for the sick and dying, educating the public of the dangers, addressing the politics, and healing the pain of grief and loss, gay men and lesbians have met the challenge head on.

Surrogate families have developed around those the rest of the world fear. Informal support systems developed where welfare agencies failed. Pamphlets were printed with donated funds and passed out by volunteers. Questions like, "Do you know how to protect yourself?" are asked of near or perfect strangers. Pop quizzes on risk reduction happen nightly in bars, bathhouses, and on street corners. Consumer information on condoms is traded in casual conversation.

All this maturity, caring and responsibility did not occur in a vacuum. Nor has our progress overcoming the sexism, racism and other prejudice found in the rest of society. Granted a few of us are retarded in our attitudes of a sexist and racist nature but the advance of pride and self worth has a curative effect on those things as well.

We have good reason to be proud. And the 1987 Gay and Lesbian Pride Week celebrations offer ample opportunity to display our pride.

Ray Hill is a community activist and co-chairs the 1987 Gay and Lesbian Pride Week planning committee.

Parks Director Gets Probation

DALLAS (UPI)—Former City Parks Director Jack Robinson, convicted of indecent exposure last month, was sentenced Monday to six months probation and ordered to undergo psychological counseling.

County Criminal Court Judge Randall Isenberg also ordered Robinson, 56, to pay a fine of $100 to the local Crime Stoppers program. Robinson said he will appeal the conviction.

Robinson was found guilty of the misdemeanor charge April 28 after a 33-year-old man testified that he and Robinson had a sexual encounter in a Dallas park restroom moments before a police officer discovered them Feb. 8.

Robinson had denied being in the park and showed no emotion when Isenberg returned the guilty verdict.

Two days after Isenberg found him guilty on the misdemeanor charge, Robinson resigned from the $85,000-a-year job as head of the city park system.

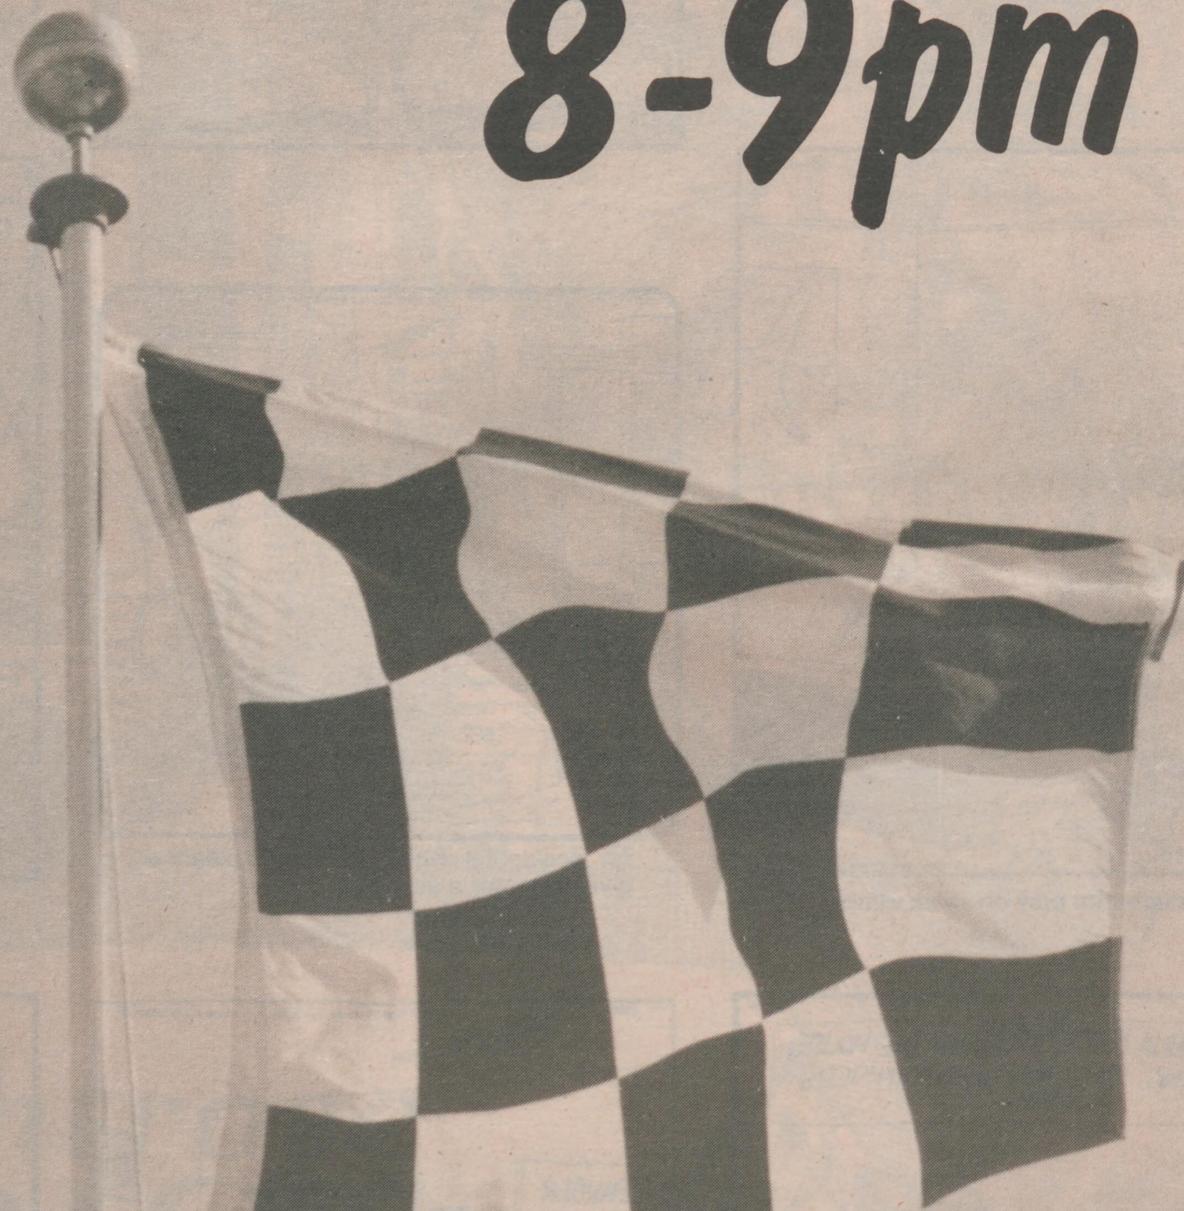

He could have been sentenced to a maximum of 180 days in jail and a fine of up to $1,000 on the misdemeanor conviction.

The officer who filed the charges said the two men he found in a restroom at North Lake Park with their trousers down fled before they could be arrested.

Robinson, who was later identified from a police photo lineup, also was charged with evading arrest. He has not yet been tried on that charge.

No Need to Chase 'Hot Pursuit'

Houston Screens by Bill O'Rourke
Montrose Voice

Hot Pursuit is a cute little movie. It really hurts to say some of the truth about it. It's like kicking a dog. But the mutt isn't housebroken. You can leave him alone most of the time, but ...

It's the screenplay.

First, we meet a character whose name ought to be Exposition. He only stays around long enough to tell us what's been happening. He does make one more appearance. That's just so he can tell an important piece of the plot to a character who might not have heard about it otherwise. This part could be played by an apostrophe.

Then there are a few memorable lines like a father telling his daughter, "You started out as a gleam in your mother's margarita."

There's a sweet young actress named Wendy Gazelle. No, we cannot blame the screenwriters for that name. This is her second movie.

In one of the best scenes, she is caught sea, the jailbreak, the darkly beautiful whore. It's wonderful, that way.

But all of these scenes are modernized and pared down to the bare essentials. In an odd way, the show feels a lot like MacGuyver.

That's a compliment. MacGuyver is one of my favorite TV shows. And that's where I'd suggest you see this show, too. There or at the "dollar movies." I don't think I'd pay full price for it.

Cyndi Lauper is in the southern Andes of Ecuador, acting in her very first motion picture. The "romantic action comedy with psychic overtones," co-starring Jeff Goldblum and Peter Falk, is also the first time a major American film company has shot on location in that country.

Arnold Schwarzenegger stars as Major "Dutch" Schaefer and Carl Weathers co-stars as CIA operative Dilion in "Predator" in the shipboard bedroom of the young villain. She is at a loss. How can she repulse his advances without explaining her presence. Just then she hears her parents voices. She exclaims that she hadn't realized the walls were so thin. She's sorry, but she is really very, very loud in the throes of passion. With that, she slips out the door. Novel excuse, and a good one, too.

The plot is one long chase with several near misses. John Cusack, the warm puppy in charge, is a college student. He's supposed to go on a Caribbean vacation with Wendy and her mostly obnoxious family. However, a failed test means he'll have to say at school to take a makeup exam. Just after the nick of time the kindly old teacher relents. The chase is on.

John misses them at the airport. But he takes a later flight. He runs into many happy misadventures and by the time he catches up with them, they have been taken hostage by a blood thirsty gang of ship stealers led by the menacing Jerry Stiller. Can Stiller be menacing?

By then, John has Robert Loggia, the salty old lick of the sea, on his side. For the first third of the movie, the pace might remind you of Crocodile Dundee. But with Loggia, a new spirit arrives on the scene—pirates.

Yes, all of the classic movie elements of the pirate good-guy show are there—drunkenness on board, a scary storm at

We're expecting not one, but two Arnold Schwarzenegger movies this summer. In June, 20th Century Fox presents Predator, with Oak up against a hostile extraterrestrial in the jungles of South America. Then, in late summer, Tri Star gives us The Running Man, in which he is an ex-cop falsely accused of murder condemned to a life-or-death sporting chance on a TV game show.

□ Incoming Attractions

He's not the karate kid, but the American Ninja got his own sequel, anyway. Tongo's The Exile of Gardel arrives as does Heaven. That's the movie Diane Keaton made by interviewing all sorts of people she just pulled in off the street about what they expect the afterlife to be like.

A gateway to the other place is accidentally opened by three young teenagers messing with a rock album in The Gate.

Two American song and dance men get into trouble in the desert and involved with a beautiful woman. Dorothy Lamour is in town again! Well, she is, in Creepshow rather than a sarong. So, Dustin Hoffman and Warren Beatty meet Isabelle Adjani instead, on the Road to ... I mean, in Ishtar. Somehow, I hope Warren doesn't try to sing.

Comedy Workshop Jolts with Laughter

Comedy Workshop's Fritz Dickmann and Jenny Noble

Houston Live by Bill O'Rourke Montrose Voice

The Comedy Workshop has a real winner in "A Falwell to Arms or Jerry-Rigging Your Salvation." It's so funny that people driving by may think the building has hiccups.

Guest director Clive Carlin has kept the first act bouncing along so fast that I felt like I'd been drinking Jolt Cola. It might remind some of us of the old Laugh In show. One gets the feeling that if you blinked your ears you might miss a joke.

The second act was still very funny, but moved a little slowly. They depended more on music in this act. Some of the lyrics are very witty and some, about half, of the songs worked all the way through. But there are too many of them, and face it, this comic troupe doesn't sing as well as Radio Music Theater. It's like it was when the C.W. first introduced their video segments. The show has become just a little bit out of balance. The songs need to be toned down. But if any group in town has the quick inventiveness to come up with some new twist with which to replace them, it's this one.

They are the present kings of the one-liners and black-out sketches. Warm-hearted confusion reigns supreme when they visit singles night at the grocery store. Greed is lampooned in a visit to the PTL's "amusement" park. Power mad TV evangelists compete as they should be seen, invisibly offstage, for the pulpit of the PTL in a video sports tourney that gets out of hand. And the teenagers find a new drug to turn on with—Jolt Cola!

Nor are the C.W. regulars—Dickmann, Fagan, Noble, Menzel and Menzel—afraid to see the serious down side of important topics. Their Houston proud homeless trio takes note of an imposing new edifice just off their traditional turf. Right alongside the bayou, with its inviting bridges under which they have spent many a happy night, is the new Wortham Theater.

What can I say? Jump for joy. Hop on the bandwagon. Po-go to this peppy little cabaret bar soon for jolt of laughter.

Don't forget. Tuesday and Wednesday are their free form nights. Anything and everything is likely to happen, except what you saw there last night.

Notes

The Wortham Theater has long been needed. It's wonderful that we now have it. I'm very thankful for it, if only for the fact that Houston Ballet's productions will now run for two weekends instead of only one. Selfishly speaking, I will at last have an adequate excuse to review one of my favorite art forms.

At the same time, major funds, both corporate and private, which, under past circumstances, would have been donated to the area's smaller theaters have been donated to help build the Wortham.

We have already seen some of the results. Actors at Main Street Theater have taken a 20 percent drop in their pay. The cast of Hair at Stages donated their services to help keep that theater afloat.

This week, Chocolate Bayou Theater Company had to cancel this year's Preston Jones New Play Symposium. Playwrights from all over the country sent in well over 200 scripts hoping their's would be one of the three given the chance to develop in that month-long process. However, the symposium costs about $20,000 to produce and historically has brought in little but respect. It was probably the main reason they are now only one of two theaters in the city and five in the state selected to be members of the Theater Communications Group, the national organization of professional non-profit theaters. They are going ahead with plans for reviving it in 1988.

So, if you want local theater in the future, please make a special effort to go to at least one show in the next few weeks.

And remember, all of our theaters are non-profit and tax deductible. However, that shouldn't mean that can't make enough to keep the curtain up.

Julie Devane of the Alley Theatre tells me that some of the dresses in their garage sale are simply flawless. There will also be some real talk provoking objet d'art at the sale next Friday and Saturday. (May 22, 10:30 a.m.-2:30 p.m. and May 23, 9:00 a.m.-4:00 p.m.)

Houstonian playwright Eddie Cope and his collaborator, Buster Clearly of Temple, have been notified that their play Welcome to Nashville will receive a staged reading from the Playwrights' Center in San Francisco later next month.

Final Resting Place for Kate Smith

People by William C. Trott
 United Press International

Kate Smith left $25,000 to St. Agnes Church in Lake Placid, N.Y., when she died last June at age 79 and now the church is going to relax its policy against mausoleums just for her. The church committee voted to allow the erection of a $40,000 rose-colored mausoleum, which will include a stained-glass window.

"We made a concession because of her," said the Rev. Robert Lamitie.

The executor of Smith's will had said there might be court action if Smith's burial wishes were not carried out.

Smith's body now is in a receiving vault at the church.

Smith, who had a home in Lake Placid and spent many summers at the resort village in the Adirondacks, also left $5,000 to Lake Placid Memorial Hospital.

POSTHUMOUS ACQUITTAL: Lenny Bruce has again been cleared of obscenity charges.

The San Francisco Bar Association recreated the late comedian's trial for using an unprintable 10-letter obscenity in his nightclub act.

Comedian Will Durst, playing Bruce, told the mock trial that his act involved issues of bigotry, homosexuality and hypocrisy—such as "the hypocrisy of a president who forgot."

Police Inspector Frank Falzon testified Bruce's act aroused prurient interests and had no redeeming social value. But on cross-examination, Falzon admitted he sometimes hears the 10-letter word in the police station but could not recall if he ever used it himself.

“If you live, you’re going to get old.”

How many of us ever consider what that means? And how many older lesbians are showing us the way?

Twenty-four older women share their lives in Long Time Passing, this long-awaited look at lesbians and aging. They give us first-hand accounts of lesbian life in decades past, of the struggle to build a community, of surviving the loss of a lover, of growing older, and of facing their own mortality.

 — Womanews

“One teenager in ten”: according to Kinsey, that’s the proportion of gays to straights in this country. One Teenager in Ten: twenty-eight young men and women from all over the United States and Canada, from fifteen to twenty-four years of age, speak out about their coming-out experiences — about what it is to be young and gay in our society today.

SAFE SEX?

For your mental health, have sex. For your physical health, make it safe sex. Safe sex is where there are no bodily fluids exchanged. The virus which leads to an AIDS condition is believed usually transmitted from one person to another from blood or semen. Those who are "receptive" are especially at risk. Do condoms protect? They certainly help. But condoms MUST be used with a water-based lubricant (the new product Lubraseptic is especially recommended).
